BOARD OF MEDICAL EXAMINERS.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-TREASURER.

December 31, 1915.

To His Excellency, HIRAM W. JOHNSON,
Governor, State of California,
Sacramento, California.

YOUR EXCELLENCY: In accordance with section 2 of the Medical Practice Act, the Secretary of the Board of Medical Examiners of the State of California herewith submits a report covering the activities of this branch of the state government for the year ending December 31, 1915, presented in more detail in the copy of the minutes of each meeting now on file in the office of the state executive.

The Medical Practice Act has been amended in many respects since the prior report, notably section 13, wherein the jurisdiction of this body has been broadened in reciprocity matters by specifically empowering the Board of Medical Examiners of the State of California to enter into reciprocal relations, through contract, with other states. The execution of such a contract will grant the licentiate of this State recognition in other states, upon presentation of acceptable credentials, showing equal standards in education and licensure. Section 13 has been further amended, permitting California to issue a reciprocity certificate to practitioners of systems of the healing art other than of medicine and surgery, specifying that such reciprocity certificate shall be of similar class and limitation as was issued under similar conditions in California on the same date. Further amendment to this section provides that applicants licensed in other states in certain years specified in the statute, may have the option of either an oral or written examination, an alternative which did not maintain prior to the present year. In a word, California has established a more progressive and rational standard in the consideration and acceptance of licentiates of other states who may be desirous of obtaining a certificate and a residence in California.

It is further to be noted that since the last report presented to your Excellency, the California Board, under the amendments passed by the last legislature and approved by the Governor, has provided an opportunity whereby a drugless practitioner who had practiced a drugless system in California for a specified period might obtain a certificate in this State. Section 11 of the amendments referred to provides that an applicant who prior to January 1, 1916, could make satisfactory proof of three or six years practice, and a 1,000-hour course of instruction in a legally chartered school, and who possessed a good moral character, was eligible for a certificate, either after a written examination or upon proof of competency.

Two hundred and seventy-two drugless practitioners from various sections of California filed applications under this section.

The board has endeavored to deal most judiciously, leniently and generously in determining the qualifications of these drugless applicants, having in mind that the final test of competency was the safety of the public. In this connection, it is to be deplored that the attitude of the board has been misrepresented and false statements deliberately made to the rank and file of the drugless practitioners by unscrupulous individuals, with the evident sole purpose of discrediting the board on the one hand and depleting the finances of the individual applicant on the other hand. An officer of a certain drugless school obtained $17.50 from a great majority of the applicants, approximating, in the aggregate, $3,500. Such applicants were given to understand that no questions were to be asked as to the disposition of the money, the inference being that certificates were to be obtained by illegitimate means.

Unfounded statements were disseminated by this same officer to the effect that an agreement with representatives of the Board of Medical Examiners had been reached whereby the requirements of the law in reference to years of practice, were to be "abrogated" and that a special commission of drugless practitioners named by himself, would be appointed to pass upon the qualifications of the applicants. Needless to say, the commissioners named were either graduates of, or connected with, the particular school in question. By the evolution of this scheme it was proposed that the board should issue certificates to a horde of incompetents.

The Board of Medical Examiners strongly resented this campaign of deceit and intrigue, but with a firm determination to do absolute justice to the State as well as to the applicants, determined that less criticism would arise if the test of competency was given by members of the board rather than by an appointed commission.

Claim was made that on account of the inconsistency in theory or practice it would be impossible for a representative of a certain cult of the healing art to examine fairly or to intelligently pass upon the merits of an applicant of a different cult or sect. This contention has proven to be false, for of the 39 applicants afforded a test of competency at the December meeting of the board, 20 passed and 19 failed, and the successful applicants represent almost every possible theory of the healing art, designated as a sect or cult, in this country. We believe that the successful, as well as the rejected, applicants will testify to the fairness of this board in handling this situation.

With these introductory and explanatory statements as a preface, I submit a resumé of the work accomplished by the Board of Medical Examiners of the State of California for the period January 1st to December 31, 1915.

DRUGLESS PRACTITIONERS.

Two hundred and seventy-two applicants, representing every sect or cult practicing a drugless system in California, filed application under section 11, wherein is demanded a showing of 1,000 hours of resident study, good moral character and either three or six years of practice. The larger percentage of the applicants did not show years of practice, nor 1,000 hours of resident study, and up to date their applications have not been supplemented showing a course of instruction.

Many licentiates of the Board of Optometry applied, but the board ruled that the practice of optometry was not a drugless system.

65 applications were denied, either on the grounds as above stated or because the applicant stated he could not show the required hours or practice.

71 applications were deferred pending completion, by showing either hours, practice, or acceptable certificates of licentiates who had known the applicant to have been in practice.

76 applicants finally qualified for the test of competency and at the December meeting 39 appeared; passed, 20, failed, 19.

32 applications were referred to the board for further action.

13 were approved for the 1,000-hour written examination, but only one applicant took the December examination.

10 were eligible only for the 2,000-hour drugless examination.

COLLEGE INVESTIGATION.

The college investigating committee of the board inspected every institution in California professing to qualify applicants for a certificate issued by this board, and by means of its report, appearing in the minutes of the June meeting, in a spirit of friendly constructive criticism, has endeavored to stimulate an interest in such institutions as have been found deficient in equipment or teaching facilities. We believe this constructive work of the board has met with general approbation, notwithstanding sporadic criticism emanating from those who do not grasp that which the board is struggling to attain.

It is evident that the ultimate purpose of the report of the college investigating committee is to urge the maintenance of a higher standard of perfection in professional education, that the individual student may have access to adequately equipped laboratories, well stocked libraries, abundance of clinical material, as well as facilities for bedside instruction, thereby gaining a fund of didactic knowledge and clinical experience—the foundation of sane and successful practice of a profession.

During the year 1915 marked improvement in equipment, teaching facilities, etc., have been made in two of the colleges mentioned in the report, and one, the California Eclectic Medical College, has become extinct.

Hahnemann Medical College of the Pacific has affiliated with the University of California.

The suggestion that some enactment making more difficult the obtaining of a charter to conduct embryonic and sporadic schools professing to teach some system or cult of the healing art, is food for thought for those interested in "preparedness."

MEETINGS.

During the year 1915 the board has held five meetings, one in Sacramento, two in San Francisco and two in Los Angeles.

Reciprocity applications were considered at all of these meetings.

Written examinations were conducted only at the San Francisco and Los Angeles meetings.

Since the enactment of the reciprocity feature there has been a perceptible diminution in the number of applicants for the written examination, which now comprise the following classes: recent graduates, those presenting foreign credentials, and those presenting credentials which are determined to be unsatisfactory for consideration on a reciprocity basis.

During the year 1914 there were 242 applicants for the written examination, tabulated as follows:

Class	Passed	Failed	Total
Physician and surgeon examination.....	116	63	179
Drugless examination	18	45	63

During the year 1915 there were 208 applicants for the written examination, tabulated as follows:

CHIROPODY.

Progressing in the ranks of the few states that have passed an enactment for the regulation of the practice of chiropraxy, the legislature of California (Chapter 105 of the Statutes of 1915) provided conditions for the issuance of a certificate to practitioners of this class who filed prior to ninety days subsequent to the passage of the act, a fee of fifty (50) dollars and an application showing satisfactory evidence of good moral character, of one year of practice in California prior to July 1, 1915, and competency in chiropraxy.

One hundred and ninety-eight (198) individuals availed themselves of registration under this provision and one chiropraxy applicant qualified for certificate by passing the written examination given applicants of this class.

Subsequent to the ninety-day limit prescribed in the act for filing application under the exemption clause, all applicants must show certain educational qualifications as prescribed in the act and must pass a regular written examination for applicants of this class.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE LEGAL DEPARTMENT.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA, January 18, 1916.

CHARLES B. PINKHAM, M.D.,

*Secretary-Treasurer, Board of Medical Examiners,
San Francisco, California.*

DEAR DOCTOR: There is submitted herewith the annual report of the legal department of the Board of Medical Examiners, which in detail gives the disposition of each case submitted to the legal department wherein a defendant is charged with violating the Medical Practice Act. In addition thereto, a great many cases have been called to the attention of the legal department wherein violators have been forced or persuaded to discontinue the practice of a system of the healing art without a license.

Other criminal actions, wherein licensed physicians or those connected with medical institutions, have been handled by this department, particularly advertisers of the cure of venereal diseases. I am glad to report that San Francisco is absolutely free at the present time from such obnoxious advertisements, and that northern California is practically in the same situation. A few cases in Sacramento, Stockton and

San Jose still demand attention, and I believe that before the next year rolls around we will be in a position to report that the whole State has been rid of the advertising specialist.

This department has also caused criminal proceedings to be instituted against practitioners upon charges of obtaining money by false pretenses, grand larceny and extortion, and universally we have been successful.

A number of petitions for revocation of licenses have been filed, and the board in its wisdom has acted on these cases by revoking, suspending, or placing on probation, as to the board's mind seemed just and proper. It is a pleasure to note that in each instance the individual members of the board acted upon its petition in a manner indicating that it was not their purpose to deprive licentiates of their right to live, but to protect the public from "quacks" and "charlatans." I have no doubt, as noted above, that within the next year California will be practically free from the latter class of practitioners and will stand pre-eminently as the one state in the Union for others to follow in a like campaign.

I take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of the kindly courtesy shown to the members of the legal department by the Board of Medical Examiners. Harmony has prevailed; eventually in all considerations any difference of opinion has resulted in better results for the board.

Respectfully,

(Signed) LOUIS H. WARD,
Attorney.

VIOLATIONS OF THE MEDICAL PRACTICE ACT IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

January 1, 1915, to December 31, 1915.

The figures presented herein show the large volume of business disposed of in southern California. The legal department of southern California, in addition to the legal proceedings herein mentioned, has disposed of several proceedings before the Board of Medical Examiners, initiated for the purpose of revoking or suspending the certificates of licentiates.

While the work of the board in southern California has been such as to compel many practitioners, who have heretofore openly violated the law, to exercise greater care to prevent detection, and has compelled some to abandon the field and remove to other parts, yet there remains to be accomplished much work. As is well known, southern California is the home of a great many new lines of thought, which give birth to many new cults and theories. When it is attempted to put these into practice, violations of the law result, and a vigilant and energetic staff must be maintained to insure the public against the incursions of unlicensed and unskilled practitioners.

Respectfully yours,

(Signed) RAY E. NIMMO,
Attorney.

ANNUAL REPORT on the Building and Loan Associations

of the

In accordance with an Act of the Legislature, approved April 5, 1911

REPORT

OF THE

BUREAU OF BUILDING AND LOAN SUPERVISION.

OFFICE OF THE BUILDING AND LOAN COMMISSIONER,
SAN FRANCISCO, August 31, 1915.

To His Excellency, HIRAM W. JOHNSON,
Governor of California,

SIR: In compliance with the provisions of section 5 of the Building and Loan Commission Act, I have the honor to submit the Twenty-second Annual Report of this department for the sixty-sixth fiscal year of this State, ended June 30, 1915.

Since the last annual report one new association has been formed and licensed, and three have retired—one small and unsuccessful one by complete liquidation, and two other small ones have ceased new business and are in process of voluntary liquidation—thereby making the number on the active roll 90, of which the reports of 89 are included in the tabulations of and appendix to this report.

The gross assets of these 89 associations aggregate $30,441,084.05—a gain of $925,321.46 for the year—a very respectable and satisfactory showing during a year of industrial depression and unrest, affected and produced to a greater or less extent by the disturbed conditions existing in Mexico and continental Europe, and more favorable to withdrawals than to the accumulation of individual savings.

The increase in assets, above noted, appears to be divided between those associations heretofore classed as "Locals" and "State," as follows: To the locals, $778,528.03—a gain of $116,254.77 over that of the preceding year—and to the state associations, $146,793.46, or $390,673.91 less than during the preceding year.

The number of members and investors now aggregate 38,748 according to the reports as filed, a falling off of 697 in number, while at the same time the actual investment has increased $981,918.33, with an average investment of $622.75 and average accumulated earnings of $92.57 each.

The borrowers, as reported, have decreased in number by 805, while the loans, including contract sales, have increased in volume $1,222,622.41, with an average of $1,557.71 to each borrower.

The outstanding shares of all classes show an increase of 5,012, while the outstanding investment certificates appear to have decreased 403 in number.

The new loans for building purposes are reported as 1,711—a decrease of 348, and making the aggregate of all such loans since 1893 now appear to be 44,517.

The number of pieces of real estate owned appears to number 5 in excess of last year, but the book value has been decreased $25,554.61. Of the volume of real estate owned $104,436.96 is represented by the office buildings erected by four associations, but only partially occupied by them.

The reserve and undivided profits aggregate $1,283,846.50—a gain of $89,611.24 since the last report. About nine-tenths of the aggregate constitutes the reserve proper, and whenever this does not exceed 5 per cent of the average loans of any association no portion can be used for future dividends but must be held and used to protect the shareholders and investors against losses of any portion of their investment and accrued earnings. In other words, it stands between the members and investors and future losses in the same manner as the capital stock of other classes of corporations.

In order that a comprehensive idea may be formed regarding the business of the associations of this State during the nine years since the San Francisco fire, it is pertinent to present a summary of certain features.

From the report of that year, 1906, it appears that the 106 associations then reporting had assets of \$19,228,938.88. Since that date the number of associations has decreased, but the volume of assets has increased upwards of 58 per cent and the 89 associations reporting for 1915 now show aggregate assets of \$30,441,084.03. The reserve and undivided profits, held for the protection of shareholders and investors has increased from \$661,556.53, or $4\frac{1}{4}$ per cent of the liabilities to shareholders and investors to the sum of \$1,283,846.50, or 4.93 per cent of such liabilities; and in addition thereto 20 associations have a paid-in guarantee capital and surplus of \$819,715.72 as a still further protection. During that period the receipts for dues on installment shares have been \$28,153,603.00, and the withdrawals and maturities paid were \$32,337,315.00, of which \$25,500,686.00 was dues repaid and \$6,836,629.00 profits apportioned thereto.

The receipts for full paid stock amount to $13,103,908.00 and the withdrawals $10,003,554.00.

The receipts on account of investment certificates were $20,996,544.00 and the withdrawals $13,995,217.00. The dividends paid to the holders of full paid shares and investment certificates aggregate $3,491,525.00.

During that same period the disbursements on account of new loans have been $68,889,891.00, and loans amounting to $55,545,813.00 have been repaid. Of the new loans made 19,574 were building loans, mainly for the erection of new homes.

In this same connection it is perhaps interesting to take note of changes that have taken place as affecting several features of the business: all calculations being based on the average loans in force.

In the matter of net profits reported for each year the lowest percentage—6.520 per cent—appears in the report for 1910, the average for the entire nine-year period being 6.848 per cent, and closing with 7.071 per cent for the current year.

The element of taxes paid was at high water mark in the report of 1909, with a percentage of 1.319 per cent, with an average of 0.851 per cent for the entire term, and a minimum of 0.257 per cent in 1915.

The highest percentage of salaries paid was in 1908—1.026 per cent, and the lowest in 1914, with 0.709 per cent and an average for the term of 0.841 per cent, closing with 0.720 per cent in 1915.

The other overhead and necessary expenses of operation appear to have been 0.890 per cent in 1907, and 0.568 per cent in 1915, with an average of 0.785 per cent for the term.

Based on the reports as made to this office it appears that the highest rate of gross income was shown in 1908 with 9.760 per cent on the average loans, and the lowest in 1915 with 8.619 per cent, and an average for the entire term of 9.325 per cent.

The ratio of operating expenses to gross income was the greatest in 1908—19.344 per cent; the lowest in 1915—14.978 per cent—with an average for the entire nine years of 17.388 per cent.

Thus it is shown that while the percentage of gross income has decreased—partly due to a lessening of the loaning rate by the elimination of the mortgage tax element—the percentage of expenses of operation has also decreased, and during the whole period the volume of assets has steadily increased until now it is upwards of 58 per cent in excess of the figures shown in 1906.

Average percentage for past nine years		2.477

Very few of the loans in force were made prior to the repeal of the law requiring the payment of taxes upon mortgages, which accounts for the great annual reduction in this element of expense, and as the associations have no control over this feature they must be eliminated in order to ascertain the true operating expenses. This being done the true operating expenses will appear as follows:

	Per cent
For salaries -----	0.723
For other expenses -----	0.568
Total -----	1.291
This percentage for 1914 was -----	1.398
Average percentage for past nine years -----	1.626

OPERATING EXPENSES TO DUES CAPITAL.

If the above operating expenses are applied to the actual average dues capital paid in on all classes of shares and investment certificates, exclusive of profits apportioned thereto, the percentage for the current fiscal year would appear as follows:

	Per cent
For salaries -----	0.824
For other expenses -----	0.647
	1.471

Or an average of only 0.588 per cent of the legal limitation fixed by the laws of several of the other states.

GROSS INCOME AND PERCENTAGE OF EXPENSES TO INCOME.

Based on the average loans in force, the percentage of the gross income of all the associations can be very closely approximated as follows:

	Per cent
Net profits, reported above -----	7.071
Taxes paid -----	0.257
Operating expenses -----	1.291
	8.619
Ratio of operating expenses to gross income -----	14.978
The average gross income for past nine years is -----	9.325
Average of operating expenses to income -----	17.388

---	-----------

Under date of July 18th this office was advised that an agreement had been effected whereby the "California Security" and the "Mutual," both of Pasadena, were to consolidate, resulting in a material saving in operating expenses.

ASSOCIATIONS IN LIQUIDATION.

In the matter of the "Continental" of San Francisco: The appeal from the decision of the Superior Court is still pending. On August 7th—since the close of the sixty-sixth fiscal year—the board of directors filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States District Court, thus removing all future action regarding the liquidation from the jurisdiction of this office and the state courts.

In the matter of the "Protective" of Los Angeles, the final report of the receiver was filed and settled as of date July 20th of this year, and a final distribution ordered to be made.

Owing to the continued depressed condition of the values of real estate the receiver of the "State of California," of San Diego, has deemed it inadvisable to force the real estate holdings of that association upon the market, hence matters there continue in the same condition as at date of last report.

Regarding the "Orange County Mutual," of Santa Ana, closed and taken in charge by this office in November, 1913, the liquidation of the assets is practically completed but the final settlement is delayed, pending the outcome of actions in the courts and the determination of the liability of the directors, under the law, the assets being insufficient to meet but a small percentage of the volume of the claims filed and allowed.

CONTRACT COMPANIES.

Since the filing of the last annual report of this office two contract companies that persisted in their endeavors to force the sale of their contracts in this State, in defiance of the efforts of this office, have been effectually put out of business. Acting on the suggestions of this office the post office authorities of the United States and Canada, apparently working in harmony, caused a "fraud order" to be issued against the use of the Canadian mails by the "National Mercantile Company, Limited," of Vancouver, B. C., and the Canadian courts forced the corporation into liquidation. In the meantime the United States post office authorities secured the indictment of the officials and agents, by the United States grand jury at Seattle, Washington, for using the United States mail to defraud. This was followed by proceedings in bankruptcy in the United States District Court at San Francisco, resulting in the corporation being adjudicated a bankrupt.

Acting on information from this office regarding the pernicious features of the contracts issued by the "Standard Home Company," of Birmingham, Alabama, which was referred to the United States post office inspectors by a purchaser, that department secured the indictment and conviction of the officials of that corporation for using the United States mail to defraud, and forced the corporation into liquidation.

Several other corporations, formed in other states, whose contracts possess features in all respects similar to those of the two specified above, have endeavored to force the sale of those contracts in this State in practically the same manner and have been warned to desist, otherwise they and their agents would face prosecution for violation of the laws of this State. Notably among these are the American-Canadian Security and Loan Company, of Denver, Colorado; the Empire Realty and Mortgage Company, of Nashville, Tennessee; the Capital Security Company, of Norfolk, Virginia, and the Empire Realty and Mortgage Company, of Birmingham, Alabama.

The amended section 646 of the Civil Code, effective on August 8, 1915, remedies the defects that have heretofore existed in the laws of this State, regarding corporations of this nature, and enables this office and the district attorneys of the several counties to effectually deal with and prosecute future violations of this nature.

AMENDMENTS AND ADDITIONS TO THE LAW.

During the last session of the Legislature six acts amending and making additions to the laws governing and regulating the future business of the associations were finally passed and became effective on the expiration of the statutory period after final adjournment.

The amendments to sections 634 and 647, Civil Code, are merely matters of detail that do not materially affect the operations of the several associations.

Section 642*a*, Civil Code, is a new section taken practically entire from the law of New York where it has been in force for several years, and is intended to give the commissioner a more complete control in the interest of and for the benefit of the shareholders and investors.

Section 646, Civil Code, relates exclusively to associations and corporations doing a similar business, formed in other states, territories and foreign countries desiring to enter this State for the transaction of business. This section has been entirely rewritten, the former defects eliminated, and the control of the commissioner over the operations of associations and similar corporations and their agents and solicitors, which seek to exploit this State without complying with the law, is made more perfect and effective.

Sections 2, 3 and 6 of the "Building and Loan Commission Act" were amended so as to make the secretary of the "Bureau" a deputy commissioner as well as secretary; increase the salary of the commissioner and secretary; authorize the commissioner to appoint an auditor whenever the result of any examination shall develop a condition demanding an extended audit, and more especially define the conditions attaching to the entrance, and annual examination, of associations of other states and countries desiring to transact business in this State.

Section 9*a* is a new section increasing the powers of the commissioner in cases where it becomes necessary for him to take action against any association and close its doors because of unsafe practices and of conditions unsafe and hazardous to the public and to those having funds in its custody.

CONCLUSION.

In the appendix to this report there will be published, as usual, though in a somewhat condensed and abbreviated form, the reports of the several associations of this State as made to this office, to include the book and withdrawal values, at annual periods, of serial associations, and the dues per share per month, the dividend rate and book and withdrawal values of the permanent or "Dayton" plan associations, arranged alphabetically by cities and towns, closing with the last annual statement of the foreign associations. It will also contain a detailed statement of the receipts of this office for the fiscal year, as required by law, and an additional table showing the names of the several secretaries arranged alphabetically by cities and towns with their local addresses.

Respectfully submitted.

GEO. S. WALKER,
Commissioner.

REPORT

OF THE

BUREAU OF BUILDING AND LOAN SUPERVISION.

OFFICE OF THE BUILDING AND LOAN COMMISSIONER,
SAN FRANCISCO, August 12, 1916.

To His Excellency, HIRAM W. JOHNSON,
Governor of California,

SIR: In compliance with the requirements of section 5 of the Building and Loan Commission Act, I have the honor to submit this the Twenty-third Annual Report of this department, covering the operations of the building and loan associations of California for the sixty-seventh fiscal year, ended June 30, 1916.

During this period one new association has been organized and licensed, and one has retired after an unsuccessful attempt to establish itself on a satisfactory basis—thereby leaving the number on the active roll the same as before at 90, with 89 associations in business for more than one year, the reports of which are included in the tabulations herein set forth and the appendix thereafter following.

The gross assets of these 89 associations aggregate, as of the date of their annual reports, $32,794,018.18—a gain of $2,352,934.15, equal to 7.73 per cent for the year.

With one exception—furniture and fixtures—every feature of the assets show an increase in volume. The increase in the loans has been 5.35 per cent; that of the money on hand and in bank 90.77 per cent, or nearly double that of last year; the real estate owned shows an increase in volume of 12.07 per cent; the arrearages 13.08 per cent, and the advances 38.87 per cent.

A like condition appears in the classified liabilities, where all but two of the classes, aggregating only $5,220.00, show an increase of varying proportions.

This increase is by no means confined to any one locality, as by reference to the tabulated "Distribution of Assets by Counties" it will be seen that, of the 27 counties in which there are associations, all but one county in which there are but two small associations, show a gain in assets of very respectable proportions.

The number of members and investors now aggregate 42,250, or 3,502 in excess of the report for 1915, with an average investment to their credit of $701.15.

The borrowers reported appear as 20,322, a gain of 2,033 with an average loan to each of $1,488.20.

The outstanding shares of all classes show a gain of 6,971, and the investment certificates a gain of 3,188.

The new loans made during the year for building purposes appear as 1,743—a gain of 32 over the previous report—thus making the aggregate of all such loans reported since 1893 appear as 46,260.

Fifty associations out of the total of 89 own 216 pieces of real estate, a gain of 53 pieces and $96,526.17 in cost. Six of these associations have acquired land and buildings at an aggregate cost of $132,457.00 for office purposes, mainly by the investment of their accumulated reserve or guarantee capital. The portions not needed for their own use are rented out at fairly remunerative rates of income. The other 210 pieces owned have mostly been acquired as the result of the failure of borrowers to live up to the terms and requirements of their contracts; a result that it is practically impossible to avoid, even under the most favorable conditions of business, still if reasonable care is exercised in the appraisalment of property offered as security for loans, coupled with a close investigation of the moral hazard attaching to the applicants, the necessity for taking action against the security pledged might be reduced to a mere nominal figure. Real estate acquired under such conditions more often becomes an element of loss rather than of profit, as the income, in excess of expenses and taxes, seldom approximates the net income on the average loans. Ordinarily, the sooner it is disposed of the better the condition of the association that has been forced to acquire it; and especially is this the case if the lots be vacant or the buildings thereon be old and out of date. Modern improvements are the only kind now acceptable to the public, hence those now out of date must usually be disposed of at a loss, and the sooner that loss is known the better.

The arrearages amounting to $188,623.70 are very largely for interest due and unpaid on loans and contracts. In some cases these are altogether too great, and are intimately connected with the necessity of taking action against security pledged for loans. The steady accumulation of this delinquency may sometimes be due to inferior collection qualifications on the part of the executive officers, as those that are known to be the best collectors show the fewest delinquencies.

The volume of cash on hand and in bank is excessive and unreasonable in a business where all funds are presumed to be kept at work earning something; complaints have been universal from all parts of the state of an undue accumulation of money that it was impossible to loan in the usual manner on acceptable security. Most associations hesitate to invest in bonds, because of the low rate of income, or to loan on flat mortgages for any extended period. Late advices indicate an improved demand for acceptable loans, in some localities.

The reserve and undivided profits aggregate $1,380,544.12, equal to 4.56 per cent of the loans in force, a gain of $96,697.62 since last report. The law requires the reserve to be accumulated from 5 per cent of the net profits until it shall equal 5 per cent of the loans in force, as an insurance against loss to the members and investors. As the law now stands it applies to all associations, but where an association has a paid in guarantee capital no necessity exists for the accumulation of a reserve in this manner, as the guarantee capital and its surplus are presumed to assume all responsibility for losses incurred.

LOANING RATE AND INTEREST COLLECTED.

The 89 associations reporting represent 16 different loaning rates, varying from 7 to 12 per cent per annum.

Twenty-one associations loan at 7 per cent and three varying fractions.

Thirty-five associations loan at 8 per cent and two varying fractions.

Fourteen associations loan at 9 per cent and two varying fractions.

Sixteen associations loan at 10 per cent and two varying fractions.

Three associations loan at 11 per cent and not exceeding 12 per cent.

The average of these varying rates is 8.53 per cent, but this average can only be accurately realized unless the volume of loans of each and every association is practically of the same amount. If the volume of the loans of associations loaning at the higher rates greatly exceeds the volume of those of the lower rates, then the average realization will exceed the above named average; and vice versa if the volume of the lower rates greatly exceeds that of the higher, then the average realization will be less than the mean average of rates.

The realization seldom or never equals the loaning rate, for the reason that there is always more or less delinquency which usually results in loss, especially in the event of foreclosure.

The interest, including premium (which is simply another name for interest), reported as collected during the past year, amounts to $2,529,075.56, or the equivalent of 8.572 per cent of the apparent average of loans in force for the entire year. This rate is a little in excess of the mean average of all rates noted above, thus demonstrating that the larger volume of the loans bear the higher loaning rates.

Elsewhere the gross apparent income is calculated at 8.865 per cent, the difference of 0.292 per cent accruing from delinquent interest and other sources of income that enter into the profit and loss account, and which have been included therein in the preparation of the several annual reports to this office.

OPERATING EXPENSES.

Taxes being an element over which the management of the several associations has no control, it follows that the real operating expenses must of necessity be confined to the salaries and other expenses, which as above shown, bear the following percentages to the average loans in force for the year:

	Per cent.
For salaries	0.719
For other expenses	0.549
Total	1.268
The average for the past ten years is.....	1.590

OPERATING EXPENSES TO DUES CAPITAL.

Applying the above operating expenses to the actual average of dues capital paid in on all classes of shares and investment certificates, exclusive of profits apportioned thereto, the percentages appear as follows:

	Per cent.
For salaries	0.853
For other expenses	0.655
Total	1.508

or practically only about 60 per cent of the legal limitation fixed by the laws of several of the other states.

The above percentage for 1915 was 1.471.

GROSS INCOME AND PERCENTAGE OF EXPENSES TO INCOME.

Based on the average of "loans in force" the percentage of the gross income of all the associations can be very closely approximated as follows:

	Per cent.
Net profits reported as above.....	7.392
Taxes paid	0.205
Operating expenses	1.268
Apparent gross income	8.865
Ratio of operating expenses to gross income.....	14.371
The apparent gross income for the past ten years has been.....	9.279
And the ratio of operating expenses to income.....	17.086

GROSS INCOME AND PERCENTAGE OF EXPENSES TO DUES CAPITAL.

Based on the average of "dues capital" in force for the year in all classes of shares and investment certificates, exclusive of profits or dividends credited thereto, the apparent gross income is approximately as follows:

	Per cent.
Percentage of net profits.....	8.765
Percentage of taxes paid.....	0.243
Percentage of operating expenses.....	1.508
Apparent gross income	10.516
Ratio of operating expenses.....	14.340

ASSOCIATIONS IN LIQUIDATION.

In the matter of the "Fairmount" and "Mission Home" of San Francisco, as soon as it is possible to dispose of three or four small pieces of real estate the final liquidation distribution will be made and the affairs closed.

As to the "Pacific Coast Savings" the trustees report that there are a few odds and ends to adjust in order to complete the final closing of its business.

The final account of the receiver for the "Protective" of Los Angeles has been approved by the court and the receivership discharged.

In the matter of the "State of California" of San Diego the inability to dispose of the real estate holdings to advantage has delayed further progress in realization, hence matters there remain as at date of last report.

As to the "Orange County Mutual" of Santa Ana collection of the visible assets has been completed but the business can not be finally closed until the liability of the directors is determined and accepted by the members.

The affairs of the "Continental," in bankruptcy, were still pending before the United States Referee in Bankruptcy at the close of the fiscal year, no trustee having been selected to proceed with liquidation.

From an examination of the foregoing schedule of "Distribution of Assets by Counties" it will be observed that less than one-half the counties in the state have associations formed and operating within their borders. This is a matter of sincere regret, as there are unquestionably many localities in the other counties where small associations could be formed and operated with profit to members and investors and with material benefit in the upbuilding of the communities. This has been satisfactorily demonstrated in several of the smaller towns and cities where such have been formed and operated for several years. While this office looks with disfavor upon the formation of associations by professional promoters, it would gladly lend its assistance, within reasonable limits, to public spirited local citizens desiring to benefit their localities by the formation of local associations.

A RESERVE FUND A NECESSITY.

California, in common with practically every other state, requires that a "Reserve Fund" be accumulated for the protection of persistent members and investors, yet there are those who question the utility of such a law and plead for its repeal. The necessity for such a fund is obvious to those having to do with state supervision for any extended period. It matters not how careful and conscientious a board of directors may be in the making of loans, the time is sure to come when it will be necessary to take over real estate pledged as security for loans, and when that time does come, if there is no accumulated reserve for the protection of the shareholders, members and investors against the possible and very probable loss that usually occurs, a reduction in the ordinary dividend very naturally follows, coupled with dissatisfaction and consequent withdrawals. Losses are also likely and liable to occur from other and unexpected sources productive of like results, even of a magnitude that may threaten the very existence of an association. The law and the decisions of the higher courts require that associations must have available and collectible assets wherewith to repay in full the contributions of their members and investors if they would continue in active business. In fact, they must be in condition to meet this requirement, even as the result of a forced liquidation, wherein there is invariably a depreciation in asset realization. A building and loan association on the mutual plan is like unto a mutual partnership, but with this difference—a member or investor may withdraw his investment almost at will, and it is to be repaid to him in actual money by the remaining members. It is quite true that he usually forfeits a portion of his accumulated earnings, but this forfeiture is no part of the earnings of the investment of the remaining members to be distributed to them in the shape of dividends as has been the usual practice in the past. It was forfeited as an insurance fund to protect them against future loss that might arise from business then on the books and properly belongs in a reserve fund created for that purpose. If it is erroneously included in the earnings of an association, then an equivalent, at the very least, should be taken therefrom at the closing of the books for the annual term, for the creation and accumulation of such insurance reserve, for the business on the books at the time of the withdrawal is then by no means closed out and may not be for years. Were the resulting forfeitures of this nature transferred to an insurance reserve fund from the very inception of an association, such fund would very probably exceed in volume the requirements of the existing laws, and still each and every persistent member would get as dividends all that his investment had actually earned, less the proper pro rata of expenses and taxes. In fact, he would receive more, for this insurance reserve would be loaned out and earning interest for his benefit. A reserve is an insurance fund for the protection of a member against possible loss and reduction of annual dividends; in fact it is an equalizer of dividends for the future. That the law might justly provide for the distribution of a pro rata of the excess over the five per cent of the loans in force, now required to be eventually accumulated, if any such exist at the time of maturity, there may be scarcely a question; but that the insurance reserve should be encroached upon, except for the payment of losses, prior to final liquidation, should be looked upon, in the light of past experience, as an extra hazardous proceeding.

CONCLUSION.

The appendix to this report, when published, will contain the usual condensed reports of the several associations as made to this office at the close of their several fiscal years, showing the book and withdrawal values at annual periods, of the shares of serial associations, and the dues, dividend rate, book and withdrawal values of the permanent or "Dayton" plan associations, all arranged alphabetically both as to location and name of association, closing with the last report of foreign associations. It will also contain a detailed statement of the receipts of this department, as required by law, and the names and addresses of the several secretaries, arranged alphabetically by cities and towns.

Respectfully submitted.

REPORT
OF THE
BUREAU OF BUILDING AND LOAN SUPERVISION.

OFFICE OF THE BUILDING AND LOAN COMMISSIONER,
SAN FRANCISCO, August 12, 1916.

*To His Excellency, HIRAM W. JOHNSON,
Governor of California,*

SIR: In compliance with the requirements of section 5 of the Building and Loan Commission Act, I have the honor to submit this the Twenty-third Annual Report of this department, covering the operations of the building and loan associations of California for the sixty-seventh fiscal year, ended June 30, 1916.

During this period one new association has been organized and licensed, and one has retired after an unsuccessful attempt to establish itself on a satisfactory basis—thereby leaving the number on the active roll the same as before at 90, with 89 associations in business for more than one year, the reports of which are included in the tabulations herein set forth and the appendix thereafter following.

The gross assets of these 89 associations aggregate, as of the date of their annual reports, $32,794,018.18—a gain of $2,352,934.15, equal to 7.73 per cent for the year.

With one exception—furniture and fixtures—every feature of the assets show an increase in volume. The increase in the loans has been 5.35 per cent; that of the money on hand and in bank 90.77 per cent, or nearly double that of last year; the real estate owned shows an increase in volume of 12.07 per cent; the arrearages 13.08 per cent, and the advances 38.87 per cent.

A like condition appears in the classified liabilities, where all but two of the classes, aggregating only $5,220.00, show an increase of varying proportions.

This increase is by no means confined to any one locality, as by reference to the tabulated "Distribution of Assets by Counties" it will be seen that, of the 27 counties in which there are associations, all but one county in which there are but two small associations, show a gain in assets of very respectable proportions.

The number of members and investors now aggregate 42,250, or 3,502 in excess of the report for 1915, with an average investment to their credit of $701.15.

The borrowers reported appear as 20,322, a gain of 2,033 with an average loan to each of $1,488.20.

The outstanding shares of all classes show a gain of 6,971, and the investment certificates a gain of 3,188.

The new loans made during the year for building purposes appear as 1,743—a gain of 32 over the previous report—thus making the aggregate of all such loans reported since 1893 appear as 46,260.

Fifty associations out of the total of 89 own 216 pieces of real estate, a gain of 53 pieces and $96,526.17 in cost. Six of these associations have acquired land and buildings at an aggregate cost of $132,457.00 for office purposes, mainly by the investment of their accumulated reserve or guarantee capital. The portions not needed for their own use are rented out at fairly remunerative rates of income. The other 210 pieces owned have mostly been acquired as the result of the failure of borrowers to live up to the terms and requirements of their contracts; a result that it is practically impossible to avoid, even under the most favorable conditions of business, still if reasonable care is exercised in the appraisalment of property offered as security for loans, coupled with a close investigation of the moral hazard attaching to the applicants, the necessity for taking action against the security pledged might be reduced to a mere nominal figure. Real estate acquired under such conditions more often becomes an element of loss rather than of profit, as the income, in excess of expenses and taxes, seldom approximates the net income on the average loans. Ordinarily, the sooner it is disposed of the better the condition of the association that has been forced to acquire it; and especially is this the case if the lots be vacant or the buildings thereon be old and out of date. Modern improvements are the only kind now acceptable to the public, hence those now out of date must usually be disposed of at a loss, and the sooner that loss is known the better.

The arrearages amounting to $188,623.70 are very largely for interest due and unpaid on loans and contracts. In some cases these are altogether too great, and are intimately connected with the necessity of taking action against security pledged for loans. The steady accumulation of this delinquency may sometimes be due to inferior collection qualifications on the part of the executive officers, as those that are known to be the best collectors show the fewest delinquencies.

The volume of cash on hand and in bank is excessive and unreasonable in a business where all funds are presumed to be kept at work earning something; complaints have been universal from all parts of the state of an undue accumulation of money that it was impossible to loan in the usual manner on acceptable security. Most associations hesitate to invest in bonds, because of the low rate of income, or to loan on flat mortgages for any extended period. Late advices indicate an improved demand for acceptable loans, in some localities.

The reserve and undivided profits aggregate $1,380,544.12, equal to 4.56 per cent of the loans in force, a gain of $96,697.62 since last report. The law requires the reserve to be accumulated from 5 per cent of the net profits until it shall equal 5 per cent of the loans in force, as an insurance against loss to the members and investors. As the law now stands it applies to all associations, but where an association has a paid in guarantee capital no necessity exists for the accumulation of a reserve in this manner, as the guarantee capital and its surplus are presumed to assume all responsibility for losses incurred.

LOANING RATE AND INTEREST COLLECTED.

The 89 associations reporting represent 16 different loaning rates, varying from 7 to 12 per cent per annum.

Twenty-one associations loan at 7 per cent and three varying fractions.

Thirty-five associations loan at 8 per cent and two varying fractions.

Fourteen associations loan at 9 per cent and two varying fractions.

Sixteen associations loan at 10 per cent and two varying fractions.

Three associations loan at 11 per cent and not exceeding 12 per cent.

The average of these varying rates is 8.53 per cent, but this average can only be accurately realized unless the volume of loans of each and every association is practically of the same amount. If the volume of the loans of associations loaning at the higher rates greatly exceeds the volume of those of the lower rates, then the average realization will exceed the above named average; and vice versa if the volume of the lower rates greatly exceeds that of the higher, then the average realization will be less than the mean average of rates.

The realization seldom or never equals the loaning rate, for the reason that there is always more or less delinquency which usually results in loss, especially in the event of foreclosure.

The interest, including premium (which is simply another name for interest), reported as collected during the past year, amounts to $2,529,075.56, or the equivalent of 8.572 per cent of the apparent average of loans in force for the entire year. This rate is a little in excess of the mean average of all rates noted above, thus demonstrating that the larger volume of the loans bear the higher loaning rates.

Elsewhere the gross apparent income is calculated at 8.865 per cent, the difference of 0.292 per cent accruing from delinquent interest and other sources of income that enter into the profit and loss account, and which have been included therein in the preparation of the several annual reports to this office.

OPERATING EXPENSES.

Taxes being an element over which the management of the several associations has no control, it follows that the real operating expenses must of necessity be confined to the salaries and other expenses, which as above shown, bear the following percentages to the average loans in force for the year:

	Per cent.
For salaries	0.719
For other expenses	0.549
Total	1.268
The average for the past ten years is	1.590

OPERATING EXPENSES TO DUES CAPITAL.

Applying the above operating expenses to the actual average of dues capital paid in on all classes of shares and investment certificates, exclusive of profits apportioned thereto, the percentages appear as follows:

	Per cent.
For salaries	0.853
For other expenses	0.655
Total	1.508

or practically only about 60 per cent of the legal limitation fixed by the laws of several of the other states.

The above percentage for 1915 was 1.471.

GROSS INCOME AND PERCENTAGE OF EXPENSES TO INCOME.

Based on the average of "loans in force" the percentage of the gross income of all the associations can be very closely approximated as follows:

	Per cent.
Net profits reported as above	7.392
Taxes paid	0.205
Operating expenses	1.268
Apparent gross income	8.865
Ratio of operating expenses to gross income	14.371
The apparent gross income for the past ten years has been	9.279
And the ratio of operating expenses to income	17.086

GROSS INCOME AND PERCENTAGE OF EXPENSES TO DUES CAPITAL.

Based on the average of "dues capital" in force for the year in all classes of shares and investment certificates, exclusive of profits or dividends credited thereto, the apparent gross income is approximately as follows:

	Per cent.
Percentage of net profits	8.765
Percentage of taxes paid	0.243
Percentage of operating expenses	1.508
Apparent gross income	10.516
Ratio of operating expenses	14.340

ASSOCIATIONS IN LIQUIDATION.

In the matter of the "Fairmount" and "Mission Home" of San Francisco, as soon as it is possible to dispose of three or four small pieces of real estate the final liquidation distribution will be made and the affairs closed.

As to the "Pacific Coast Savings" the trustees report that there are a few odds and ends to adjust in order to complete the final closing of its business.

The final account of the receiver for the "Protective" of Los Angeles has been approved by the court and the receivership discharged.

In the matter of the "State of California" of San Diego the inability to dispose of the real estate holdings to advantage has delayed further progress in realization, hence matters there remain as at date of last report.

As to the "Orange County Mutual" of Santa Ana collection of the visible assets has been completed but the business can not be finally closed until the liability of the directors is determined and accepted by the members.

The affairs of the "Continental," in bankruptcy, were still pending before the United States Referee in Bankruptcy at the close of the fiscal year, no trustee having been selected to proceed with liquidation.

From an examination of the foregoing schedule of "Distribution of Assets by Counties" it will be observed that less than one-half the counties in the state have associations formed and operating within their borders. This is a matter of sincere regret, as there are unquestionably many localities in the other counties where small associations could be formed and operated with profit to members and investors and with material benefit in the upbuilding of the communities. This has been satisfactorily demonstrated in several of the smaller towns and cities where such have been formed and operated for several years. While this office looks with disfavor upon the formation of associations by professional promoters, it would gladly lend its assistance, within reasonable limits, to public spirited local citizens desiring to benefit their localities by the formation of local associations.

A RESERVE FUND A NECESSITY.

California, in common with practically every other state, requires that a "Reserve Fund" be accumulated for the protection of persistent members and investors, yet there are those who question the utility of such a law and plead for its repeal. The necessity for such a fund is obvious to those having to do with state supervision for any extended period. It matters not how careful and conscientious a board of directors may be in the making of loans, the time is sure to come when it will be necessary to take over real estate pledged as security for loans, and when that time does come, if there is no accumulated reserve for the protection of the shareholders, members and investors against the possible and very probable loss that usually occurs, a reduction in the ordinary dividend very naturally follows, coupled with dissatisfaction and consequent withdrawals. Losses are also likely and liable to occur from other and unexpected sources productive of like results, even of a magnitude that may threaten the very existence of an association. The law and the decisions of the higher courts require that associations must have available and collectible assets wherewith to repay in full the contributions of their members and investors if they would continue in active business. In fact, they must be in condition to meet this requirement, even as the result of a forced liquidation, wherein there is invariably a depreciation in asset realization. A building and loan association on the mutual plan is like unto a mutual partnership, but with this difference—a member or investor may withdraw his investment almost at will, and it is to be repaid to him in actual money by the remaining members. It is quite true that he usually forfeits a portion of his accumulated earnings, but this forfeiture is no part of the earnings of the investment of the remaining members to be distributed to them in the shape of dividends as has been the usual practice in the past. It was forfeited as an insurance fund to protect them against future loss that might arise from business then on the books and properly belongs in a reserve fund created for that purpose. If it is erroneously included in the earnings of an association, then an equivalent, at the very least, should be taken therefrom at the closing of the books for the annual term, for the creation and accumulation of such insurance reserve, for the business on the books at the time of the withdrawal is then by no means closed out and may not be for years. Were the resulting forfeitures of this nature transferred to an insurance reserve fund from the very inception of an association, such fund would very probably exceed in volume the requirements of the existing laws, and still each and every persistent member would get as dividends all that his investment had actually earned, less the proper pro rata of expenses and taxes. In fact, he would receive more, for this insurance reserve would be loaned out and earning interest for his benefit. A reserve is an insurance fund for the protection of a member against possible loss and reduction of annual dividends; in fact it is an equalizer of dividends for the future. That the law might justly provide for the distribution of a pro rata of the excess over the five per cent of the loans in force, now required to be eventually accumulated, if any such exist at the time of maturity, there may be scarcely a question; but that the insurance reserve should be encroached upon, except for the payment of losses, prior to final liquidation, should be looked upon, in the light of past experience, as an extra hazardous proceeding.

CONCLUSION.

The appendix to this report, when published, will contain the usual condensed reports of the several associations as made to this office at the close of their several fiscal years, showing the book and withdrawal values at annual periods, of the shares of serial associations, and the dues, dividend rate, book and withdrawal values of the permanent or "Dayton" plan associations, all arranged alphabetically both as to location and name of association, closing with the last report of foreign associations. It will also contain a detailed statement of the receipts of this department, as required by law, and the names and addresses of the several secretaries, arranged alphabetically by cities and towns.

Respectfully submitted.

GEO. S. WALKER,
Commissioner.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL.

CALIFORNIA STALLION REGISTRATION BOARD,

SACRAMENTO, September 15, 1915.

To Honorable HIRAM W. JOHNSON, Governor of California:

SIR: In accordance with the provisions of chapter 677 "An act to regulate the public service of stallion and jacks in the State of California," we have the honor to submit herewith our fourth annual report for the twelve months ending July 31, 1915, together with the financial statement, showing the receipts and disbursements of the Board during that period, and a statistical summary showing the number and breeds of stallions in each county in the State.

At the last session of the Legislature bills were introduced and passed making several important changes in the law, which will materially aid us in carrying out the purport of this act. A copy of the amended law will be found under Appendix D.

At the last California State Fair this Board awarded $800.00 and four trophy cups in four different classes to stallions and jacks licensed with this Board. This feature attracted a great deal of attention and caused considerable enthusiasm among the different owners of stallions who had State licenses. There were twenty-three entries in the four classes.

Respectfully submitted.

JOHN M. PERRY, President.

FOURTH ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

CALIFORNIA STALLION REGISTRATION BOARD.

Within the past nine years twenty different states have passed laws requiring that all owners of stallions or jacks, before standing them for public service, shall obtain a license for each animal from the State Board created for that purpose. This board examines all pedigree certificates and veterinarians' certificates of soundness submitted, and enrolls and issues license certificates for all stallions and jacks entitled to such enrollment in accordance with the law. Such legislation has been enacted in the following states:

States	Act effective	States	Act effective
Wisconsin -----	January 1, 1906	Illinois -----	January 1, 1910
Iowa -----	March 30, 1907	North Dakota -----	January 1, 1910
Minnesota -----	April 25, 1907	Kansas -----	April 3, 1910
Utah -----	May 13, 1907	Washington -----	June 8, 1910
Pennsylvania -----	January 1, 1908	Oregon -----	May 20, 1911
New Jersey -----	September 1, 1908	Nebraska -----	July 7, 1911
Montana -----	March 8, 1909	California -----	August 1, 1911
South Dakota -----	March 9, 1909	Michigan -----	August 1, 1911
Idaho -----	March 15, 1909	Colorado -----	August 5, 1911
Indiana -----		Ohio -----

The details of these laws vary somewhat in different states, but all are more or less founded on the Wisconsin act, which was the pioneer state in this matter, but all require the submission of certificates of registration in studbooks certified by the United States Department of Agriculture, as evidence of the purity of breeding of stallions licensed as purebred, except that some provide in addition that stallions shall be accepted as purebred which are registered in studbooks of any American studbook or registry association which recognizes and records stallions having five pure top crosses.

That the State stallion law marks a distinct step in advance in our horse-breeding industry is hardly to be questioned. One of the first results of the operation of these laws was to provide data which show the actual facts with regard to the stallions being used for breeding purposes. Other important beneficial results are the rapid elimination of unfit animals and greater care with regard to breeding and registration. Under authority of paragraph 492 of the act of Congress, approved August 5, 1909, the following regulations were issued by the United States Department of Agriculture regarding the importation of animals for breeding purposes, in order to prevent fraud concerning the ancestry of purebred animals, which became effective on February 1, 1912.

RECOGNIZED FOREIGN BREEDS.

The following breeds of horses have been certified to the Secretary of the Treasury as recognized breeds and books of record across the seas:

Name of breed	Book of record	By whom published
Belgian Draft -----	Stud Book des Chevaux de Trait Belges.	Société le Cheval de Trait Belge, Chevalier G. Hynderick, secretary, 20 Rue Royale, Brussels, Belgium.
Clydesdale -----	Clydesdale Studbook -----	Clydesdale Horse Society of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Archibald McNeillage, secretary, 93 Hope street, Glasgow, Scotland.
French Draft -----	Studbook des Chevaux de Trait Francais.	Société des Agriculteurs de France, J. C. Villevas, secretary, 8 Rue d'Athenes, Paris, France.
Hackney -----	Hackney Studbook -----	Hackney Horse Society, Frank F. Euren, secretary, 12 Hanover Square, London, W., England.
Percheron -----	Studbook Percheron de France.	La Société Hippique Percheronne de France, E. Lemarie, secretary, Nogent-le-Rotrou, France.
Shetland Pony -----	Shetland Pony Studbook..	Shetland Pony Studbook Society, R. W. Walker, secretary, 3 Golden Square, Aberdeen, Scotland.
Shire -----	Shire Horse Society Studbook.	Shire Horse Society, J. Sloughgrove, secretary, 12 Hanover Square, London, W., England.
Suffolk -----	Suffolk Studbook -----	Suffolk Horse Society, Fred Smith, secretary, Rendlesham, Woodbridge, Suffolk, England.
Thoroughbred -----	Australian Studbook ----- Provided that no animal or animals registered in the Australian Studbook shall be certified as purebred unless such animal or animals trace, in all crosses, to animals registered in the General Studbook of England.	Australian Jockey Club and Victoria Racing Club, A. P. Wilson, keeper, 6 Bligh street, Sydney, New South Wales.
Welsh Pony and Cob-----	Welsh Pony and Cob Studbook.	Weatherby & Sons, 6 Old Burlington street, London, W., England. The Welsh Pony and Cob Society, John R. Bache, secretary, Knighton, Radnorshire, Wales.

Recognized breeds and books of record in Canada.—The Canadian National Records are recognized for the following breeds, provided that no animal or animals registered in the Canadian National Records shall be certified by the Secretary of Agriculture as purebred unless such animal or animals trace, in all crosses, to registered animals in the country where the breed originated, or to animals which are proved to the satisfaction of the department to be of the same breed and which have been imported from the country in which the breed originated:

The complete act to regulate the public service of stallions and jacks in California is given in full in Appendix D, as it will be found useful for reference by those concerned.

In Appendix B the various breeds are given in detail, and the numbers are of considerable interest. No pony-stallions have been registered.

The total number of registered stallions in the State is 1,336, principally classified as follows:

Mongrel, 350; Percheron, 437; Standard, 186; Belgian, 143; showing a decrease of 30 under last year.

The three leading counties are San Joaquin, with 86; Alameda, with 64, and Fresno with 76 stallions.

A slight decrease in the number of stallions licensed is more noticeable in the mongrels, which shows that the stallion law has had its effect for the betterment in breeding.

While the extensive use of the automobile and traction engine has no doubt been the primary factor in this large decrease, yet, on the other hand, the published graded registration of the California Stallion Registration Board, has had a tendency to promote better breeding, thus carrying out the purport of the law.

We wish to thank the Stallion Division of the Iowa State Department of Agriculture for the use of the cuts illustrating the various certificates of the Registration Associations given in this report.

DESCRIPTION OF DISEASES ENUMERATED IN THE STALLION LAW.

A brief description of the diseases referred to in the California law is given below. This is not offered as a complete treatise, but only such features are mentioned as is thought will be of interest and assistance to persons especially concerned.

Periodic Ophthalmia—Moon Blindness.

This is a disease affecting the eyes of horses, probably caused by a germ. It is quite commonly called moon blindness because it was thought at one time that the moon had some influence on the cause of the disease.

There is undoubtedly a hereditary predisposition to the disease, but there are few cases to indicate that the disease itself is transmitted from parent to offspring, but rather the colt is born with a weakness of the eyes, transmitted by the stallion or dam. Other predisposing factors are low, damp (swampy) pastures, poorly ventilated or insufficiently lighted stables, over-feeding, etc.

The disease comes on with an inflammation usually of one eye. The transparent portion of the eyeball becomes bluish or white in color, most noticeable in the lower part (precipitate in anterior chamber). The eye is kept half closed on account of pain produced by light. Often this is associated by a swelling of the eyelids and reddening of the membrane lining them with a discharge of tears over the face. There is no indication of an injury or more severe inflammation at one point than at another. In one to two weeks these symptoms disappear and the eye may be practically normal to all general appearances for a period of usually one to three months, when another attack occurs more severe than the first. After a few attacks have come and gone the eye has a bluish appearance, looks cloudy instead of clear, the eyeball is shrunken, retracted in the orbit and the lens (inside of eyeball) become white (develops a cataract). Not being satisfied with having destroyed one eye the disease frequently affects the other and the history of the first is repeated.

Cataract—Opacity of Lens.

Immediately back of and covering the pupil of the eye is the lens. It is ordinarily not noticed because of its being transparent. Where it becomes clouded (opaque), however, the opaque portion is readily seen. As a rule cataracts soon involve the entire lens and the pupil then looks white, or grayish in color. There are many different classifications of cataract, as congenital, senile, primary, secondary, capsular, traumatic, etc., but as no distinctions are made in the law, the different kinds will not be discussed specifically.

Roaring (Laryngeal-Hemiplegia).

A paralysis, either partial or complete, of one or both recurrent laryngeal nerves. The most frequent causes of roaring are undoubtedly infectious diseases, such as stangles and influenza, and various forms of pneumonia. Heredity probably plays some part as a causative agent and for this reason the condition when present constitutes an unsoundness in stallions.

Paralysis of the recurrent laryngeal nerve leads to disuse of the muscles which tense the vocal cords. Looking into the larynx from in front, these cords can be seen to be stretched across the larynx from above to below, while between the cords and the sides of the larynx are two blind pouches or pockets, the lateral ventricles. Looking into the larynx from behind, the walls are smooth and unobstructed. During normal respiration the vocal cords are drawn to the sides of the larynx and the ventricles closed on inspiration, while on expiration they swing out into the larynx somewhat. In roaring, the cord or cords being paralyzed, hang more or less loosely in the larynx during inspiration and the air rushes into the ventricles.

The most striking symptom, therefore, is a laryngeal sound made on inspiration only. The sound varies from a whistling to a dull roaring, depending upon the degree of paralysis and also varies greatly in intensity from one which is barely perceptible only when the horse is being exercised to one which is so severe that the least movement or excitement may produce very distressing symptoms.

The two symptoms which are the most characteristic of roaring, therefore, are, that the sound is inspiratory only, and that it is greatly reduced or even entirely ceases within a short time after the animal is brought to rest. The best way of testing a horse for roaring is to put him under heavy draft in soft ground or gallop him in a circle with the head pulled in and turned slightly toward the right.

Navicular Disease.

A chronic inflammation involving the navicular bone, the navicular bursa, and the deep flexor tendon.

In this disease heredity, in so far as it influences quality of bone, quality of tendon and set of limbs, undoubtedly plays an important part. Aside from heredity, any factors such as dry and contracted hoofs, constant fast work on hard roads or pavements, and severe strains, as in running or jumping, must be regarded as causes, as they increase concussion or compression in the navicular region.

Navicular lameness is one of the most insidious with which we have to deal. The broad, flat foot, with large frog and open at the heels, is especially predisposed. The lameness usually comes on gradually and irregularly, resulting in a slow, cautious, short gait, with a constant attempt to keep the weight shifted toward the toe. Stumbling is quite characteristic. The animal usually stands with the affected foot in advance of the sound one, or constantly shifts its weight, if both are affected. There is a total absence of heat or swelling. Pain is increased when the animal is made to stand upon an incline or when pressure is put directly upon the frog. Because the weight is shifted toward the toes, the toes become worn short and the heels become high and contracted.

Great care must be taken not to confuse navicular lameness and shoulder lameness, or simple contraction of the heels, especially when accompanied by thrush.

Sidebone.

A transformation of the lateral cartilages into bone. The lateral cartilages are placed on the inner and outer sides of the foot, partly above and partly below the hoof head or coronet. Normally, they should be pliable and easily moved from side to side along their upper border by pressure with the thumb.

External injuries and lack of function, especially when accompanied by a low type of inflammation, are the most fruitful causes. Both these conditions are present in a hoof which, due to prolonged lack of frog pressure, has become dry and contracted, thus more freely transmitting shock which constantly comes to a foot in motion, and at the same time limiting movement and keeping up constant inflammation because of contraction of the hoof. An undue amount of body weight in proportion to the size and quality of hoof are also important factors. This is shown by the fact that some horses work upon city streets constantly shod with high calks and never develop sidebones. Therefore, selection is very important.

Sidebones are more frequent in front feet and in the other cartilage of draft horses. The ossification begins on the lower anterior border and proceeds upward and backward until completed. The first change then is when the hoof, and though we may be suspicious of its presence, a diagnosis can not be made until an ossified portion can be felt. The chief difficulty arises in examining heavy stallions which have very thick, harsh skin. A diagnosis should never be made until the foot has been picked up and the thumbs inserted deeply behind the cartilage, to detect pliability or the absence of it. As soon as ossification can be definitely determined, sidebones can be said to exist. The presence of sidebone seldom causes lameness in farm animals, but when animals so affected are put to work upon city streets where, because of continued shoeing, the feet become very dry, lameness often results. For this reason, buyers for the city markets object seriously to a horse having sidebones.

Ringbone.

"Ringbone" is an indefinite, collective term for various chronic aseptic inflammatory processes at the coronary joint. It should be divided into two forms, articular, involving the joint, and periarticular, involving the surface of the bone at the attachment of the ligaments around the joints. Ringbones of the first class are the result either of excessive concussion upon the bones of normal quality or ordinary concussion upon bones of poor quality. Ringbones of the second class are

Bony deposit on long pastern bone.
Bony deposit on short pastern bone.
Long pastern bone free from bony deposit.
Short pastern bone free from bony deposit.

due either to excessive straining of the ligaments, due to an unbalanced condition within the foot and limb, or to faulty quality of the bones into which the ligaments are inserted.

It will be seen that the foregoing causes do not include bony growths in this region which result from deep wire cuts or other accidents. True ringbones then are the result of lack of quality or faulty formation and consequently are very objectionable in breeding animals. It is well for owners to understand, however, that excessive strains may result from lack of trimming or faulty shoeing and ringbones develop as a result.

Ringbone may involve either the first phalanx, the joints between the first and second phalanges, or the second phalanx, and the joint below it, they may be present in either front or hind limbs, though perhaps are found more commonly behind than in front. The most marked symptom is the presence of a bony enlargement on one or both sides or extending entirely around the joint. Care should be taken not to mistake the naturally prominent joints of young animals for ringbone. There is usually no local pain or heat, though lameness is persistent and severe, especially when the joint is twisted, as in turning short.

Ringbone on off fore.

Ringbone around the lower joint causes a bulging at the top of the hoof and an irregularity in the production of horn, which leave the hoof surface at the toe checked and cracked. If lameness is severe, the animal stands with the affected foot relieved of weight, or alternately raises and lowers it. The gait is slow and clumsy and marked by lack of movement in the pastern joint.

Bone Spavin.

Bone spavin is primarily a chronic inflammation of the inner lower tarsal bones and upper head of the metatarsal bones. Disease of the accompanying joints and enlargement upon the surface of the bones are secondary processes. In fact, in some spavins (occult spavin) no enlargement can be detected. Bone spavin, therefore, should not be defined as an enlargement upon the inside of the hock joint, as the enlargement is merely a symptom which may be entirely absent.

The usual cause of spavin is undue compression of the bones of the hock, though overstraining is also undoubtedly a cause. Any conformation, such as being too upright or too crooked either when viewed from the side or behind, as well as lack of quality to stand ordinary uses, are predisposing causes. True spavin, then, like true ringbone, is largely a breeder's problem. Although neither is directly hereditary, it is the predisposition in the form of defective conformation or quality which is hereditary.

The recognition of spavin depends upon the determination of a bony enlargement in the hock, if it be present, and an analysis of the lameness. Either may exist without the other.

The enlargement usually is found on the internal lateral surface of the hock. It may be detected by viewing the region from directly in front, looking between the front legs or from a little angle looking, first at one hock, then crossing over and viewing the other, from a similar angle. The hocks can best be compared by palpation by crouching behind the animal, crossing the arms and passing the forefinger of each hand over corresponding surfaces of the two joints at the same time. Any difference in size or contour can then be detected.

Spavin lameness is quite characteristic. It is usually more severe during the first few steps and gradually disappears with exercise, unless the lameness is severe, when it is either constant or increases with exercise. In any case there is always lack of flexion of the hock and a tendency to drag the toe which is best seen as the animal is led past the observer. This same lack of flexion necessitates an exaggerated action of the hip, which is best seen from behind as the animal is led away. Again, the animal usually shows pain when turned short upon the affected limb, and lameness is increased by holding the hock flexed for about one minute, and then starting the animal off at the trot.

Slight bone spavin.

Well marked bone spavin.

Bog Spavin.

Bog spavin denotes a serious inflammation of the hock (tibiotalar) joint. It may be acute at first, originating from a spavin, and finally becoming chronic, or it may be chronic in nature from the first, originating apparently from a congenital (inherited) weakness.

In the first instance there is swelling in the region of the joint, which is firm, painful, hot and causing severe lameness. In the second, more frequent form, there is present a soft, painless, easily compressed swelling, due to distention of the joint capsule, with joint fluid (synovia) which appears most prominently on the inner anterior surface of the joint and can be pushed through to appear on the inner and outer sides behind the joint. The bog spavin which is aimed at chiefly in the stallion law, is the one which is chronic from the first, appearing in the young animal apparently without external cause. The condition can hardly be mistaken from any other, but there is a tendency to excuse slight cases on the ground of being "a little full in the hocks." Whenever there is a distention which can be displaced from one part of the joint to appear in another, the diagnosis of bog spavin should be made, especially in young horses which have not seen service, but old horses which have seen service or have been transported, should not be faulted unless the swelling is hard, hot and accompanied by lameness.

Clean hock.

Bog spavin.

Curb.

Curb denotes an inflammation of the plantar or calcaneo metatarsal ligament, which braces the posterior face of the hock. It is due to an overstraining of this ligament either because of faulty conformation, such as sickle hocks, or to overstraining or slipping while in draft. A swelling appears four or five inches below the point of the hock, over the ligament and confined to it. It is best seen when viewed from the side. There is at first pain on pressure, a slight amount of heat and sometimes lameness.

Chorea.

Chorea is a general term made to include string halt, crampiness and shivering. String halt refers to a spasmodic flexion of the joints of the hind leg, especially noticeable at the hock joint. Its cause is not known, but it is thought to be of nervous origin. In mild cases the excessive flexion may be noticed only during the first few steps or upon turning, while in aggravated cases it is marked at each step.

String halt should not be confused with interruptions in the act of progression which are symptoms of some other conditions such as muscular cramp, bone spavin and inflammation of the stifle joint.

Shivering is purely of nervous origin and is manifested by irregular and involuntary movements, generally most noticed in the hind quarters. The intensity of the symptoms vary greatly, but an average case may show nothing unusual, so long as it does not become excited, but if stopped suddenly, made to back, is led into strange quarters or up to a strange watering place, marked inco-ordination may take place. The hind feet remain fixed to the ground, the back arched, and the muscles of the quarters tensed, but trembling and shivering. An attempt to raise one hind foot meets with great resistance. The worst cases may be affected with spavin accompanied by rapid pulse, high temperature and distressed breathing.

Sound hock.

Hock with curb.

The course is always prolonged, the condition becomes worse with age and is incurable. Because of these facts and because hereditary predisposition is a strong factor in the production of the disease, it becomes distinctly a breeder's problem.

APPENDIX D.

At the last session of the legislature the bill entitled, "An Act to regulate the public service of stallions and jacks in the State of California," was amended in sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 8 and 9, and added a new section, which is numbered 11½. These amended sections change the law in a number of places and should be carefully read.

In section 1 of the old law the last sentence is struck out. It is not necessary now to have the license recorded with the county recorder. This will save you the cost of recorder's fee.

In section 2 the words, "and tags," have been added after the words, "stallion or jack license certificates." This means that when a certificate is issued there will also be a metal tag issued bearing the certificate number and designating whether it is purebred, grade, crossbred, non-standard or mongrel.

In section 3 provision is made for the veterinarian to specify on the affidavit if the stallion or jack is affected with any communicable disease or with any of the diseases or unsoundnesses mentioned in section 4 of this act.

In section 4 certain diseases or affections have been added in the amendment and a part of those given in the old law have been dropped.

Section 5 has not been changed.

Section 6 makes provision for the metal tag, above mentioned, to be placed upon the harness or bridle at all times during the breeding season.

In section 7 of the old law the studbooks used were the ones recognized by the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. This is changed to read "Studbook recognized by said stallion registration board." This wording also appears in the certificates.

In section 8 the fees for new registrations, transfers and copies have been changed. New certificates are now $2.75, renewals $1.25, transfers $1.25 and copies $1.25 each. The additional 25 cents added to the old cost covers the cost of the metal tag which is made out with each certificate. The idea is to try and carry out the purport of the law and while there is an additional charge of 25 cents, the amended section 1 saves at least $1.00 by eliminating the recorder's fees, so there is really no extra tax.

In section 9 provision is made giving this board the power of investigating any complaint and the re-examination of a stallion if deemed necessary.

THE CALIFORNIA STALLION REGISTRATION LAW.

CHAPTER 677, 1911, AND 752, 1915.

An act to regulate the public service of stallions and jacks in the State of California, approved May 1, 1911.

[Amended in 1915. Approved June 12, 1915.]

The people of the State of California, represented in senate and assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Every association, person, firm or corporation standing or offering any stallion or jack for public service in this state shall cause the name, description, and pedigree of such stallion or jack to be enrolled by a stallion registration board hereinafter provided for, and secure a license from said board, as provided in section 3 of this act. All enrollment and verification of pedigree shall be done in the office of the secretary of the California state board of agriculture.

SEC. 2. In order to carry out the provisions of this act, there shall be constituted a stallion registration board, whose duty it shall be to verify and register pedigrees; to pass upon certificates of veterinary examination; to provide, when necessary, for veterinary inspection; to issue stallion or jack license certificates and tags; to make all necessary rules and regulations; and to perform such other duties as may be necessary to carry out and enforce the provisions of this act. Said board shall hold meetings at the office of the secretary of the California state board of agriculture the first Tuesday and subsequent days of February, May, August and November of each year, and such other meetings as may be necessary. Said stallion registration board shall be composed of three members, consisting of the president and secretary of the California state board of agriculture and the state veterinarian.

SEC. 3. In order to obtain the license certificate and tag herein provided for, the owner of each stallion or jack shall forward an affidavit on a form which shall be furnished by the stallion registration board and this affidavit shall be made by a veterinarian, legally qualified to practice as such in this state, to the effect that he has personally examined such stallion or jack. If said stallion or jack is free from communicable diseases mentioned in section four of this act, a statement to this effect shall be made on said affidavit by the examining veterinarian. If said examining veterinarian after examination finds such stallion or jack affected with any communicable disease or with any of the diseases or unsoundnesses mentioned in section four of this act, a statement shall be inscribed on such affidavit by said veterinarian specifying the disease or unsoundness so found. The owner of said stallion or jack shall also furnish to the stallion registration board the studbook certificate of registry of the pedigree of said stallion or jack when said stallion or jack is registered, and all other necessary papers relative to his breeding and ownership. Upon verification of pedigree and certificate of breeding (in case of purebred stallions or jacks), and receipt of veterinarian's affidavit as provided for in this act, a license certificate shall be issued to the owner; provided, however, that no license certificate shall be issued to the owner of any stallion or jack in case said animal is affected with any communicable disease; and provided, further, that when any stallion or jack is found affected with any of the diseases or unsoundnesses as mentioned in section four of this act, the license certificate so issued to the owner of said animal shall specify the disease or unsoundness with which said animal is affected.

SEC. 4. Any stallion or jack found to be affected with any of the following diseases or unsoundnesses is hereby deemed unsound and likely to transmit such disease or unsoundness to its progeny. and the license certificate issued to the owner of such a stallion or jack shall specify the disease or unsoundness as provided for in section three of this act:

Periodic opthalmia (moon blindness); cataract, laryngeal hemiplegia (roaring or whistling); pulmonary emphysema (heaves, broken wind); chorea (St. Vitus dance, crampiness, shivering, stringhalt); bone spavin, ringbone, sidebone, navicular disease, osteoporosis; curb, when accompanied with faulty confirmation of hock.

SEC. 5. The stallion registration board shall make and keep records of all stallions and jacks enrolled in the State of California; said stallions or jacks to be enrolled as "purebred," "crossbred," "non-standard bred," "grade," or "mongrel," according as the facts may have been determined. Upon making the enrollment of said stallion or jack said stallion registration board shall issue the above said license. The stallion registration board is authorized, in cases of emergency, to grant temporary license certificates without veterinary examination, upon receipt of an affidavit of the owner to the effect that, to the best of his knowledge and belief, said stallion or jack is free from infectious, contagious, or transmissible disease or unsoundness. Temporary license certificate shall be valid only until veterinary examination can reasonably be made.

SEC. 6. The owner of any stallion or jack used for public service in this state shall post and keep affixed, during the entire breeding season, a copy of the license certificate of such stallion or jack, issued under the provisions of this act, in a conspicuous place, both within and upon the outside of the main door leading to every stable or building where the said stallion or jack is used for public service, and at all times during the breeding season shall have attached to the harness or bridle of said stallion or jack a tag which shall be issued with the certificate. Each bill and poster and each newspaper advertisement shall show the enrollment certificate number, and state whether it reads "purebred," "grade," "crossbred," "non-standard," or "mongrel," and it shall be illegal to print or advertise any misleading reference to the breeding of said stallion or jack, his dam or sire.

SEC. 7. The license certificate issued for a stallion or jack whose sire and dam are of pure breeding, and the pedigree of which is registered in a studbook recognized by said stallion registration board, shall be in the following form:

FORM OF CERTIFICATE.

(Section 7 of Registration Law.)

PUREBRED.

CALIFORNIA STALLION REGISTRATION BOARD.

Certificate of purebred stallion or jack, No.-----The pedigree of the stallion or jack (name)-----Owned by-----Bred by-----

Described as follows:

This license expires on -----, 19-----.

Signed-----,

Secretary California Stallion Registration Board.

Dated this -----, 19-----, at Sacramento, Cal.

SEC. 8. A fee of two dollars and seventy-five cents shall be paid to the secretary of the California stallion registration board for the examination and enrollment of each stallion or jack pedigree, and for issuance of a license certificate and tag, in accordance with the breeding of the stallion or jack as above provided, which shall be in force and effect for a period of one year from its date, and for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act. The fee shall be paid to the secretary of the California registration board at the time the application is made for enrollment. Upon a transfer of the ownership of any stallion or jack enrolled under the provisions of this act, the certificate of enrollment may be transferred to the transferee by the secretary of the California stallion registration board upon submittal of satisfactory proof of such transfer of ownership, and upon payment of a fee of one dollar and twenty-five cents. A fee of one dollar and twenty-five cents shall be paid annually for the renewal of a license certificate and tag. A fee of one dollar and twenty-five cents shall be paid for a duplicate license certificate and tag upon proof of the loss or destruction of the original certificate.

SEC. 9. Whenever at any time the stallion registration board has reason to believe, or complaint is made, that any stallion or jack has been provided with a license certificate under false or erroneous representation, said stallion registration board is hereby authorized and empowered to cause an investigation to be made, and if in the conduct of such investigation it is deemed necessary by said board to examine said stallion or jack, the owner of said animal shall have the right to select a veterinarian, legally qualified to practice as such in this state, to act with a veterinarian of said stallion registration board in examining said animal, and in case these two shall fail to agree on a verdict or decision they shall appoint a third qualified veterinarian, with the consent and approval of said board and owner, which third veterinarian shall act as a referee therein and the decision of said referee shall be final. If, as a result of such investigation or examination, or both, it shall have been found that such stallion or jack is not legally entitled to the license certificate as provided for in this act, then said stallion registration board shall revoke the license in force, or provide the owner of said animal with a proper form of license certificate; provided, that the owner of any stallion or jack used for public service in this state shall have a lien on all colts sired by said stallion or jack for the service fee for a period of one year from the date of the foaling of said colt, as now provided by law.

SEC. 10. Every association, person, firm or corporation violating any of the provisions of this act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars ($100) for each offense; or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding fifty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

SEC. 11. The funds accruing from the above named fees shall be used by the said stallion registration board to defray the expenses of enrollment of pedigrees and issuance of licenses; to provide for the examination of stallions and jacks when necessary; to publish reports or bulletins containing lists of stallions and jacks examined, which shall be not less than one in each year; to encourage the horse breeding interests in this state; to disseminate information pertaining to horse breeding, and for any other purposes as may be necessary to carry out the purposes and enforce the provisions of this act. Each member of the above committee shall receive his actual expenses incurred while in the performance of any duty imposed under the provisions of this act; the secretary of said board shall receive for his services an amount to be fixed and agreed upon by said board. It shall be the duty of the said stallion registration board to enforce the provisions of this act, and to make an annual report, including financial statement, to the governor of the state on September 15th of each year.

SEC. 11½. The secretary of the stallion registration board, at least as often as once each month, and oftener if required so to do, shall report to the state controller the total amount of fees collected, and at the same time he shall pay into the state treasury the entire amount of such receipts. All such receipts shall be credited to the stallion registration board contingent fund, which fund is hereby created, and shall be held subject to the uses of the board as defined in this act.

SEC. 12. This act shall take effect and be in force on August 1st, 1911.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL.

CALIFORNIA STALLION REGISTRATION BOARD,

SACRAMENTO, October 4, 1916.

To Honorable HIRAM W. JOHNSON, Governor of California.

SIR: We have the honor to submit herewith our fifth annual report, in accordance with the provisions of chapter 677, entitled "An act to regulate the public service of stallions and jacks in the state of California."

This report covers the period of August 1, 1915, to July 31, 1916, and contains a financial statement showing the receipts and disbursements of the board for the above period and a statistical summary showing the number and breeds of the stallions in each county in the state.

While the total number of stallions registered this year is below that of previous years, it will also be noted that there is a substantial decrease in the number of mongrels. Another notable decrease is that of the various breeds, which is due to the slight importation of horses since the beginning of the European war. A number of horses died and quite a number were castrated during the past year, a list of which we intended to publish but which was destroyed by fire.

Respectfully submitted.

JOHN M. PERRY, President.

FIFTH ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

CALIFORNIA STALLION REGISTRATION BOARD.

Within the past ten years twenty different states have passed laws requiring that all owners of stallions or jacks, before standing them for public service, shall obtain a license for each animal from the state board created for that purpose. This board examines all pedigree certificates and veterinarians' certificates of soundness submitted, and enrolls and issues license certificates for all stallions and jacks entitled to such enrollment in accordance with the law. Such legislation has been enacted in the following states:

Wisconsin	January 1, 1906	Illinois	January 1, 1910
Iowa	March 30, 1907	North Dakota	January 1, 1910
Minnesota	April 23, 1907	Kansas	April 3, 1910
Utah	May 13, 1907	Washington	June 8, 1910
Pennsylvania	January 1, 1908	Oregon	May 20, 1911
New Jersey	September 1, 1908	Nebraska	July 7, 1911
Montana	March 8, 1909	California	August 1, 1911
South Dakota	March 9, 1909	Michigan	August 1, 1911
Idaho	March 15, 1909	Colorado	August 5, 1911
Indiana		Ohio

The details of these laws vary somewhat in different states, but all are more or less founded on the Wisconsin act, which was the pioneer state in this matter, but all require the submission of certificates of registration in studbooks certified by the United States Department of Agriculture, as evidence of the purity of breeding of stallions licensed as purebred, except that some provide in addition that stallions shall be accepted as purebred which are registered in studbooks of any American studbook or registry association which recognizes and records stallions having five pure top crosses.

That the state stallion law marks a distinct step in advance in our horse-breeding industry is hardly to be questioned. One of the first results of the operation of these laws was to provide data which show the actual facts with regard to the stallions being used for breeding purposes. Other important beneficial results are the rapid elimination of unfit animals and greater care with regard to breeding and registration. Under authority of paragraph 492 of the act of Congress, approved August 5, 1909, the following regulations were issued by the United States Department of Agriculture regarding the importation of animals for breeding purposes, in order to prevent fraud concerning the ancestry of purebred animals, which became effective on February 1, 1912.

RECOGNIZED FOREIGN BREEDS.

The following breeds of horses have been certified to the Secretary of the Treasury as recognized breeds and books of record across the seas:

Name of breed	Book of record	By whom published
Belgian Draft -----	Stud Book des Chevaux de Trait Belges.	Société le Cheval de Trait Belge, Chevalier G. Hynderick, secretary, 20 Rue Royale, Brussels, Belgium.
Clydesdale -----	Clydesdale Studbook -----	Clydesdale Horse Society of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Archibald McNeillage, secretary, 93 Hope street, Glasgow, Scotland.
French Draft -----	Studbook des Chevaux de Trait Français.	Société des Agriculteurs de France, J. C. Villevas, secretary, 8 Rue d'Athènes, Paris, France.
Hackney -----	Hackney Studbook -----	Hackney Horse Society, Frank F. Euren, secretary, 12 Hanover Square, London, W., England.
Percheron -----	Studbook Percheron de France	La Société Hippique Percheronne de France, E. Lemarie, secretary, Nogent-le-Rotrou, France.
Shetland Pony -----	Shetland Pony Studbook..	Shetland Pony Studbook Society, R. W. Walker, secretary, 3 Golden Square, Aberdeen, Scotland.
Shire -----	Shire Horse Society Studbook.	Shire Horse Society, J. Sloughgrove, secretary, 12 Hanover Square, London, W., England.
Suffolk -----	Suffolk Studbook -----	Suffolk Horse Society, Fred Smith, secretary, Rendlesham, Woodbridge, Suffolk, England.
Thoroughbred -----	Australian Studbook ----- Provided that no animal or animals registered in the Australian Studbook shall be certified as purebred unless such animal or animals trace, in all crosses, to animals registered in the General Studbook of England. General Studbook -----	Australian Jockey Club and Victoria Racing Club, A. P. Wilson, keeper, 6 Bligh street, Sidney, New South Wales.
Welsh Pony and Cob.	Welsh Pony and Cob Studbook.	Weatherby & Sons, 6 Old Burlington street, London, W., England. The Welsh Pony and Cob Society, John R. Bache, secretary, Knighton, Radnorshire, Wales.

Recognized breeds and books of record in Canada.—The Canadian National Records are recognized for the following breeds, provided that no animal or animals registered in the Canadian National Records shall be certified by the Secretary of Agriculture as purebred unless such animal or animals trace, in all crosses, to registered animals in the country where the breed originated, or to animals which are proved to the satisfaction of the department to be of the same breed and which have been imported from the country in which the breed originated:

Belgian Draft.
Clydesdale.
Hackney.
Shire.

Standardbred.
Suffolk.
Thoroughbred.
Welsh Pony and Cob.

The complete act to regulate the public service of stallions and jacks in California is given in full in Appendix D, as it will be found useful for reference by those concerned.

In Appendix B the various breeds are given in detail, and the numbers are of considerable interest. No pony-stallions have been registered.

The total number of registered stallions in the state is 1,133, principally classified as follows:

Mongrel, 288; Percheron, 391; Standard, 144; Belgian, 114.

The four leading counties are San Joaquin, with 87; Sonoma, with 58; Stanislaus, with 58, and Fresno with 97 stallions.

The decrease in the number of stallions licensed is more noticeable in the mongrels, which shows that the stallion law has had its effect for the betterment in breeding.

While the extensive use of the automobile and traction engine has no doubt been the primary factor in this large decrease, yet, on the other hand, the published graded registration of the California Stallion Registration Board has had a tendency to promote better breeding, thus carrying out the purport of the law.

We wish to thank the Stallion Division of the Iowa State Department of Agriculture for the use of the cuts illustrating the various certificates of the Registration Associations given in this report.

DESCRIPTION OF DISEASES ENUMERATED IN THE STALLION LAW.

A brief description of the diseases referred to in the California law is given below. This is not offered as a complete treatise, but only such features are mentioned as is thought will be of interest and assistance to persons especially concerned.

Periodic Ophthalmia—Moon Blindness.

This is a disease affecting the eyes of horses, probably caused by a germ. It is quite commonly called moon blindness because it was thought at one time that the moon had some influence on the cause of the disease.

There is undoubtedly a hereditary predisposition to the disease, but there are few cases to indicate that the disease itself is transmitted from parent to offspring, but rather the colt is born with a weakness of the eyes, transmitted by the stallion or dam. Other predisposing factors are low, damp (swampy) pastures, poorly ventilated or insufficiently lighted stables, over-feeding, etc.

The disease comes on with an inflammation usually of one eye. The transparent portion of the eyeball becomes bluish or white in color, most noticeable in the lower part (precipitate in anterior chamber). The eye is kept half closed on account of pain produced by light. Often this is associated by a swelling of the eyelids and reddening of the membrane lining them with a discharge of tears over the face. There is no indication of an injury or more severe inflammation at one point than at another. In one to two weeks these symptoms disappear and the eye may be practically normal to all general appearances for a period of usually one to three months, when another attack occurs more severe than the first. After a few attacks have come and gone the eye has a bluish appearance, looks cloudy instead of clear, the eyeball is shrunken, retracted in the orbit and the lens (inside of eyeball) becomes white (develops a cataract). Not being satisfied with having destroyed one eye the disease frequently affects the other and the history of the first is repeated.

Cataract—Opacity of Lens.

Immediately back of and covering the pupil of the eye is the lens. It is ordinarily not noticed because of its being transparent. Where it becomes clouded (opaque), however, the opaque portion is readily seen. As a rule cataracts soon involve the entire lens and the pupil then looks white, or grayish in color. There are many different classifications of cataract, as congenital, senile, primary, secondary, capsular, traumatic, etc., but as no distinctions are made in the law, the different kinds will not be discussed specifically.

Roaring (Laryngeal-Hemiplegia).

A paralysis, either partial or complete, of one or both recurrent laryngeal nerves. The most frequent causes of roaring are undoubtedly infectious diseases, such as strangles and influenza, and various forms of pneumonia. Heredity probably plays some part as a causative agent and for this reason the condition when present constitutes an unsoundness in stallions.

Paralysis of the recurrent laryngeal nerve leads to disuse of the muscles which tense the vocal cords. Looking into the larynx from in front, these cords can be seen to be stretched across the larynx from above to below, while between the cords and the sides of the larynx are two blind pouches or pockets, the lateral ventricles. Looking into the larynx from behind, the walls are smooth and unobstructed. During normal respiration the vocal cords are drawn to the sides of the larynx and the ventricles closed on inspiration, while on expiration they swing out into the larynx somewhat. In roaring, the cord or cords being paralyzed, hang more or less loosely in the larynx during inspiration and the air rushes into the ventricles.

The most striking symptom, therefore, is a laryngeal sound made on inspiration only. The sound varies from a whistling to a dull roaring, depending upon the degree of paralysis and also varies greatly in intensity from one which is barely perceptible only when the horse is being exercised to one which is so severe that the least movement or excitement may produce very distressing symptoms.

The two symptoms which are the most characteristic of roaring, therefore, are, that the sound is inspiratory only, and that it is greatly reduced or even entirely ceases within a short time after the animal is brought to rest. The best way of testing a horse for roaring is to put him under heavy draft in soft ground or gallop him in a circle with the head pulled in and turned slightly toward the right.

Navicular Disease.

A chronic inflammation involving the navicular bone, the navicular bursa, and the deep flexor tendon.

In this disease heredity, in so far as it influences quality of bone, quality of tendon and set of limbs, undoubtedly plays an important part. Aside from heredity, any factors such as dry and contracted hoofs, constant fast work on hard roads or pavements, and severe strains, as in running or jumping, must be regarded as causes, as they increase concussion or compression in the navicular region.

Navicular lameness is one of the most insidious with which we have to deal. The broad, flat foot, with large frog and open at the heels, is especially predisposed. The lameness usually comes on gradually and irregularly, resulting in a slow, cautious, short gait, with a constant attempt to keep the weight shifted toward the toe. Stumbling is quite characteristic. The animal usually stands with the affected foot in advance of the sound one, or constantly shifts its weight, if both are affected. There is a total absence of heat or swelling. Pain is increased when the animal is made to stand upon an incline or when pressure is put directly upon the frog. Because the weight is shifted toward the toes, the toes become worn short and the heels become high and contracted.

Great care must be taken not to confuse navicular lameness and shoulder lameness, or simple contraction of the heels, especially when accompanied by thrush.

Sidebone.

A transformation of the lateral cartilages into bone. The lateral cartilages are placed on the inner and outer sides of the foot, partly above and partly below the hoof head or coronet. Normally, they should be pliable and easily moved from side to side along their upper border by pressure with the thumb.

External injuries and lack of function, especially when accompanied by a low type of inflammation, are the most fruitful causes. Both these conditions are present in a hoof which, due to prolonged lack of frog pressure, has become dry and contracted, thus more freely transmitting shock which constantly comes to a foot in motion, and at the same time limiting movement and keeping up constant inflammation because of contraction of the hoof. An undue amount of body weight in proportion to the size and quality of hoof are also important factors. This is shown by the fact that some horses work upon city streets constantly shod with high calks and never develop sidebones. Therefore, selection is very important.

Sidebones are more frequent in front feet and in the other cartilage of draft horses. The ossification begins on the lower anterior border and proceeds upward and backward until completed. The first change then is when the hoof, and though we may be suspicious of its presence, a diagnosis can not be made until an ossified portion can be felt. The chief difficulty arises in examining heavy stallions which have very thick, harsh skin. A diagnosis should never be made until the foot has been picked up and the thumbs inserted deeply behind the cartilage, to detect pliability or the absence of it. As soon as ossification can be definitely determined, sidebones can be said to exist. The presence of sidebone seldom causes lameness in farm animals, but when animals so affected are put to work upon city streets where, because of continued shoeing, the feet become very dry, lameness often results. For this reason, buyers for the city markets object seriously to a horse having sidebones.

Ringbone.

"Ringbone" is an indefinite, collective term for various chronic aseptic inflammatory processes at the coronary joint. It should be divided into two forms, articular, involving the joint, and periarticular, involving the surface of the bone at the attachment of the ligaments around the joints. Ringbones of the first class are the result either of excessive concussion upon the bones of normal quality or ordinary concussion upon bones of poor quality. Ringbones of the second class are due either to excessive straining of the ligaments, due to an unbalanced condition within the foot and limb, or to faulty quality of the bones into which the ligaments are inserted.

It will be seen that the foregoing causes do not include bony growths in this region which result from deep wire cuts or other accidents. True ringbones then are the result of lack of quality or faulty formation, and consequently are very objectionable in breeding animals. It is well for owners to understand, however, that excessive strains may result from lack of trimming or faulty shoeing, and ringbones develop as a result.

Ringbone may involve either the first phalanx, the joints between the first and second phalanges, or the second phalanx, and the joint below it; they may be present in either front or hind limbs, though perhaps are found more commonly behind than in front. The most marked symptom is the presence of a bony enlargement on one or both sides or extending entirely around the joint. Care should be taken not to mistake the naturally prominent joints of young animals for ringbone. There is usually no local pain or heat, though lameness is persistent and severe, especially when the joint is twisted, as in turning short.

Ringbone around the lower joint causes a bulging at the top of the hoof and an irregularity in the production of horn, which leaves the hoof surface at the toe checked and cracked. If lameness is severe, the animal stands with the affected foot relieved of weight, or alternately raises and lowers it. The gait is slow and clumsy and marked by lack of movement in the pastern joint.

Bone Spavin.

Bone spavin is primarily a chronic inflammation of the inner lower tarsal bones and upper head of the metatarsal bones. Disease of the accompanying joints and enlargement upon the surface of the bones are secondary processes. In fact, in some spavins (occult spavin) no enlargement can be detected. Bone spavin, therefore, should not be defined as an enlargement upon the inside of the hock joint, as the enlargement is merely a symptom which may be entirely absent.

The usual cause of spavin is undue compression of the bones of the hock, though overstraining is also undoubtedly a cause. Any conformation, such as being too upright or too crooked either when viewed from the side or behind, as well as lack of quality to stand ordinary uses, are predisposing causes. True spavin, then, like true ringbone, is largely a breeder's problem. Although neither is directly hereditary, it is the predisposition in the form of defective conformation or quality which is hereditary.

The recognition of spavin depends upon the determination of a bony enlargement in the hock, if it be present, and an analysis of the lameness. Either may exist without the other.

The enlargement usually is found on the internal lateral surface of the hock. It may be detected by viewing the region from directly in front, looking between the front legs or from a little angle looking, first at one hock, then crossing over and viewing the other, from a similar angle. The hocks can best be compared by palpation by crouching behind the animal, crossing the arms and passing the forefinger of each hand over corresponding surfaces of the two joints at the same time. Any difference in size or contour can then be detected.

Spavin lameness is quite characteristic. It is usually more severe during the first few steps and gradually disappears with exercise, unless the lameness is severe, when it is either constant or increases with exercise. In any case there is always lack of flexion of the hock and a tendency to drag the toe which is best seen as the animal is led past the observer. This same lack of flexion necessitates an exaggerated action of the hip, which is best seen from behind as the animal is led away. Again, the animal usually shows pain when turned short upon the affected limb, and lameness is increased by holding the hock flexed for about one minute, and then starting the animal off at the trot.

Bog Spavin.

Bog spavin denotes a serious inflammation of the hock (tibiotarsal) joint. It may be acute at first, originating from a spavin, and finally becoming chronic, or it may be chronic in nature from the first, originating apparently from a congenital (inherited) weakness.

In the first instance there is swelling in the region of the joint, which is firm, painful, hot and causing severe lameness. In the second, more frequent form, there is present a soft, painless, easily compressed swelling, due to distention of the joint capsule, with joint fluid (synovia) which appears most prominently on the inner anterior surface of the joint and can be pushed through to appear on the inner and outer sides behind the joint. The bog spavin which is aimed at chiefly in the stallion law, is the one which is chronic from the first, appearing in the young animal apparently without external cause. The condition can hardly be mistaken from any other, but there is a tendency to excuse slight cases on the ground of being "a little full in the hocks." Whenever there is a distention which can be displaced from one part of the joint to appear in another, the diagnosis of bog spavin should be made, especially in young horses which have not seen service, but old horses which have seen service or have been transported, should not be faulted unless the swelling is hard, hot and accompanied by lameness.

Curb.

Curb denotes an inflammation of the plantar or calcaneo metatarsal ligament, which braces the posterior face of the hock. It is due to an overstraining of this ligament either because of faulty conformation, such as sickle hocks, or to overstraining or slipping while in draft. A swelling appears four or five inches below the point of the hock, over the ligament and confined to it. It is best seen when viewed from the side. There is at first pain on pressure, a slight amount of heat and sometimes lameness.

Chorea.

Chorea is a general term made to include string halt, crampiness and shivering. String halt refers to a spasmodic flexion of the joints of the hind leg, especially noticeable at the hock joint. Its cause is not known, but it is thought to be of nervous origin. In mild cases the excessive flexion may be noticed only during the first few steps or upon turning, while in aggravated cases it is marked at each step. String halt should not be confused with interruptions in the act of progression, which are symptoms of some other conditions, such as muscular cramp, bone spavin and inflammation of the stifle joint.

Shivering is purely of nervous origin and is manifested by irregular and involuntary movements, generally most noticed in the hind quarters. The intensity of the symptoms vary greatly, but an average case may show nothing unusual, so long as it does not become excited, but if stopped suddenly, made to back, is led into strange quarters or up to a strange watering place, marked inco-ordination may take place. The hind feet remain fixed to the ground, the back arched, and the muscles of the quarters tensed, but trembling and shivering. An attempt to raise one hind foot meets with great resistance. The worst cases may be affected with spavin accompanied by rapid pulse, high temperature and distressed breathing.

The course is always prolonged, the condition becomes worse with age and is incurable. Because of these facts and because hereditary predisposition is a strong factor in the production of the disease, it becomes distinctly a breeder's problem.

APPENDIX D.

At the last session of the legislature the bill entitled, "An act to regulate the public service of stallions and jacks in the State of California," was amended in sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 8 and 9, and added a new section, which is numbered 11½. These amended sections change the law in a number of places and should be carefully read.

In section 1 of the old law the last sentence is struck out. It is not necessary now to have the license recorded with the county recorder. This will save you the cost of recorder's fee.

In section 2 the words, "and tags," have been added after the words, "stallion or jack license certificates." This means that when a certificate is issued there will also be a metal tag issued bearing the certificate number and designating whether it is purebred, grade, crossbred, non-standard or mongrel.

In section 3 provision is made for the veterinarian to specify on the affidavit if the stallion or jack is affected with any communicable disease or with any of the diseases or unsoundnesses mentioned in section 4 of this act.

In section 4 certain diseases or affections have been added in the amendment and a part of those given in the old law have been dropped.

Section 5 has not been changed.

Section 6 makes provision for the metal tag above mentioned to be placed upon the harness or bridle at all times during the breeding season.

In section 7 of the old law the studbooks used were the ones recognized by the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. This is changed to read "Studbook recognized by said stallion registration board." This wording also appears in the certificates.

In section 8 the fees for new registrations, transfers and copies have been changed. New certificates are now $2.75, renewals $1.25, transfers $1.25 and copies $1.25 each. The additional 25 cents added to the old cost covers the cost of the metal tag which is made out with each certificate. The idea is to try and carry out the purport of the law and while there is an additional charge of 25 cents, the amended section 1 saves at least $1.00 by eliminating the recorder's fees, so there is really no extra tax.

In section 9 provision is made giving this board the power of investigating any complaint and the re-examination of a stallion if deemed necessary.

THE CALIFORNIA STALLION REGISTRATION LAW.

CHAPTER 677, 1911, AND 752, 1915.

An act to regulate the public service of stallions and jacks in the State of California, approved May 1, 1911.

[Amended in 1915. Approved June 12, 1915.]

The people of the State of California, represented in senate and assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Every association, person, firm or corporation standing or offering any stallion or jack for public service in this state shall cause the name, description, and pedigree of such stallion or jack to be enrolled by a stallion registration board hereinafter provided for, and secure a license from said board, as provided in section 3 of this act. All enrollment and verification of pedigree shall be done in the office of the secretary of the California state board of agriculture.

SEC. 2. In order to carry out the provisions of this act, there shall be constituted a stallion registration board, whose duty it shall be to verify and register pedigrees; to pass upon certificates of veterinary examination; to provide, when necessary, for veterinary inspection; to issue stallion or jack license certificates and tags; to make all necessary rules and regulations; and to perform such other duties as may be necessary to carry out and enforce the provisions of this act. Said board shall hold meetings at the office of the secretary of the California state board of agriculture the first Tuesday and subsequent days of February, May, August and November of each year, and such other meetings as may be necessary. Said stallion registration board shall be composed of three members, consisting of the president and secretary of the California state board of agriculture and the state veterinarian.

SEC. 3. In order to obtain the license certificate and tag herein provided for, the owner of each stallion or jack shall forward an affidavit on a form which shall be furnished by the stallion registration board and this affidavit shall be made by a veterinarian, legally qualified to practice as such in this state, to the effect that he has personally examined such stallion or jack. If said stallion or jack is free from communicable diseases mentioned in section four of this act, a statement to this effect shall be made on said affidavit by the examining veterinarian. If said examining veterinarian after examination finds such stallion or jack affected with any communicable disease or with any of the diseases or unsoundnesses mentioned in section four of this act, a statement shall be inscribed on such affidavit by said veterinarian specifying the disease or unsoundness so found. The owner of said stallion or jack shall also furnish to the stallion registration board the studbook certificate of registry of the pedigree of said stallion or jack when said stallion or jack is registered, and all other necessary papers relative to his breeding and ownership. Upon verification of pedigree and certificate of breeding (in case of purebred stallions or jacks), and receipt of veterinarian's affidavit as provided for in this act, a license certificate shall be issued to the owner; provided, however, that no license certificate shall be issued to the owner of any stallion or jack in case said animal is affected with any communicable disease; and provided, further, that when any stallion or jack is found affected with any of the diseases or unsoundnesses as mentioned in section four of this act, the license certificate so issued to the owner of said animal shall specify the disease or unsoundness with which said animal is affected.

SEC. 4. Any stallion or jack found to be affected with any of the following diseases or unsoundness is hereby deemed unsound and likely to transmit such disease or unsoundness to its progeny, and the license certificate issued to the owner of such a stallion or jack shall specify the disease or unsoundness as provided for in section three of this act:

Periodic opthemia (moon blindness); cataract, laryngeal hemiplegia (roaring or whistling); pulmonary emphysema (heaves, broken wind); chorea (St. Vitus dance, crampiness, shivering, stringhalt); bone spavin, ringbone, sidebone, navicular disease, osteoporosis; curb, when accompanied with faulty confirmation of hock.

SEC. 5. The stallion registration board shall make and keep records of all stallions and jacks enrolled in the State of California; said stallions or jacks to be enrolled as "purebred," "crossbred," "non-standard bred," "grade," or "mongrel," according as the facts may have been determined. Upon making the enrollment of said stallion or jack said stallion registration board shall issue the above said license. The stallion registration board is authorized, in cases of emergency, to grant temporary license certificates without veterinary examination, upon receipt of an affidavit of the owner to the effect that, to the best of his knowledge and belief, said stallion or jack is free from infectious, contagious, or transmissible disease or unsoundness. Temporary license certificate shall be valid only until veterinary examination can reasonably be made.

SEC. 6. The owner of any stallion or jack used for public service in this state shall post and keep affixed, during the entire breeding season, a copy of the license certificate of such stallion or jack, issued under the provisions of this act, in a conspicuous place, both within and upon the outside of the main door leading to every stable or building where the said stallion or jack is used for public service, and at all times during the breeding season shall have attached to the harness or bridle of said stallion or jack a tag which shall be issued with the certificate. Each bill and poster and each newspaper advertisement shall show the enrollment certificate number, and state whether it reads "purebred," "grade," "crossbred," "nonstandard," or "mongrel," and it shall be illegal to print or advertise any misleading reference to the breeding of said stallion or jack, his dam or sire.

SEC. 7. The license certificate issued for a stallion or jack whose sire and dam are of pure breeding, and the pedigree of which is registered in a studbook recognized by said stallion registration board, shall be in the following form:

FORM OF CERTIFICATE.

(Section 7 of Registration Law.)

PUREBRED.

CALIFORNIA STALLION REGISTRATION BOARD.

Certificate of purebred stallion or jack, No.-----The pedigree of the stallion or jack (name)-----Owned by-----Bred by-----

Described as follows:

Color ----- Breed -----

Foaled in the year-----, has been duly examined and it is hereby certified that the said stallion or jack is registered as number----- in----- studbook, said studbook being recognized by the stallion registration board of California, and is of pure breeding. The above named stallion or jack has been examined by-----, veterinarian, and is reported as----- and is licensed to stand for public service in the state of California.

This license expires on-----, 19-----.

Signed-----,

Secretary California Stallion Registration Board.

Dated this-----, 19-----, at Sacramento, Cal.

GRADE.

The license certificate issued for a grade stallion or jack, whose sire or dam is not purebred, shall be in the following form:

CALIFORNIA STALLION REGISTRATION BOARD.

Certificate of grade stallion or jack, No.-----The pedigree of the stallion or jack (name)-----Owned by-----Bred by-----

Described as follows:

Color ----- Foaled in the year -----, has been duly examined, and it is hereby certified that the said stallion or jack is not of pure breeding, and is, therefore, not eligible for registration in any studbook recognized by the stallion registration board of California. The above stallion has been examined by-----, veterinarian, and is reported as----- and is licensed to stand for public service in the state of California.

This license expires on-----, 19-----,

Signed-----,

Secretary California Stallion Registration Board.

Dated this-----, 19-----, at Sacramento, Cal.

CROSSBRED.

The license certificate issued for a stallion whose sire and dam are purebred, but not of the same breed, shall be in the following form:

CALIFORNIA STALLION REGISTRATION BOARD.

Certificate of crossbred stallion, No.-----

The pedigree of the stallion (name)-----

Bred by-----

Described as follows:

Color----- Foaled in the year-----, has been duly examined, and it is found that his sire is registered in the----- studbook as number-----, volume-----, at page-----, and his dam in the----- studbook as No.-----, volume-----, and page-----.

Such being the case, the said stallion is not eligible for registration in any studbook recognized by the stallion registration board of California. The above named stallion has been examined by-----, veterinarian, and is reported as----- and is licensed to stand for public service in the state of California.

This license expires on-----, 19-----.

Signed-----,
Secretary California Stallion Registration Board.

Dated this-----, 19-----, at Sacramento, Cal.

NONSTANDARD BRED.

The license certificate issued for a nonstandard bred stallion, shall be in the following form:

CALIFORNIA STALLION REGISTRATION BOARD.

Certificate of nonstandard bred stallion, No.-----

Bred by-----

Described as follows:

Color----- Foaled in the year-----, has been duly examined, and it is hereby certified and found that said stallion is not eligible to registration as standard bred, and for the purpose of this license is not purebred, although recorded in the nonstandard department of the American trotting register.

The above named stallion has been examined by-----, veterinarian, and is reported as----- and is licensed to stand for public service in the state of California.

This license expires on-----, 19-----,

Signed-----,
Secretary California Stallion Registration Board.

Dated this-----, 19-----, at Sacramento, Cal.

MONGREL.

The license certificate issued for a mongrel stallion or jack shall be in the following form:

CALIFORNIA STALLION REGISTRATION BOARD.

Certificate of mongrel stallion or jack, No.-----

The pedigree, as far as known or traced, of the stallion or jack

Bred by -----

Described as follows:

Color----- Foaled in the year-----, has been duly examined, and it is hereby certified that the said stallion or jack is of mongrel breeding, and is not eligible for registration in any studbook recognized by the stallion registration board of California.

The above named stallion has been examined by-----, veterinarian, and is reported as----- and is licensed to stand for public service in the state of California.

This license expires on-----, 19--.

Signed-----,

Secretary California Stallion Registration Board.

Dated this-----, 19--, at Sacramento, Cal.

SEC. 8. A fee of two dollars and seventy-five cents shall be paid to the secretary of the California stallion registration board for the examination and enrollment of each stallion or jack pedigree, and for issuance of a license certificate and tag, in accordance with the breeding of the stallion or jack as above provided, which shall be in force and effect for a period of one year from its date, and for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act. The fee shall be paid to the secretary of the California registration board at the time the application is made for enrollment. Upon a transfer of the ownership of any stallion or jack enrolled under the provisions of this act, the certificate of enrollment may be transferred to the transferee by the secretary of the California stallion registration board upon submittal of satisfactory proof of such transfer of ownership, and upon payment of a fee of one dollar and twenty-five cents. A fee of one dollar and twenty-five cents shall be paid annually for the renewal of a license certificate and tag. A fee of one dollar and twenty-five cents shall be paid for a duplicate license certificate and tag upon proof of the loss or destruction of the original certificate.

SEC. 9. Whenever at any time the stallion registration board has reason to believe, or complaint is made, that any stallion or jack has been provided with a license certificate under false or erroneous representation, said stallion registration board is hereby authorized and empowered to cause an investigation to be made, and if in the conduct of such investigation it is deemed necessary by said board to examine said stallion or jack, the owner of said animal shall have the right to select a veterinarian, legally qualified to practice as such in this state, to act with a veterinarian of said stallion registration board in examining said animal, and in case these two shall fail to agree on a verdict or decision they shall appoint a third qualified veterinarian, with the consent and approval of said board and owner, which third veterinarian shall act as a referee therein and the decision of said referee shall be final. If, as a result of such investigation or examination, or both, it shall have been found that such stallion or jack is not legally entitled to the license certificate as provided for in this act, then said stallion registration board shall revoke the license in force, or provide the owner of said animal with a proper form of license certificate; provided, that the owner of any stallion or jack used for public service in this state shall have a lien on all colts sired by said stallion or jack for the service fee for a period of one year from the date of the foaling of said colt, as now provided by law.

SEC. 10. Every association, person, firm or corporation violating any of the provisions of this act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars ($100) for each offense; or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding fifty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

SEC. 11. The funds accruing from the above named fees shall be used by the said stallion registration board to defray the expenses of enrollment of pedigrees and issuance of licenses; to provide for the examination of stallions and jacks when necessary; to publish reports or bulletins containing lists of stallions and jacks examined, which shall be not less than one in each year; to encourage the horse-breeding interests in this state; to disseminate information pertaining to horse breeding, and for any other purposes as may be necessary to carry out the purposes and enforce the provisions of this act. Each member of the above committee shall receive his actual expenses incurred while in the performance of any duty imposed under the provisions of this act; the secretary of said board shall receive for his services an amount to be fixed and agreed upon by said board. It shall be the duty of the said stallion registration board to enforce the provisions of this act, and to make an annual report, including financial statement, to the governor of the state on September 15th of each year.

SEC. 11½. The secretary of the stallion registration board at least as often as once each month, and oftener if required so to do, shall report to the state controller the total amount of fees collected, and at the same time he shall pay into the state treasury the entire amount of such receipts. All such receipts shall be credited to the stallion registration board contingent fund, which fund is hereby created, and shall be held subject to the uses of the board as defined in this act.

SEC. 12. This act shall take effect and be in force on August 1st, 1911.

REPORT

OF THE

State Capital Planning Commission

UPON

Its Investigation of the Planning of the Capital of California

CALIFORNIA
STATE PRINTING OFFICE
SACRAMENTO

SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, September 1, 1916.

Honorable HIRAM W. JOHNSON, Governor of California.

The State Capital Planning Commission offers for your consideration the following report upon its investigation of the planning of the Capital of California.

Respectfully submitted.

LYNN C. SIMPSON.

C. M. GOETHE.

C. F. DILLMAN.

J. L. GILLIS.

PICTURESQUE encampments of oxen-drawn prairie schooners, the arrival of mail packets by foam-covered pony express riders; booted, redshirted miners, standing in line, awaiting the opportunity of exchanging pinches of gold dust for the privilege of kissing a baby; strangely enough, such scenes as these saw the birth of city planning in the capital of California.

General Sutter's checkerboard planning

Amid such scenes was Sacramento laid out by General Sutter. This Swiss was familiar with the plans of European cities of his time. He knew the plaza system, so characteristic of Spain, and extended by her conquistadores throughout Latin America. He was only too familiar with the unfortunate, ugly, rigid, expensive checkerboard system of the American towns of his early nineteenth century. This picturesque first settler at Sacramento blocked out the city according to this then fashionable right-angled street type. Thus Sacramento inherited expensively planned, broad, residence-section streets, that will probably be a heavy burden on its taxpayers for many years to come. On the contrary, no provision was made for the needed broader streets in the business section, which has occupied the area from I to L streets since '49er days. Nor did Sutter outline diagonal streets. This opportunity, ever since neglected, is now probably gone forever. Behind the adobe walls of sleepy Sutter's Fort, in an atmosphere that had yet much of the Mexican's mañana, this founder of Sacramento, penciling by candlelight the first city plan, little dreamed that less than a century might witness the expansion that has come. He did, however, in his system of nine plazas, leave a monument. The neglect of some of these, even to this day, is an example of two necessities. One of these is of the existence of such a body as this State Capital Planning Commission. The other is the creation of a department in the city government, to check every municipal movement from the standpoint of city and of state. Costly city planning blunders should then at least be reduced in number. This commission may well lead in the movement to eventually restore these plaza monuments of Sutter to the people for recreation places, parked on the margin, with playgrounds at the center.

During the first decades of Sacramento's city planning history, some excellent results were obtained. Perhaps the most shining example is the anticipation, by many years, in her city waterworks system, of the now rapidly spreading municipal ownership of public utilities. The usual flat rate of 75 cents per month for water for domestic purposes, together with a free, unlimited amount for lawns, stands in almost brilliant contrast with other California cities, where water bills often exceed those for fuel gas or for lighting; where, instead of the refreshing green of lawns, resort is had to the use of such plants as mesembryanthemum, or even to spreading unsightly gravel as the covering of lot frontage areas, because of lawn water expense. This free water makes possible the trees, the gardens that form such a pleasing element in Sacramento's city planning.

Zueblin's coming changes the Sutter order.

The second or modern period of city planning in Sacramento was inaugurated, through the foresight of Mrs. A. J. Johnston and Mrs. R. T. Devlin, by the Women's Council's engagement of Professor Zueblin, then of the University of Chicago. A series of five town planning lectures were given at the assembly chamber in the state capitol. This use of legislative halls for the inauguration of the modern city planning movement in Sacramento was prophetic of the state's continued interest in the problems of her capital city. Following Zueblin's impressive exposition of the results in Harrisburg and other state capitals, an organization of businessmen was effected. These studied the subject, then arranged with Mr. Charles Mulford Robinson, the Rochester city planner, to come to Sacramento. His report is attached hereto as "Appendix A."

Zueblin.

Mr. Robinson, poet, artist as well as engineer, gave Sacramentans a new vision of city planning possibilities. Due largely to the newspaper campaign that occurred about that time, Sacramento acquired one of its best assets from a city planning standpoint—Del Paso Park, of over 800 acres. Though its acquisition dates within the last decade, this park is already worth 500 per cent of its cost. Although no municipal car line has as yet been constructed to this great recreation place, it is already the object of many excursions, from automobilists to walking clubs. This summer the city ran a trial and well-patronized jitney line to Del Paso. This park will preserve for all time a part of the magnificent park-like, primeval weeping-oak forest which once covered the entire Sacramento Valley floor. The state's interest in its capital city planning is here again made evident by the fact that Del Paso Park already shows signs of becoming a bird refuge along with Lake Merritt in Oakland, and even small parks, in Sacramento, as Southside and Sutter's Fort (the latter also a state park). These bird refuges are declared by modern game conservators to be necessary for the preservation of the wild bird life so important in reducing the losses from injurious insects. Had Mr. Robinson not stirred Sacramento, it is doubtful whether Del Paso Park would ever have been secured for the Sacramentans of all time.

on Robinson's foundation.

Mr. Robinson's report was earnestly studied by an ever-widening group of Sacramento citizens. The Chamber of Commerce, under the guidance of President D. W. Carmichael and Secretary-Manager S. Glen Andrus, the latter a student of city planning, took the leadership in crystallizing this growing sentiment for a definite municipal city plan for Sacramento. It was decided to obtain the advice of one of the foremost city planners in the entire world. Negotiations were entered into with Dr. Werner Hegemann, who had, under the patronage of the German kaiser, planned some of the wonderfully efficient German harbor and railway terminals and who was the leader of the new playground movement in Berlin. Dr. Hegemann's coming was of great value to California. He was afterwards recalled to this state by the cities of Oakland and Berkeley, spending an additional six months there. This action by the Alameda shore municipalities was indicative of the fluidity of city planning thought among California cities, of the value of such a commission as this to act as a clearing house among them. Dr. Hegemann's work on the planning of the transbay cities is one of the most valuable contributions to American city planning literature. His recommendation to Sacramento was, to undertake an educational campaign, including systematic newspaper publicity through short, newsy paragraphs, with a view to educating its citizens as to the benefits of city planning. A synopsis of the Hegemann report is attached hereto as "Appendix B." Following his suggestions, a city planning committee was organized in the Chamber of Commerce. This was called the "Committee of 150." It had fifteen sections. The ten social workers of each were employed with the solution of some particular city planning problem. Its aim was, within three years to so create public sentiment favorable to city planning that the city commissioners, who had hitherto refused to spend any public money on city planning, might be induced to engage an expert for the drafting of a definite municipal city plan.

The Nolen plan crowns Hegemann's work—prepares for units of accomplishment.

Long before these three years had expired, under the leadership of Commissioner Carraghar, a definite ordinance was passed to secure a city plan. Dr. John Nolen, the Massachusetts expert, was engaged. A synopsis of the very complete Nolen report is attached hereto as "Appendix C." It will probably be impossible to reproduce his excellent maps. Copies of the complete report are on file at the city hall, in the city library and in the state library. Dr. Nolen's preliminary report was filed with the city commissioners about the time our state commission was appointed by Governor Johnson. Efforts were made repeatedly by members of this commission to have the city commissioners adopt the Nolen plan. It was not, however, until a crisis was participated by the threatened invasion of a high grade residence district by a manufacturing plant, that the commission was moved to act. Residents of this section appealed to this board, as well as to the Chamber of Commerce Committee of 150, to join them in a forceful request to the City Commission that the Nolen plan be immediately adopted to definitely settle this question of manufacturing zones. On that day the commission, by a unanimous vote, wrote the Nolen plan into the city statutes. Such delays will always occur when there are over-worked officials, who, in selecting what is to be next accomplished, respond to that regarding which the greatest pressure is being exerted. Yet it is just such delays as these that constitute one of the strongest reasons for the existence of such a commission as this.

Greater Capitol Park
the first unit.

Since our board has been organized it has not been possible for it to accomplish much work of the kind that is apparent to the general public. This is due to two causes:

First, the long interval referred to above in which a busy city commission was considering the final adoption of the Nolen plan.

Secondly, the time consumed in reaching a solution of the problems involved in one of the greatest forward steps from the standpoint of the state government in the city planning movement in Sacramento. This was the capitol extension movement. Under this plan, which is now almost definitely worked out, the city of Sacramento purchased a considerable area bordering on the west line of the present Capitol Park. At the time of this report, the City Commission has almost completed its laborious work of the purchase of the many parcels of land in this area. The money for these was provided by a bond issue of the city of Sacramento. In the city planning sense, the present year will be noted, not only for the definite enactment into city law of the Nolen plan, but probably also for the close of securing the site for the Greater Capitol Park. Thus 1916 becomes the most important planning year in the city's history. These two things accomplished, this commission will then be in a position to commence definite work. Meantime a campaign is already under way in the Oak Park section, the most populous suburb of the city, for the acquisition, by the municipality, of one of the larger park areas recommended by Dr. Nolen.

The Deep Sea Canal an example of the elasticity of City Planning as to subsequent units.

What is the future of city planning in Sacramento? How can this commission be of additional service?

Answering the first question, city planning should be considered as a very elastic movement. It can anticipate only to a certain extent the needs of the future. It is true that many principles of growth are ascertained from the study of conditions of older cities. Many other conditions, however, must arise which are totally unforeseen. An excellent example of this, from a city planning standpoint, is the proposed Sacramento deep sea canal. If this be constructed, it will place Sacramento on an equality with Amsterdam in Holland, Seville in Spain and certain other European seaports that are situated at similar considerable distances from the ocean, thus depending upon river or canal connection with the sea. If this scheme, which is an excellent example of the benefits of city planning, is made an actuality, it may change the whole of Sacramento's future. This will be particularly the case if the commerce of the Pacific expands in the manner that many publicists believe it will. Sacramento would then be rapidly converted from a largely agricultural to a semi-industrial center. If such should be the case the city planning problems of the capital of California will become vastly complicated.

Value of this Commission as a moral force in crystallizing public sentiment favoring each unit.

As to the second question, the possibilities of this commission for service, it must be remembered that it works without any appropriation. It has no paid secretary. Its members themselves personally pay its current expenses. It is dependent upon volunteer service in much the same manner as was the Chamber of Commerce Committee of 150. Its value is largely that of a moral force working in the community and representing the interests of the state therein. The value of such a moral force should not be underestimated. The victory of the National Child Labor Committee, in finally obtaining the enactment in Congress of an interstate child labor law, announced in the dispatches as this report is being prepared, is an excellent example of the efficiency of such a mere volunteer body. The fact that our board was appealed to and that it assisted in making the showing to the city commission the day the Nolen report was adopted, is an excellent example of its possibilities of alert service. It can protest in the name of the state against those unfortunate, hastily-made blunders which occur characteristically in the city planning of American municipal democracies. It will be the policy of this commission to undertake, one at a time, the advocacy of various matters connected with the city planning of Sacramento, with a view to making the capital city a model for all California communities, as it has been first in making the city plan a part of its municipal law.

County Forestry a product of such a force.

The work of the Sacramento County Forestry Board, as a city planning element within the fifteen mile radius from the capitol, the radius fixed by statute as the limit of this commission's activity, is an example of the possibilities of such leadership. This work is now a municipal function of the county of Sacramento. Already a considerable portion of the forty mile, Sacramento-Mills-Folsom-Orangevale loop is systematically and permanently planted under a definitely planned system of roadside forestry. In this also has the state of California participated through the co-operation of the State Forester, who, with his staff, have been most generous of their time. The County Forestry Board was similarly inaugurated as a volunteer movement. It was carried on for several years at private expense, until the supervisors and the taxpayers of the county showed their belief in its value by creating here one of the first county forestry systems in the state. The work of this board has already aroused considerable interest which has led to actual planting in other counties of the state. Its correspondence covers an area from Glenn and Butte on the north to Monterey and Fresno on the south. It is through such volunteer agencies as this board, as the County Forestry Board, as the Chamber of Commerce Committee of 150, as the Women's Council, that the necessary municipal appropriations are made possible.

problem of that force.

Besides the recommendations in the Robinson, Hegemann and Nolen reports, the value of each of which must of course be tested by the citizenry of Sacramento, and which will probably consume several decades, perhaps generations, in execution, there are various city planning opportunities presenting themselves from time to time. This commission will continue co-operating as to these with bodies similar to those named in the last paragraph. At present members of this commission are actively engaged in assisting in the solution of the Sacramento playground problem. When this work is completed the board will decide upon the next undertaking to be carried to a successful issue. This may be anything from the development of a recreation beach on the American River to undertaking to solve the problem of a Union Station or the possible acquisition of a combined botanical garden, zoo and museum. The city is now definitely committed to an excellent city planning unit, the Municipal University. Such a botanical garden, connected with the university will assist in Sacramento's becoming the center of culture of Superior California. With its marvelous climate, Sacramento is capable of growing anything from the camellia of China, and the deodar of the Himalayas to the date palm of the Saharan oasis, the banana of the Honduras jungle, the larch, the birch of the Land of the Midnight Sun. Sacramento's future botanical garden can be made to rank with the famous gardens of Peradeniya and Buitzenzorg. Those tropical gardens are noted mostly because of their marvelous masses of tree bloom. Perhaps outside the tropics can these nowhere be better reproduced than in the congenial climate of California's capital city.

All such things must come slowly. They must come in accordance with the ability of the taxpayers to solve those problems of efficiency in disbursement of public revenues common to most American cities. Then money derived from taxes, even lower than at present, can be made to purchase these things which will better lead to an all-around development of our citizens. At such a time the capital of California, in its outlook upon life, may hope to approach the ideals of those earlier capitals, the Athens of Pericles, or the Florence of Lorenzo the Magnificent.

APPENDIX "A."

CONDENSED CITY PLANNING REPORT OF CHAS. MULFORD ROBINSON.

Dated November, 1908.

City planning, including curing past defects, must proceed slowly.

The timeliness of such a study is greater in the case of Sacramento than usual. Too often there has been delay until the city is built up so large that the expense of any but the smallest changes is almost prohibitive. Sacramento's area is still relatively small; there are still to be had, for park purposes, large areas of picturesque landscape. Railroads cut the town into a small inner square, skirting the two river fronts. The public has no direct access from the city to either stream. It is clear that Sacramento's fundamental problems are:

- (a) The control of the rivers.
- (b) The checkerboard street system. The railroad situation.
- (c) The need of country parks.

I shall make some suggestions that are not at once practicable: I shall recommend a larger program for improvement than it would be wise for you to undertake at once. But it will be a plan to develop, to work toward through the years as to a goal, to have before you, as a picture, the Sacramento that is to be your children's, and whose day you will hasten as opportunity offers, now in one direction and now in another.

First fundamental—Y street levee and Thirty-first street canal are undesirable city planning boundaries. Expand beyond.

Expressed in civic terms, this, the control of the rivers, is the question of extension of Sacramento's boundaries. If it were necessary to confine the city within the present levees, the anticipated increase of population could mean only a growing congestion, a piling up of land values within the restricted area, the consequent creation of a tenement population, with the physical and social evils which that involves. The beginnings of the effect are already evident in the very narrow lots, in the building of houses so close together that the gardens count for little, and in the erection of flats, along with the other evils, there is an increased fire risk, a serious menace where the construction is necessarily frame.

In such expansion, create industrial center.

Develop, on the American River, a big industrial center. There is no part of the city where manufacturers can have the facilities of both the Southern and Western Pacific roads and of the river. This is now abandoned to flood conditions. You could provide great docks and, along with the transportation facilities of two transcontinental railroads, an ideal arrangement of sidings and switches. In the reclaimed area back from the present bed of the American River would be home sites for the army of employees. Under these conditions there would be established, with proper reclamation procedure, a large and beautiful park on the banks of the Sacramento above the point where the American now flows into it, that would be convenient to these people. The action would also present to the city a powerful lever with which to induce the Western Pacific to give up the right of way between Nineteenth and Twentieth streets, which now gashes the city, that it might enter along the northern edge.

Practically Thirty-first and Y streets no longer confine the city's population. The retention of the open ditch on those streets is an anachronism that is working even greater injury to the outlying property than it is to the city. The suburban territory ought to demand annexation, if for no other reason than to get that ditch closed. The water should be carried by concrete sewer, the ditch covered. This should be one of the first steps to the greater Sacramento in which the suburbs are to have a part.

“B”

Second fundamental—Improve checkerboard, also lack of diagonals. Both unworthy of a state capital.

The checkerboard street plan has some advantages, of which Sacramento seems to be fully conscious. It has some serious demerits also. From the standpoint of traffic, to get from one point to any other point that is not on the same street, the plan requires the traversing of two sides of a triangle. A rapidly increasing number of people who have to make a daily trip to the business section of Sacramento live in Oak Park or in other equally distant subdivisions. There is also monotony about the present plan. As a further objection, it offers no building sites where a structure is inevitably prominent, or can be seen from a greater distance than across the street—unless it be made to front on the plaza. The economic loss, however, is that which will appeal to those people. This is not merely the expenditure of time and effort through having to travel extra distance, though that is serious enough.

It is also in rent and land values. Enclosed on two sides by rivers, Sacramento can grow now only to the east and southeast. A very large part of the population must be within walking distance of its work. If no diagonal makes it possible for a short cut, the radius of this area is made exceedingly short and there will be crowding in it. The next belt is that defined by a five cent car fare and about twenty minutes of time. With no diagonals, that area is also limited. I know of no city, which for economic reasons, has greater need of diagonal thoroughfares than has Sacramento, with its growth restricted to two sides and its business section at the corners farthest from those sides. The city should annex this surrounding belt of suburban country. The residents of that belt should seek annexation for what it would bring them—above all, for the abolition of the ditch and for the promise of the extended diagonal. Then the city should build the diagonal, assessing the cost in considerable part on the very greatly benefited outlying property, both inside and outside the city's present limits. The street itself, as a diagonal, would become—if we may trust the experience of other cities—a semibusiness street, and as such, some of the cost would be properly borne by its frontage.

Railroad locations as unfortunate as lack of diagonals.

Location of the tracks between Nineteenth and Twentieth and between R and Q streets, in both cases crossing the entire city, is exceedingly unfortunate. From a city planning standpoint, it would be difficult to find words of condemnation enough for such cutting of the city. As more and more the homes of people have to be built beyond those tracks, the extent of the evil will be better appreciated. Subways or viaducts may, at enormous expense, save lives and prevent arrests of street travel; but they will thrust heavy grades into the present convenient levelness of Sacramento streets; they will fix still more securely the depreciation of the property abutting on the railroads, and they will throw close within the city a new line of confining ramparts or an enclosing ditch.

Every possible effort should be made to secure the abandonment of those rights of way.

Develop Sacramento as a real capital.

Sacramentans should see in it an obligation to make their city worthy to be the capital—so noble, so beautiful, that there will never be thought of moving it again. In doing this they would be following the lead of the capitals of other states—as of Boston for Massachusetts, Providence for Rhode Island, Hartford for Connecticut, Harrisburg for Pennsylvania, Denver for Colorado. In every one of these capitals, and of course in Washington as the capital of the nation, individuals or commissions of experts have been retained to make comprehensive plans for the city's improvement. And in all the cases there has been recognized the fact that the problems of a capital city are not quite the same as those of an industrial community, that there should be about it more of the grandiose, the spectacular and splendid. To secure the execution of these plans in so far at least as they affect the setting of the capitol building, its dignifying and emphasizing, there is coming also to be recognized the justice and appropriateness of the state's co-operation with the city. The whole nation takes financial part in the beautifying of Washington because Washington stands for the nation. The state of Minnesota has been co-operating in the creation at St. Paul of great avenues and malls that will open beautiful vistas of the capital. In Ohio the legislature is to be asked this year to assist in a splendid scheme for transforming Columbus. California, rich, proud, progressive, may well take a part in doing something that will make worthier her capital and the setting of its capitol building. But the city must do much so as to show itself deserving of such aid.

Quickly annex, then city-plan the suburbs.

Regarding plans for subdivisions outside the city. It is important that the city extend its boundaries as quickly as possible, so as to be able to require that a certain standard of convenience and excellence shall be had by platted streets or tracts before they will be accepted. This standard would require, among other things, a continuity of thoroughfares, without regard to real estate ownership, that would conserve the convenience of the public rather than perpetuate the individual ideas of the early owners of large tracts. As an example, a broad street of such fine possibilities as Magnolia avenue, in Oak Park, ought not to stop abruptly at Lower Stockton road without direct continuation simply because the road happened to mark the boundary of the original tract. The whole suburban region should be planned comprehensively, as a coming section of the greater Sacramento. I should be most glad, when the topography offers any excuse, to see even some curving roads, than which no streets are more delightful for residence. The through, or arterial streets that radiate from them should have a width of not less than eighty feet, as will carry the bulk of travel. To make one of them 100 or 120 feet wide, and boulevard it, would be well. The minor streets should be comparatively narrow, the lots large. The side parking should be generous throughout this region, which is strictly residential.

“C”Third fundamental: Need of country parks.

Sacramento has a population, in round numbers, of 50,000. In planning the parks it will be wise, such is the promise of the city, to look forward to the time when it will have 100,000 or 150,000 population. Sacramento has, secondly, a climate which makes parks serviceable throughout the year. This necessitates a relatively larger park area per capita than is necessary where eight or nine months present the maximum of annual efficiency. Signs of wear in a park are destructive to its park value. Thirdly, Sacramento is very closely built. The small lots are creating an actual congestion, most deplorable in a city of its size. This means that the mass of the people are to be dependent on public reservations for their outdoor life—that the parks will not only be used more continuously than in many other cities, but more generally, and that they must, if they are to fulfill their proper functions, be so situated as to be easily and pleasantly accessible, from the homes.

Existing parks do not fill the need.

Capitol Park, in the heart of town, is a beautiful and valuable asset. It is, however, state property, over which the city has no control. There is unfortunately likely to develop a tendency on the part of the state to use it as building sites, as the need for additional office space shall arise. It is not seriously to be considered, therefore, as a park factor. There are a number of city squares or plazas. These are delightful breathing spaces, adding much to the beauty of the city; but serving none of the functions of country parks. There are McKinley and South Side parks—the former very incompletely and poorly developed, the latter only commenced. These are admirably located; and they are of appropriate size for the purpose which they serve—neighborhood parks. There is need for country park facilities.

With reference to the Rancho del Rio, for the suggested purchase of 1,000 acres there, or even 450 acres that lie west of Freeport road, I should have no sympathy. The city should buy just what it wants. This would be a matter of something like 200 acres. In addition, the city should obtain a 200-foot right of way, directly through to Freeport road, passing en route the proposed station of the Sacramento Southern. It should obtain the entire shore of the lake, of which only the eastern margin is included in the ranch. It should, further, obtain at least a footpath to the river. From these holdings an admirable and useful park could be created. The ground is gently rolling and the scene is made picturesque by scattered oaks, and is soothing in its character.

Coming east and north from the Rancho del Rio, it is a great pity that there is available no good park site before the American River is reached. I would recommend and urge that the city—after annexation—purchase the Oak Park recreation grounds. This is a pretty, though small, ready-made park, just where it is much needed. It would serve as a neighborhood park, performing the same useful function as South Side and McKinley.

Secure big park on Rancho del Paso.

With reference to the Haggin grant tract, this is now the most inaccessible of the considered sites. There is promise, however, that a new electric road will throw a bridge over the American River, and either cross the tract or come so close to it as to make it accessible. Because of this promise—which would have to be assured—and because of the very high order of its beauty, I favor—considering, too, the exceedingly low cost—the city's acquirement of this tract. The character of the scenery, consisting of wild woodland, with the lovely glades opening unexpectedly and presenting pictures that might well belong to an English park, is such that it would be most unwise to alter its natural beauty.

A park should be acquired along the Sacramento River and the American River below Twelfth. This is a very beautiful bit of country, which the city should secure and preserve. This affords, too, the only opportunity now remaining to the citizens for recreative enjoyment of the river. By utilizing the country road as a parkway—if such arrangements can be made—it may be possible to get a long drive without much purchase.

Boulevards, linking big park with all local parks, would create a real park system.

With this distribution and variety of park tracts, Sacramento would have an excellent system, one far more useful than any single very large tract could be. The proper function of a park is not so much to stun visitors, as to serve the people who live in the town and pay the taxes. It is the possession of well-distributed park areas, that has given their pre-eminence to the four most famous systems in the country—to those of Boston, Minneapolis, Kansas City and Chicago.

commission.

Sacramento should have a park commission. I advise securing such a commission before the additional park lands are bought. The city has parks enough now to justify a commission. Before embarking on a more liberal park policy the machinery for interested, intelligent and watchful care should be arranged. Parks, to succeed, must be kept out of politics. A distinct branch of municipal government, composed of unpaid appointive commissioners, is essential to proper park care. Sacramento ought to be ashamed to be one of the few cities in the United States that are still without a park commission.

The streets of the city are unusually well paved, curbed, and cared for. In that respect Sacramento stands high, very high, among cities of her size. The streets are marred, however, by blemishes: poor tree care, poles and wires, too short a radius in the curb curves at many of the corners, projecting overhead signs, sidewalk location.

Street forestry and parking.

Trees should be put in charge of the park commission or of a city forester. There should be uniformity of planting, both as to spacing and to variety of trees, and there should be constant care of the trees. These things can be assured only by municipal control and a definite municipal responsibility. Of the kinds of trees to plant on the city streets, I favor the black acacia and the elm. The palms I consider suitable only for very formal effects. In their case, especially, there should be an accent at the avenue's end—as is provided by the Capitol at M street. When the fan-leaved palms are planted, the training of nasturtiums or English ivy about the trunk adds much to their beauty. The care of the trees will include also proper trimming, best accomplished by expert service which the city could employ. M street is a striking example of the æsthetic lack of this, sprawling branches almost shutting out the view of the capitol. Trees that grow to good size should be put forty feet apart.

There is no need of comment from me on the disfigurement of the streets by the poles and wires; on the menace of falling wires; on the handicap which wires offer to fighting fires, or on the danger threatening traffic by the many poles which now stand in the gutter.

I would urge the removal of front fences. Nothing gives to a city a more village-like aspect than does this survival, and while the matter is one that rests with the property owner, not with the city government, in this, he has much to gain. Finally, there is need of a building line establishing the minimum distance from the front lot line at which a building may be placed.

The school yards of Sacramento are of good size; but in a city that has the reason to boast of its outdoor flowers throughout the year they are very bare. There is no need of sacrificing play space for this provision. Planted close to the side-lot line, against the school walls, massed in the corners of the lot, or making a beautiful entrance, they will take away the uninviting aspect of the grounds and may make this most frequent sort of public property contribute to the attractiveness of the city without trespassing on the ground the children need for play.

The children themselves should be interested, perhaps setting out the plants, so that they will protect them; and the plants and flowers can be turned to good account in nature study. When there is room, as fortunately there often is in the Sacramento school grounds, there is no better location for a modern playground than a school yard.

from more buildings.

Keep Capitol Park free from buildings. Of Capitol Park, also since it is state property, I am not required to speak. The value of this tract to Sacramento is so great, however, that I venture one or two suggestions. I have referred to the probable development of a tendency to put buildings in the park. To oppose this Sacramento should enlist the interests of the whole state, to the end that so unique and beautiful a state possession may not be ruined. The trimming of trees which now break the street vistas of the capitol is also to be requested.

I have two closing words of encouragement. (1) The financial condition of the city is vastly better than that of many other communities. On a low assessment valuation there is a large margin of borrowing capacity. Sacramento can afford to do a great deal. If it fails, the cause will not be lack of opportunity, nor of incentive, nor of money, nor of not knowing what to do. It will be lack of spirit. (2) The co-operation of citizens, through the affiliation of many organizations with the Chamber of Commerce, is most promising. In making possible, without relinquishment of organization independence, the focusing of public attention and the emphatic expression of public opinions, it makes available a mighty power for the progress of Sacramento. The movement should be strongly encouraged. In it is a practical, concrete, beginning of the unitedness which will render Sacramento prosperous and beautiful.

APPENDIX "B."

DIGEST OF DR. WERNER HEGEMANN'S REPORT, 1913, UPON CITY PLANNING OF THE CAPITAL OF CALIFORNIA.

Present growth without hope; change this attitude. Begin with school children.

Sacramento seems to grow without any hope of direction toward efficient development. There seems to be something like an undesirable, a probably preventable war, between diverging interests like railroad companies, levee propositions, real estate operators, builders, corporations, and public interest, as far as the latter are taken care of by city ordinances. This somewhat chaotic condition seems to find expression in the absence of any map of Greater Sacramento. I suggest the creation of a good survey map containing all contour lines, the character of the land built upon, solid, or detached houses, streets built or proposed, trees, levees, overflow land, railroad tracks and switches, railroad property, different kinds of pavements of streets, parks, playgrounds, cemeteries, farm lands, etc., and its uses indicated by different colorings and shadings. Publish this map, together with an inspiring, illustrated description of the city, its history, growth and future, in order to arouse a sense of civic spirit, especially among school children. Wacker's Manual for Chicago, published by the Chicago Plan Committee, may be used as an example.

"B"

Some agency (i. e. the perpetual, city planning body proposed hereinafter) should collect, digest, and convert into available form (by bulletins, by regular contribution to the newspapers) the latest developments.

Awaken Sacramento to the monotony of its rectangular streets.

The extreme monotony produced by the Sacramento system of streets, all intersecting at the same angle, all of the same width, all named by some mathematical figure, and nearly all, with the exception of the Capitol avenue (i. e. M and Eleventh streets), leading nowhere—the rectangular street system making it difficult to bring a building to prominence—makes it especially desirable to place at least something like a distinguishing sign on the corner of every street. This monotony struck me in a very surprising way. I spent eleven years of my boyhood in the city of Mannheim, laid out very similarly to Sacramento, on the rectangular plan and naming its streets like Sacramento, by letters, in a way altogether unusual in Europe. The great difference between Mannheim (of 75,000 in the 80's, a city of 200,000 today) and Sacramento comes from the fact that instead of the one capitol building made prominent by its location in Sacramento, quite a number of buildings are made prominent in Mannheim, especially the main building of the city, the castle, corresponding to the Sacramento capitol, containing today, school, museums, courts and offices. It is so very large that it can be seen at the end of not only one, but of many of the streets.

Create demand for uniform sky line around Capitol Park.

Even when walking on the sidewalks of Capitol avenue or M street, the Capitol building can not be seen. This could be remedied, if ever a somewhat more formal setting of the Capitol should be considered, by creating a promenade in the middle of M street, as they are found in many other cities, for example: in Boston, Commonwealth avenue, or Berlin, Unter den Linden. Decorate the Capitol grounds and its surroundings, i. e., as the civic center of the city and the state; i. e., as a kind of sacred entity ruled by special ordinances, somewhat similar to those that rule Monument Place, Indianapolis; Copley Square, Boston; Mount Vernon Place, Baltimore, or many famous places in European capitals. In order to protect the appearance of the Capitol grounds, the height of buildings around the Capitol grounds uniformly must be kept down. Any building higher than four stories would destroy the scale and diminish the size of the Capitol building. This, especially, will have to be considered in making plans for the new government buildings on the blocks west of the Capitol grounds.

A uniform building line must be established, preventing undesirable structures like apartment houses, etc., to come forward to the present street line. A uniform kind of sidewalk, and especially, of planting the streets leading around the Capitol grounds must prevail.

“E”

Educate State to surround First building of State with a Court of Honor.

Everything must be done to protect M street in its present width, i. e., including the present distances between buildings and the street line. M street is the only wide street in town. Leading towards the bridge, as it does, it more and more will become a very important thoroughfare. If properly treated and protected M street may, with the Capitol in view, become one of the most beautiful streets anywhere. If not protected nor properly developed it will become as meaningless and vile in appearance as K street, with its lack of shade and mixup of competing structures. No attempt has been made to create anything like a dignified setting of the Capitol building. The trees that surround the main building of the state create nothing like a dignified court of honor adapted to the forms and outlines of the building, bringing it into prominence as the planting around the stately buildings of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries do. The finest building can be destroyed by poor setting. The defect of the Capitol grounds planting can be remedied by transplanting a few dozen trees at a cost of about $125 per tree and taking three years time. This money, in connection with the new arrangement of the two blocks west of the Capitol grounds and with the development of M street, may be very well spent.

“F”

Develop sentiment to use native Californian trees.

It is very hard to be understood why in Sacramento, where trees grow so easily, not a single street should be found lined by beautiful trees of similar size and character for any long distance. The beauty of the native trees of California must be brought into much greater prominence somewhere in this country. As in so many cases in other cities, some means must be found to give the Park Commission or the Forestry Board influence on these improvements, and, also, to secure the cost from the abutter as done, for instance, in Denver. The item of civic beauty is more important here than in other cities; if Sacramento wants to make the best of its opportunities as a capital city, and if it wants to attract attention besides the bay cities.

“G”

Without energetic city planning, Sacramento can not compete in inter-city struggle.

The only hope for the smaller city to compete with the big cities is by not having temporarily better conditions, but by developing a system of city planning that insures the better conditions to stay while the city grows. Though Sacramento has to house a population of less than 100,000, the investigations made, for instance, by Mrs. Von Wagner in 1912 and by Miss C. Schleef in 1913, show that any amount of bad housing can be found in Sacramento. Much of the shameful situation can be directly traced back to defects in the planning of the city, i. e., to bad location of streets furnishing insufficient outlets in the different directions, insufficient transportation, unsatisfactory size of lots, undesirable types of buildings, over-speculation in land, creating too high a level of prices. The results of these defects have been deplorable even for the development of such a small town as Sacramento. Their effects, however, must become tremendous if, as some people foresee, the growth of the city should be quickened by economic reasons, as, for instance, the opening of the Panama Canal and the coming of another type of immigrants. It seems very difficult, sometimes even impossible, for unskilled workmen that earn from $1.50 to a little over $2.00 per day, without getting work all the year around, and paying from $10.00 to $12.00 a month for their shelter, to get desirable accommodations for this money. There is quite a large people, therefore, not speaking of the sick and physically deficient, that must crowd into undesirable quarters or take lodgers unless better planning takes care of their needs. The reasons that many people of small income will not get into better housing accommodations are not only to be looked for in high land values. The reasons have largely to be found in an insufficient transportation system that make distances between working and dwelling places unduly long. The gridiron plan upon which Sacramento is built renders certain suburbs peculiarly remote because accessible only by following the right angle of a triangle instead of following the hypotenuse.

“H”

Street system an example of unfortunate city planning.

Mr. C. M. Robinson, in 1908, very judiciously advised the building of radial streets. For instance, following the course of Sacramento avenue from the southeast through the heart of the city toward the northwest, would shorten the distance workingmen have to cover in going from the Southern Pacific shops to Oak Park, over a mile. Since 1908, however, a number of buildings have been built to bar the execution of Mr. Robinson's plan. Many of the present rectangular streets are to be considered as side streets for residential purposes and a considerable amount of money can be saved by paving roadways from fifteen to twenty feet only and by parking the rest with exceptions of turning points for vehicular traffic from time to time. Even if the cost of keeping up the parking should be as high as keeping up the repair of the pavement, the parking is better because the original outlay is much smaller and the attractiveness of a well-parked residential street is much better than a residential street provided with wide pavements that make for heat and dust. The residential streets of Sacramento that are never to carry any through traffic are much too wide. If the old part of the city is already too much built upon to think of changing the gridiron system, at least something must be done to develop the radial connections outside of the built-up checkerboard.

"I"

Sacramento should understand its street car bill is excessive.

The most efficient way of opening up the country around Sacramento and of overcoming the deficiency of the gridiron system will be the development of the cheap street car lines. A city as small as Sacramento pays the same rates for a ride on a street car as are paid for the very much longer hauls in the city of Cleveland, with a population near to 800,000, where the three cent fare is introduced. The large profits (estimated at one and a half million dollars in 1920) to come for the street car lines of Sacramento as has been figured out by conservative calculation, should make it possible to develop more long distance travel at five cent fares. The city must use its right to fix the rates of street car companies in order to force it to provide cheaper rates or longer hauls, the latter being more important for the development of good housing and the further decentralization of the crowded condition of the city.

"J"

People should demand a livable river front and better housing.

The plans made at present for West Sacramento form a very important part in planning for Greater Sacramento. Everything on the other side of the river must be watched very carefully. There seems to be at present a tendency to develop the western river front of the Sacramento River very similar to the eastern river front, as a district of warehouses. It seems desirable, however, to have, at least, this part of the river developed in a fashion to assure the enjoyment of one part of the river to the people of Sacramento. The problem of the river front to be considered with the industrial future of the city is closely connected with the housing problems of Sacramento. The most efficient location of a new district of warehouses and factories in connection with the best service in water and railroad transportation will have to be selected by a transportation engineer, instead of leaving the determination of such important questions to the interests of the railroads alone. The franchises of the Western Pacific give the city the right to ask for the raising of the Western Pacific tracks in 1917. Also a number of franchises of the Southern Pacific are expiring. This opportunity of forcing the railroads toward a comprehensive treatment of the future railroad development should not be lost sight of. Especially desirable would be some dignified connection between the Crocker art collection, one of Sacramento's finest assets, and some piece of the water front reclaimed for public benefit. Remember the enormous crowds attracted by the Chicago Art Gallery on the water front of Michigan Lake. The present state of the people of Sacramento being cut off altogether from the river seems unbearable. With the growth of Sacramento, the district west of Tenth street, which at present suffers from the most deplorable housing conditions, can be turned more and more into a business district. It is highly desirable that the increasing population will not be crowded out to overcrowd another district of the city, but will be educated to a higher housing standard. This will need some active work along city planning lines.

“K”

Industrial district: Building code. Both needed.

The erection of industrial districts, provided with the best railroad and water facilities, should be, probably, first, somewhere between Sacramento River, the American River and the city or, second, south of the city. This touches the problem of districting the city's area for different uses from an economic point of view (after touching it from an æsthetic point of view in connection with the protection of Capitol grounds and M street). The creation of such districts as attempted by the new building ordinances prepared by Building Inspector Rutan follows the judgment of the best authorities and is confirmed by the best experience all over the world. There is no reason in the world why Sacramento should permit anything like the type of office building, that better should be termed “office slums,” as is to be found in bigger cities. On the contrary, Sacramento should make it a point to produce better conditions in order to compete successfully against the bigger cities. An efficient move in this direction will be making plans not only for the individual office building but for the whole block. Only by carrying out this more comprehensive kind of architectural planning, the maximum of truly rentable office space can be produced, and big, and well-lighted court yards can be got instead of a mixup of little dark light wells. The example of the new cannery of Libby, McNeil & Libby—they could not find a proper location with water transportation and have had to injure a high class residential district—shows from another point of view how necessary is the creation of an industrial harbor with plenty of factory sites, such as is said the city of Oakland is doing quite nearby.

Have a perpetual city planning bureau to do these things.

Any work of this kind, be it the location and development of a factory district, of proper housing for the workingman with very modest income, or the protection of high class residential districts of a civic center, needs the continuous co-operation of the civic bodies well informed about the local matters and local conditions and about the development of city planning in other cities. A great number of cities have appointed special and perpetual committees with a staff of city planners, the work of which is supplemented by the statistical agency of the city. Not to speak of some European cities, it may be mentioned that in America, for instance, the city of Philadelphia and cities of Canada have their city planning bureaus. No city can successfully provide for its needs without having some perpetual planning body of some kind. It will be necessary to provide it with sufficient paid and unpaid help to carry on a continuous work of research into the different lines of city planning.

APPENDIX "C."

QUOTATIONS FROM PRELIMINARY REPORT ON SACRAMENTO, BY DR. JOHN NOLEN, CITY PLANNER, CAMBRIDGE, MASS., 1915.

(Complete copies on file in City Library and State Library.)

By reference to the check list, you will see the list of plans submitted. The exhibit number you will find pasted on the back of each plan in the upper left-hand corner.

The plans for the park system are submitted directly to the Board of Park Directors, under whose direction the work has been done.

The curve of population has been drafted in my office, to show the steady increase of the population of Sacramento from 1850 to date, and a projection of the recent curve to 1950, when the population, on this basis, would be at least 120,000. This diagram gives confidence in the future of Sacramento, and a safe basis for planning ahead. Without question, a large population must be provided for in the future.

SOME CITY PLANNING PROBLEMS OF SACRAMENTO.

1. The railroad approaches to the city and a union station.
2. The best location of the railroads and the general problems of grade crossings.
3. The water front and its treatment.
4. The linking up of steam, electric lines, and water transportation.
5. The location of future bridges.
6. The needs of the retail business district.
7. The transportation requirements of the future, including wider car line streets and cross-town car service.
8. Relief of the monotony and waste of the present plan of the old city.
9. The establishment of main lines of communication in the annexed territory, east and west, north and south, radial and circumferential.
10. Building districts or zones, industrial, business and residential. Separate sections for tenements and apartment houses.
11. The establishment of building lines, fixing by city authority the distance from streets and from property lines.
12. The permanent limitation of the heights of buildings.
13. The regulation and control of land subdivision.
14. The selection and development of land for a comprehensive park system, including parks, playgrounds, plazas, school grounds and other public open spaces.
15. The development under suitable plans of all public property, including that of the federal government, the state government, the county and the city.

Some of the recommendations, directly or indirectly embodied in the preliminary plans submitted, are the following:

That the general plan for a park system for Sacramento, as shown in Exhibit No. 1, be studied, and if found satisfactory, approved as a guide to future park developments.

That the extension of main lines of communication, the better treatment of street intersections, and the proper distribution of open spaces of all sorts, should be given first consideration by the city authorities in their general policy of improving Sacramento. A scheme for this work on broad lines is submitted in the Preliminary Plan Showing Conditions, Improvements, and New Planning of the Old City and the Annexed Territory. (See Exhibit No. 2, C. P.)

That city ordinances should be passed, fixing by authority the zones or building districts of the city. This should be done not merely to safeguard residential districts from unnecessary depreciation, but also to enhance values in districts set aside for industrial and business use.

That the possibility of the rearrangement of existing 80-foot streets be considered. Cross sections are shown of 80-foot streets adapted for the business section, minor sections, parked sections, and a special street, including a playground where the street area might actually be abandoned to playground use. (See Exhibit No. 5, C. P.)

More than 50 per cent of the area of the old city is taken up in streets and alleys; 30 per cent would be liberal allowance for a city of the character of Sacramento. This means that at least 20 per cent of the 3,000 acres in the old city, or about 600 acres of the most valuable land in Sacramento, is worse than wasted. It would reduce the cost of upkeep many thousand dollars a year, save time in transit for both people and goods, and increase the income of the city from local taxes, because more property could be used productively.

That consideration be given to a better utilization of a typical block in the old city. A plan is submitted for a down town block, showing how a minor street might be opened from K street, and by widening the alley between K and J, or K and L, additional frontage might be obtained and a better utilization of all the property in the block. (See Exhibit No. 6, C. P.) A fuller statement of the advantages and disadvantages of this proposed arrangement follows:

	Old plan	New plan
Frontage on main thoroughfare (K)-----	320 feet	280 feet
Frontage on main street (J or L)-----	320 feet	320 feet
Frontage on secondary streets (numbered)-----	640 feet	600 feet
By new plan loss of 40 feet on main thoroughfare.
By new plan loss of 40 feet on secondary streets.
By old plan, block contained-----	102,400	square feet
By new plan, block contained-----	88,800	square feet
Loss -----	13,600	square feet

By new plan 760 feet frontage on 40-foot streets added, and 160 feet frontage on small open space, which more than offsets loss of 40 feet on main thoroughfares and 40 feet on secondary streets. The loss of 13,600 square feet represents property that could not before be utilized for business purposes. By the new plan all the land is well connected with street frontage, and can therefore be profitably employed for business purposes.

There is also submitted a plan for the subdivision of a residential block in the old city, by means of which a local block playground or a local block garden could be obtained in the center of the block. An arrangement of some blocks in Sacramento on these lines has already been carried out. That the City Plaza be made the official civic center of Sacramento, grouping around it, in addition to the city hall, the public library and art gallery, a combined auditorium and office building, the future post office, and other public and semipublic structures. By the new city plan, direct diagonal connections with the City Plaza could be made with the Union Station Plaza. (See Exhibit No. 7, C. P.)

That local or neighborhood centers be developed in various sections of the city. By combining open spaces and parks with the grouping of public and semipublic buildings round about these open spaces at important street intersections, these local centers can be made of great interest. Such development will also increase land values and stabilize development. Simply as an illustration of the way in which these local center suggestions can be carried out, a plan is submitted for the intersection of Monte Vista boulevard and Vine street.

That the subdivision of property into blocks and lots be placed more strictly under public regulation and control.

THAT STEPS SHOULD BE TAKEN WITHOUT UNNECESSARY DELAY TO MAKE SACRAMENTO MORE AND MORE WORTHY OF ITS UNIQUE POSITION IN THE STATE AS THE STATE CAPITAL. AS A STEP TOWARD THIS END, IT IS RECOMMENDED THAT PROVISION BE MADE FOR THE EXTENSION AND PROTECTION OF THE CAPITOL GROUNDS, AND FOR THE DIRECT EXTENSION EAST OF CAPITOL AVENUE TO ITS TERMINATION IN THE PROPOSED EL DORADO CIRCLE AND EL DORADO PARK.

That the opportunities afforded by city planning to give LOCAL COLOR and distinctiveness to a city like Sacramento should be embraced. This can be done partly by the adoption of more suitable names for streets and open spaces, ESPECIALLY WHERE THE HISTORY OF A CITY IS SO FULL OF INTEREST AND ROMANCE. It may also be accomplished by planning the streets, open spaces, and homes so as to take advantage of the traditions, climate and vegetation of California.

REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT.

To the Governor of California.

SIR: In obedience to the organic act of the Industrial Home of Mechanical Trades for the Adult Blind, the Board of Directors has the honor to submit the thirty-first annual report of that institution.

Of the inmates present during the year ending June 30, 1916, forty were of foreign birth and forty-four were natives of California. The rest were born in other states of the Union.

As in all institutions for the adult blind, broom making is the leading industry, and the blind workmen during the year manufactured 112,084 brooms and whisks, of which 107,607 were sold and delivered. The collections for the industrial output and other sources for the year amounted to $26,456.82.

The inmates earned and were paid wages amounting to $8,389.65.

The daily cost of food for the inmates was 28 cents per capita.

The sales of manufactured output were well sustained, notwithstanding the eastern and local competition and the decline in the use of brooms, caused by vacuum cleaners and other processes for doing the work once performed with brooms alone.

There are certain uses of special styles of brooms that can not be taken over by other devices, and it is the aim of the institution to occupy that field as far as possible.

The new dormitory was occupied during the year, and together with the new office, refectory and women's dormitory, it gives to the Home a housing deserved by its dignity as a state institution and its beneficent purpose.

In our reports heretofore, this board has put forward the humane function of this Home. The adult blind have only one protection against the despair of introspection due to their misfortune, and that is in manual occupation. When taught a handicraft they become contributors to their own support, and also to the commonwealth. This maintains their wholesome self-respect and independence, and lifts them out of the nonproductive and indigent class.

The European nations now at war find their heaviest task to be providing for their soldiers who are blinded in battle.

A California lady, Mrs. Geo. A. Kessler, now a resident of England, has taken a high part in this work and has sought assistance in her native state.

In an interview concerning her work, she said:

“The number of young fellows blinded in this war is appalling. Since the attack on Verdun began the number has swelled enormously. It is so easy for a soldier to be blinded. Every fighter who sticks his head out of a trench runs this danger. Shells, hand grenades, gases—every agency of modern warfare adds to the roster of the blind.

There is a little convalescent home at Cookham on the Thames near our country place. I worked in this hospital for a year and a half, and I have had considerable experience with the blind. At first they are terribly depressed. In their depths of despair they want to kill themselves. But when they discover that life still holds something for them to do they become quite happy. With the deaf the morbid state of mind seems to persist; but it is not so with the blind, once they realize there is work which they can do. Until this realization comes to them they suffer terribly. Remember, they are in a different position from those who were born blind. They are fine, strong young fellows who have been plunged with dreadful suddenness into the black sea.”

This will be recognized as a restatement of what has been so often said in these reports. It points the one only way to ameliorate the condition of the adult blind—occupation, useful manual labor in the handicrafts possible for the blind to learn and practice.

Happily California has not before it this problem in the magnitude that war has caused abroad. But our problem is the same in kind and differs only in degree. Its solution here is the function of this Home, and its record of thirty-one years vindicates its establishment and stands in evidence of its success. We invite the aroused benevolence of Europe to study its methods and especially to be impressed by the fact that it has become a model for others to follow, under the superintendency of a blind man. This, because amongst the thousands of battle-blinded men are those qualified by business ability and experience to do the same work for their brethren in misfortune that has been done here by Mr. Joseph Sanders, the blind superintendent of the Home. Numerous institutions like this must rise in all the warring countries, and each, we are persuaded, must follow the same means to usefulness and success which have made this institution the pride of the state.

The Board of Directors expresses its appreciation of the support of the Governor, the executive departments, and the legislature of California, and also of the industry and fidelity of the officers and employees of the Home and of the loyalty and industry and good conduct of the blind inmates.

It is proper to refer here to the report of an investigation made of this institution by members of the State Board of Charities and Corrections, and published in the last report of that body.

The investigation and its deductions were made upon the basis of scholastic institutions for the juvenile blind. It was therefore an attempt to compare what is incomparable, and the recommendations which followed would have been ruinous to the discipline and destructive of the usefulness of this institution. For this reason our duty to our commissions, our oath of office and the stricken men and women in our care, required nonacquiescence in the recommendations issuing from that investigation.

JNO. P. IRISH,

President of the Board.

Subscribed and sworn to before me, this 18th day of September, 1916.

Our dormitory building is completed and it is not only a credit to the engineering department but will ever stand as a monument to the generous impulses of Governor Johnson and the members of the legislature, who made its construction possible. It is modern and up to date in every respect, and will add to the health and comfort of the inmates. It is built of reinforced concrete, and will compare favorably with any building of like class in the country. It is an addition to the institution, and fills a long-felt necessity. Visitors, both local and from abroad, comment upon the beauty of its appearance, and marvel when informed that the entire cost was but $50,000.00. It is practically fireproof, and therefore removes from our mind the dread of fire which has haunted us for years and has been a source of constant anxiety.

The convention of the Workers for the Blind was held at the School of the Deaf and Blind, in Berkeley during the month of June. It was most successful and was largely attended, and I trust will prove of benefit to those who took an active part in the proceedings and who have the welfare of the blind at heart, and also to those who are engaged as superintendents and teachers in the institutions in the different states and Canada.

A number of the delegates visited this institution and inspected our buildings and workshops. Our work was highly commended, and I was flattered and gratified by the expressions of approval of our efforts to place on an equal footing the sightless with the sighted mechanic. The endorsement of our efforts came from those whose life and labors are spent amid surroundings similar to our own, and who know from knowledge obtained by observation and a close association the capacity and the requirements of those who are physically defective from loss of vision. These men and women are looking for practical results, and are not misled by the theories of the uninformed—theories which accomplish nothing, but breed confusion, stir up strife, and create inharmony. I was much impressed with a number of these delegates, especially with Mr. Charles Campbell, who is one of the most distinguished workers among the blind in America. Mr. Campbell informed me that this institution was the equal of any in the country, and was surpassed by none. This expression of approval, coming from one who is recognized as an authority on institutions for the blind, both educational and industrial, is a commendation which should carry great weight, and to me was most significant, especially when I am aware that many earnest, charitable, and sympathetic people are misled by those who preach theory and are unacquainted with the practical. Practical work among the blind is what has made this institution what it is, and, measured by results, I can but echo the thoughts of Mr. Campbell when he said, "It has no superior in the country."

The only logical way to help the blind help himself, is to remove, as far as possible, the stumbling blocks from his pathway, and make him feel that through honest endeavor he can be as useful as the sighted mechanic. It is true that his earning capacity is limited, at the same time he should be taught to realize that a close application to his duties will surely bring its reward; and, although of necessity he is forced to live in a world made narrow by reason of his loss of sight, at the same time he should realize that if he does his very best he is doing as well as does the most gifted man that the country can produce.

I am more than ever convinced that broom making is the blind man's trade; for the blind women, chair caning and whisk-broom making. Other trades can be taken up, but only in a limited sense can they be carried on successfully. They can not be carried on and return to the workers a just compensation for their labor. Many trades are recommended to the blind mechanic. Few of them to my certain knowledge are practical, and the person who endeavors to earn a living by following them will surely meet with failure and disappointment.

Centralization of trade, and the co-operative endeavors of the large manufacturers, have destroyed the individual efforts of the sighted; how, therefore, can we expect the blind mechanic to meet and overcome the conditions which his sighted competitors find impossible to control? I feel that broom making for the blind should be encouraged, and made as simple as possible. If first-class work is insisted upon, good results will follow, and returns made to the diligent worker which will repay him for his toil; and while fortune may not smile upon him as we would wish, at the same time his life will be made full, and the satisfaction that he has done his best, and is a useful member of society, will be constantly with him—a source of happiness and contentment.

We have removed the wooden floor from our broom factory, and have laid one of bitumen in its place. This is an improvement which adds greatly to our manufacturing plant. The cost of the improvement was $1,500.00.

In closing this report, I wish to state that the year just closed has been a prosperous one, when we take into consideration the trade conditions which exist throughout the United States. We have much to be thankful for, and enter the new year filled with confidence and with a determination to use all our faculties to build up this institution and make it the model industrial institution for the blind in every respect.

I take this opportunity to thank the Honorable Board of Directors for the great assistance they have rendered, and for the active part that they have taken in its management. Also for their generous support and kindly advice which they have given me at all times; and in behalf of the blind, who are their special care, I thank them, and take this opportunity to express to them our appreciation for all that they have done for us.

We have been allowed by the legislature the sum of $4,000.00 for improvements. We intend among other things to rebuild our tank tower; paint the broom factory, the women's workshop and the smoking room; and lay new roofing where required. We also intend to improve the grounds, and make a general clean-up of the property. We have erected about 600 feet of iron rail, which is to be paid for out of this appropriation, and was erected as a guide for the inmates from the dormitory buildings and the shops. Delegates to the Convention of Blind Workers were much pleased with this rail, and declared that the erection of such a rail would be recommended to the directors of eastern institutions.

We have increased the efficiency of our broom factory by installing a power broom sewer. This sewer is operated by blind men, and adds greatly to the appearance of our brooms. The trade demanded a better sewed broom than could be done by hand; I was therefore compelled to install it, and have not regretted doing so, as we will save money by the outlay.

I have also purchased an auto delivery, which adds to the efficiency of our service department and makes our factory more up-to-date.

I take this opportunity to thank the officers and employees of the institution for their efficient and faithful labor, and for their honest endeavor to render just service to the state. I also extend thanks to our physician, Dr. Myra Knox, who has been a most zealous and conscientious worker among the blind, and who at all times has willingly administered to their needs, and has gladly responded to the numerous calls made upon her by those requiring medical assistance and professional advice.

Respectfully submitted.

Superintendent.

The appropriations received from the state during the year were as follows: Support, $18,999.49; salaries, $12,499.85; total, $31,499.34.

The average number of inmates at the institution during the year was 120. The yearly cost per capita was, therefore, $262.08; the weekly cost was $5.04; the cost per day was 72 cents.

The cost of provisions alone was $11,902.22. The cost per capita for provisions was, therefore, $99.19; the cost per week was, therefore, $1.91; the cost per day was 28 cents.

The average number of persons residing at the Home during the year (including employees) was 144. The cost per capita was, therefore, $218.40; the cost per week was $4.20; the cost per day was 60 cents.

The cost for provisions alone was $11,902.22. The cost per capita for provisions was, therefore, $82.65; the cost per week was $1.59; the cost per day was 24 cents.

The year just closed has been a prosperous one. All the inmates who were able to labor have been constantly employed. Both the broom factory and the women's workshop have been running full time, which is a source of gratification as well as of pride to the management, because the seeing factories have felt the pinch of dull times, which has materially reduced their output.

Our outside washroom and lavatory has been completed at a cost of $1,000.00. This fills a long-felt necessity, being a great convenience and an addition to the institution. It is sanitary and up to date in every particular. The old washroom and lavatory, which has stood for thirty years, has been torn down and the ground whereon it stood has been filled in and improved.

Our tank tower has been torn down and rebuilt, at a cost of about $1,000.00. It is now safe and presents a fine appearance. In this connection I would state that the question of water has become a most serious one. For the first time in about fifteen years our wells have been unable to supply our needs. The matter has been taken up with the state engineering department, with the hope, that with their assistance a greater supply may be obtained.

I take this opportunity to express my appreciation of the faithful and efficient services of our physician, Dr. A. F. Maine, and to thank him for the very able manner in which he performs his duties, for his affable and courteous bearing toward all, and for his willingness to answer all demands made upon his time, either day or night.

I extend my thanks to the officers and employees of the institution for their faithful and untiring devotion to the interests of the Home.

In conclusion, I desire to thank deeply your honorable body for the honor conferred upon me, and for the good will and assistance you have rendered in the execution of my charge and its duties. It has been, and shall be, my continual endeavor to carry out faithfully the responsibilities devolving upon me, and to execute the worthy aims of yourselves.

Respectfully submitted.

JOSEPH SANDERS,
Superintendent.

Second Biennial Report

OF THE

California School for Girls

Ventura, California

From July 1, 1914, to June 30, 1916

CALIFORNIA

REPORT OF BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

VENTURA, CALIFORNIA,

September 15, 1916.

To His Excellency HIRAM W. JOHNSON,

Governor of the State of California.

It is an honor and a privilege to submit to you the second biennial report of the California School for Girls covering the sixty-sixth and sixty-seventh fiscal years.

The present condition of the school now established at Ventura justifies your approval and support of the legislation of 1913 that enabled the state of California to properly and scientifically segregate, observe, educate and train the girls who have become its wards through the judgment of the Juvenile Court.

The first appropriation of two hundred thousand dollars was exhausted in July, 1913, when three large buildings were completed and ready for occupancy. We did not move the school from Whittier at that time, as it seemed unwise to occupy the three buildings during the construction of seven others provided for by the legislature of 1915.

Moneys appropriated were expended as follows:

Chapter 401, Statutes of 1913.....	$200,000 00
Land, 125 acres.....	$22,000 00
Expenses, Site Selecting Commission.....	787 50

Well and water system	11,100 00
Service connections	3,906 06
Grading for buildings	2,200 00
Pole line	1,000 00
Road	2,000 00
Furnishings for three buildings	6,591 53
Salaries, January 13, 1914, to June 30, 1915.....	24,762 38
Maintenance, January 13, 1914, to June 30, 1915.....	30,093 97
	<hr/> $200,000 00
Appropriation, new buildings, 1915.....	$89,000 00
Chapter 239—Commissary building	$7,000 00
Chapter 240—Farm buildings	6,000 00
Chapter 241—Manor house and furnishings.....	6,000 00
Chapter 262—Surface drains	7,500 00
Chapter 318—Two cottages, detention building, and furnishings	52,500 00
Chapter 319—Garage	2,500 00
Chapter 320—Improvement of grounds	7,500 00
	<hr/> $89,000 00

The school now has accommodations for 126 girls. As this is only a small percentage of the number that need the training the school affords, we respectfully submit the following requests for additional land, buildings, etc.:

- Six cottages for 26 inmates each, and furnishings.
- Administration building.
- Trades building, with auditorium, gymnasium, etc.
- Improved water system.
- Water tank, one million gallons capacity.
- Electrolier lighting system for grounds.
- Fifty-seven acres of land adjoining property on west.

The purchase of land we especially recommend. It is a full-bearing apricot orchard that requires a large force of men and women for six or seven weeks every year to harvest the crop. These people live in tents in the orchard. This year they added much to the worry of the management at the school—the men tried in every way to attract the attention of the girls. Each night there was much disturbance from the noise of shouting and singing. The ownership of this property, besides being a protection, would enable us to increase our income.

We respectfully recommend that the legislature of 1917 will increase the salary of the superintendent of the school to $3,600.00 per annum, thus rating this institution with the Preston School of Industry and the Whittier State School.

One out of every three girls admitted to the school is definitely feeble-minded. These girls should never be permitted to return to society, nor should they be associated with dependent defectives. In our opinion, provision should be made at this institution for the care of all defective delinquent girls.

The indeterminate sentence is imperative, not alone for the mentally deficient, but for the young women of normal mentality, who would be benefited by a longer stay in the school but who are automatically released at twenty-one. We especially urge legislation on this subject.

We believe there should be established in the southern part of the state a colony for the permanent custodial care of such defectives as would be a menace to society and whom no amount of training or education would ever fit to take a normal place in the community.

We feel that the policy of the school adopted by the board of trustees is showing gratifying results; with the improved facilities at Ventura these will be more marked and definite as time goes on. The measure of success of this policy is due to the able superintendency of Mrs. C. M. Weymann, whom you had appointed as one of the trustees of the school and who we persuaded two years ago to serve in the more difficult and responsible position that she now holds.

Mrs. Weymann has shown a sympathetic understanding of the individual girl, a comprehension of school management, and she has been courageous in meeting the complicated situations that have confronted the school in this period of transition and removal. We wish at this time to express our appreciation of Mrs. Weymann's work and that of the able body of her teachers and coworkers.

Mrs. Weymann's report of the work of the school in detail follows.

SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT.

VENTURA, CALIFORNIA,

October 1, 1916.

*To the Board of Trustees,
California School for Girls,
Ventura, California.*

LADIES: During the week of June 25, 1916, we moved the school from Whittier to Ventura. The means of conveyance was our auto truck. Number of people moved, 100; 71 girls and 29 matrons and teachers.

We succeeded in avoiding any publicity. Our girls appreciated the protection given them, and expressed it by their excellent conduct and cheerful and willing assistance and obedience. My coworkers deserve the highest praise for untiring interest and willing service. The cost of moving was less than two hundred dollars, not counting wear and tear on auto truck.

Our work during the past two years has served a purpose and has a value, but it means almost nothing as far as solving the problem is concerned. Protection should be given to these young women before their morals are destroyed. All the training that we can give or they can take does not alter the fact that we get them too late.

There should be established a special school under state control where the apparently different child could be sent by either the parents or school authorities for observation and scientific segregation. From here they would be returned to their parents and the public schools or to the proper state institution for education and training for a determinate or indeterminate period.

If an equal amount of money now invested in private and public charities and state and sectarian institutions was used in preventive measures, the wards of the state would not be criminal and immoral as now; their minds would not be dwarfed and twisted, and better results would obtain.

Especially will we be called upon to answer for the delinquency of the feeble-minded girls, who have been permitted under our very eyes and in our own neighborhoods to become mothers, thus poisoning the life-stream of humanity. If we desire good citizens we must see that children are not born of subnormal parents. Of our 104 girls now in the school, 34 per cent are mentally defective.

Under the present law these irresponsibles must be returned to society at twenty-one to live whatever lives they may choose. It is the offspring of such as these that continue to populate hospitals for the insane, reform schools, penitentiaries, and homes for feeble-minded. The mentally defective girl never reaches the point of understanding where she suffers from the stigma of immorality, but the girl of normal mentality who has a desire to reconstruct, does understand, and realizes that there is little, if any, incentive for a change in conduct in face of society's definition of her former failure and the universal double standard of morals.

We are attempting to eradicate this thought from her mind. On entering the school she is told of its purpose, our attitude of friendship, and of the opportunities at her disposal. She is then examined by the physician and psychologist; if found in need of medical or surgical assistance, that need is supplied. She is placed in the department that seems best fitted for her immediate requirements, and is given the school work that is recommended by the psychologist.

Her past becomes a closed book from the day she is admitted to the school. No reference is made to it by any one. Thus, through lack of opportunity to express in words thoughts of the circumstances that caused her delinquency, she is forced into a new line of thought that results in a general reconstruction of ideas.

We are handling two distinct problems. One group is to be returned to society, the other should have permanent custodial care.

The girls of normal mentality are not required to devote much time to carpet-weaving, gardening, poultry-raising, etc., as their stay in the school is short, and they must not be deprived of the training necessary to make them efficient wage-earners in occupations open to them in society.

The other group of defectives we are training to a permanent interest in the lines mentioned. This group is much easier to control and make happy, and could become profitable contributors to a colony of their own kind under kindly and constant direction.

That the policy of expression is right I am fully convinced—that our hands and hearts have been full to overflowing in establishing this policy goes without saying. To secure women who are in full sympathy has been difficult. It has required time and patience to persuade many of my coworkers to see in time of difficulty the girl as part of our problem, and not as an offending individual. To have the girl punished for impertinence, disobedience or profanity, is to the majority of officers much more important and satisfactory than to give of herself for an hour or hours, perhaps, to induce the girl to change her attitude and return to her department to “make good.”

That it is difficult to accept these undesirable expressions is obvious; that it pays in the end no one can doubt. With the confidence and cooperation of all the men and women in the state who have declared themselves in sympathy with the so-called delinquent girl, much of the nerve-strain would be removed. No man or woman should assume the responsibility of criticising any condition, policy or system, without ascertaining first-handed the causes that have led up to it and through experience be able to compare results with the methods that preceded it.

School work.

Much stress has been laid on the formal education that apparently should be accorded girls in the school. We have been compelled to place the school work as secondary, for at least 75 per cent of our girls are intemperately nervous, due to venery before entering the school. Moral degeneration is the cause of their entrance here; therefore, moral regeneration must of necessity be our first consideration. We studiously avoid continual sedentary occupation for this group, in which, unfortunately, the girls of normal and superior mentalities are included.

Mrs. Ina Hazlett, who supervises all the schoolroom work, has accomplished much with the ungraded children. One of our girls, who had attended high school before coming to us, assisted in teaching this group. Another girl became an assistant teacher in the physical culture department. We found this student-teaching most successful.

School enrollment for two years.....	90
Average attendance per month.....	18
Average enrollment per month.....	26
Average in commercial work.....	6

One graduate from the commercial class we paroled as office assistant at $15 per month. This young lady has $115 in the bank that she has saved out of her salary, and is still serving in this position.

Following is Mrs. Hazlett's report of the work of five pupils in the schoolroom who are graded as morons:

"No. 1. This girl is affectionate, and in a way ambitious; seems to realize in a way that something is amiss, and has an abnormal fear of ridicule. She works hard, comprehends slowly, retains little. For example: An arithmetic lesson learned two weeks ago would be a new lesson today. Geography to her is a book with lessons, but when she is made to understand seeing the world (as she has seen a great deal for one of her age) is real geography, interest is awakened. She can laboriously add, multiply, etc., even to understanding fractions and adding, subtracting and multiplying them, but when it comes to reasoning out a problem she can not do it. She is easily controlled and eager for commendation. Physically, very slow.

No. 2. This girl works mechanically. For instance, draws letters instead of writing, and considers finished page as a picture of characters instead of its presenting thoughts. She omits letters from words and words from sentences, and when her attention is called it is found that this is of minor importance to her if the general appearance of the page is pretty. She bids always for attention if one comes near. She has knowledge of a few set phrases, some slang, which she uses consecutively, that is, never uses one and on some other occasion another, but all of them each time. She reads very slowly, seems to read ahead to herself, and then aloud. Very dull in arithmetic, especially reasoning. She is interested in simple stories as in the third reader; evinces no curiosity, and has poor physical control. Asks very few questions.

No. 3. Not so dull as she pretends, but is mentally lazy. Good in spelling, fair in English composition, and has progressed somewhat in arithmetic; can work long division using two figures, also fractions and billing. She is occasionally ambitious, interest is awakened and good resolutions made, but is easily disturbed. She finds it too difficult to reason out a problem in arithmetic, but can work with figures to get an answer; is fond of repetition in her work. Some progress has been made, as she is proud.

No. 4. Works intensely and mechanically whether watched or not. Fond of praise, cringing and deceitful, very easily controlled and directed. She has progressed in arithmetic as far as interest, but is poor in spelling, and in English composition is another who omits letters and words. Physical control is poor, and although desirous of learning how to enter a room without slamming the door, and of sitting properly, has never been able to learn, and lets her body fall into a seat. This girl's muscles are not under her control, especially her face. She finds it very difficult to reason arithmetic problems, but anything to memorize is more to her liking.

No. 5. This girl never finished a mental task, but was always ambitious to make believe it was finished. She is deceitful, and when found out does not regard it as serious, but rather as a joke. She craves attention, but when surrounded by older or normal pupils who were busy she ceased chattering and imitated them and worked, but with little result. She is very easily disturbed. She could not do third grade work.

Conclusion: It is impossible for me to grade these girls. Some like to read; others hate it. Some like arithmetic. It is difficult to change lessons, from arithmetic to spelling, or from English to geography. It is like an upheaval. While a normal child desires a change, these want to do the same thing all day. All seem to know in a vague way something is wrong, and attribute it to lack of opportunity. It is with them: "What do I have to do?" All of them seem to think the mental effort is made for the teacher's sake. "See the good work I have done for you" is the attitude of these pupils.

I have found the telling method the best, and it is surprising how much is retained when they believe it is a story they have heard. They have the desire for progress, but there seems to be a veil through which they can not see."

Housework.

The girls do all the work of the institution under the direction and supervision of efficient instructors. Girls afflicted with a venereal disease are not allowed to work in the kitchens or dining rooms. Thus many are in the school for a year or more before they have the privilege of learning practical housekeeping, due to their physical condition. That 32 per cent of the present population is suffering from a horrible disease is appalling.

Miss Ada Vesper from the Santa Barbara Normal School has charge of our sewing and weaving departments. Nearly every girl shows a pride in learning to sew well. The girls' work won four firsts and one second premium at the Ventura County Fair held this September.

Especially have we achieved in carpet-weaving. We are proud of the fact that as far as we can learn we have accomplished more in this department than has any other institution or school in the United States. The fact that the best and most intricate weaving has been done by morons is significant. All of the carpets and rugs now in use in the new institution have been made by the girls in the school.

Our reed and raffia baskets are out of the ordinary. Especially are the feeble-minded interested in this line of work.

During a period of twenty months the girls in the sewing room completed: 285 dresses, 189 petticoats, 88 skirts, 250 gowns, 150 middies, 56 bloomers, 112 brassières, 234 drawers, and 510 miscellaneous articles. All of the window curtains in all of the buildings are hemstitched, and most of them stencilled in designs that the girls originated.

Poultry.

Our rabbit and poultry department, under the management of Miss Frances Boniface, has proven of commercial value to the school, besides giving a group of girls a practical knowledge of the work.

More than a year ago we started with one pair of New Zealand rabbits. We have since added Angoras, Belgians and Flemish Giants. This department supplies rabbit meat twice a month for the entire family, affording an agreeable change in our meat diet. So far it has cost $7\frac{1}{2}$ cents per pound for rabbits dressed for the table.

The girls have just completed a pretentious pigeon cote. We have only thirty-six pigeons of the homing variety, but intend to make squab-raising one of the features of the school.

The poultry department has supplied us with 450 dozen eggs, also an occasional meal of chicken, and our turkeys for last Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners. We have forty fine turkeys and twenty-four ducks ready for the coming holidays.

The University of California course on poultry husbandry has been part of the routine work for the girls in this detail. These girls are intensely interested, and put into actual practice what they learn from the lessons. They are proud of the fact that their papers have been marked from 95 to 100 per cent. With the experience gained under the limited conditions at Whittier, we are now ready to develop this work extensively. The same statement may be made on hog-raising. We now have fifteen pedigreed Berkshires, and plan to commercialize this department.

Several of the girls are taking the course in floriculture, and will be able to do some practical landscape gardening as soon as the planting season arrives. At Whittier we propagated about ten thousand plants that we intend to set out on the grounds here.

Playground department.

Miss Edith Reid, our physical director, says: "No physical exercise is of any value excepting as it tends toward clearing away the cobwebs of wrong desire and inharmonious thinking, and opens up an avenue through which the individual may attain higher realization of what constitutes life."

We have pursued this work on the basis that the desire for wholesome joy and real pleasure of the highest type is innate in the mind of every human being and needs only the opening of the way through which the better nature may find opportunity for expression.

The adaptability of each girl is studied here and credit given for her different steps of progress. For instance, when a girl who possessed an uncontrollable temper is able to play a game of basketball and have eight fouls called on her, as the case chanced to be, without losing her temper, we grade her for her self-control and ability to accept criticism.

Every girl enters one of the daily classes in this department unless excused by the school physician. The instruction consists of free-hand exercises, light apparatus work, such as drills and exercises with Indian clubs, dumb-bells and wands. These exercises are given to musical accompaniment and in the open air.

Folk dancing—the study of poetry in motion, enveloped in the atmosphere of the nations—is a delightful branch of physical education.

Our outdoor games are volley ball, tennis, basket ball, captain's ball, and miscellaneous games. Indoor evening recreation hour is devoted to dominoes, map puzzles, checkers, box ball, flinch and other games, or listening to story-telling. Every holiday is appropriately observed.

Discipline.

It is gratifying to state that as time passes there is less individual disciplining. Our present population is 104. Less than 10 per cent require special discipline. The girls, generally, have accepted the fact that only through good conduct can they earn parole. One of our inducements to attainment is the Camp Fire.

About a year ago our first Camp Fire was organized. The standard for membership is very high. Eligibility requires residence in the school for at least six months and a perfect record for at least two months. Upon the recommendation of the superintendent and the guardian, the name of the candidate is voted upon by the members of the camp. When joining she openly declares:

“I will strive to grow strong like the Pine Tree;
To be pure is my deepest desire;
To be true to the Truth that is in me,
And to follow the law of the Fire.”

We now have two camps: Kimadsham, which means unusual genius for cooperation, accomplishment and untiring effort, and Aokiya, meaning united for one purpose.

The Camp Fire girls are given more privileges than any others. The one they appreciate most is to take an all-day hike, when they cook their own meals and hold a council fire out in the hills.

We can not place too high a value on this particular activity. If more Camp Fires were organized for girls from 12 to 16 outside of state institutions, we would not need to ask for more buildings for the care of girls who have erred in choosing the wrong kind of recreation.

Another important privilege that can come only through self-control is membership in a Christian Endeavor.

The C. S. G. Young People's Christian Endeavor was organized two years ago with a membership of nineteen. We now have a Union of five societies with fifty-two members. In June, 1916, this Union was admitted into the Los Angeles County Union.

The Endeavor is nonsectarian and attendance entirely voluntary.

Sunday school.

Each cottage has its own Sunday school. Membership in this as in the Christian Endeavor is voluntary and nonsectarian. More than half of the girls in the school attend regularly.

Religious services.

Every Sunday afternoon services are held in the dining room of the hospital building, this being the largest room in the institution. The services are conducted by the different denominational ministers from the town of Ventura.

We deeply appreciate the services rendered by Father Grogan, Rev. James B. Stone, Rev. A. F. Stem, Rev. C. H. Lawrence, Rev. W. H. Hannaford, and Rev. J. P. Ralstin.

PAROLE DEPARTMENT.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA,.

July 1, 1916.

*Mrs. C. M. Weymann, Superintendent,
California School for Girls,
Ventura, California.*

DEAR MADAM: I beg to submit the following report of parole work for the past two years:

On the first of July, 1914, there were fifty-three girls on the paroled list. Since that time forty-nine more have been paroled or furloughed, though the number varies constantly. Some have been dropped because of age, some because they have earned an honorable dismissal, a few because they have been returned to the school, and one because of death.

When a girl is paroled she is placed, if possible, in the kind of work for which she is best fitted. At present we have representatives in nine different lines of work, namely: housekeeping, hospital training, office work, laundry, store, factory work, in millinery and in dress-making, and as students in school.

The majority of girls have started at housework, but many of these have done so only to earn enough money to help themselves into other kinds of work. Six have saved enough to take a course in millinery or dressmaking, three have been training in hospitals, two have worked their way through business college, and eight are attending our public schools, six of whom are in high school. Quite a number of girls have opened savings accounts, and several are giving financial aid to their families.

Fifteen of our girls have married during the past two years and all are living with their husbands and are keeping house. Eighteen paroled girls have made such good records for themselves that they have been honorably discharged. Almost all of these girls still keep in touch with the parole department. It has been necessary to return six girls to the school for violating their parole, but of this number only two are rated mentally normal by our psychologist.

Here is one of our greatest problems: Any girl without friends or home—as most of ours are—has difficulties enough even if she is normal, but about one-third of our girls are doubly handicapped by being mentally deficient. These yield easily to every influence, good or bad, and never think of the result of their impulsive actions. They can not endure strain, nor cope with any unusual situation. Three of our feeble-minded girls who made good under the regular routine of the institution could not adjust themselves to the varying conditions of even an average home on the outside. Therefore it was necessary to return them to the school. Every one of these seeming failures hurts the reputation of the training at the school, because people as a rule do not take into consideration the facts that these are feeble-minded girls, nor that many of them are sent from the institution only because we have no right to keep them longer. At present, because there is no place to take these girls after they are twenty-one years of age, they are not only a menace to themselves, but to the public. Consequently, our greatest need is some kind of an industrial institution for our feeble-minded.

Let us consider now the girl of normal mentality and her problems. When she is ready for parole she not only thinks she is equal to any temptation that may come to her, but as a rule she tries hard to avoid evil. However, she finds conditions very different from what she imagined. She finds herself in an unfamiliar environment and practically alone, after being accustomed for a year or more to the companionship of many girls in the school and to the guidance of the officers there. Moreover, she finds that many people refuse to recognize her if they hear the least rumor of her past, even if she has risen above it. She does not know how to meet the kind of friends she wants, and often has no place to entertain them if she does. She does not know where to go for recreation, or else finds no pleasure in going alone. Her wages are small and living is high. She likes pretty clothes as other people do. Perhaps she is sick for a few days or has a dentist bill to pay. If she has a family who concern themselves about her, they are generally too poor to come to her rescue. Because of these facts, the girls often become discouraged and some even ask to be allowed to return to the school. Is it any wonder if they give up the struggle and fall back into old habits? No, the wonder is that so many, even though they do make mistakes, keep up the fight and really do make good.

But what can we do to help them? With very few exceptions it has proven unwise to allow the girls to chum together; they know each other's past, and there is not the same incentive to live up to their highest ideals. Hence a gathering place for the girls would not be wise, and still they do need a place to go when they are sick or out of work. In fact, this is an absolute necessity, and we can not expect to hold some of them unless they have such a place or places under the supervision of a woman who understands the situation. It is at such a time that the girl especially needs a wise friend to help her through this crisis. Often this need is felt when the girl's employer leaves town unexpectedly or goes away for a short vacation. Sometimes conditions are inharmonious and a temporary home is necessary for the girl while a new position is being found for her. Occasionally, because of her physical condition, she needs a place in which to recuperate. So far these enforced vacations have not been provided for, and your parole officer has found no solution for the problem save to take the girl to her own home. During these two years twenty-six girls on vacation of from one day to one month, have been cared for in this way. This is an emergency arrangement, and does not meet the requirements of the situation.

Next to this question of temporary housing is the need of friends and recreation of the right kind for the girls. If we can not supply this demand, we surely can not blame them for following their social instincts and taking any kind they can find. Fortunately, some of the women who employ our girls realize this and have succeeded in filling this want. And for the girls who enter the public schools or even the business world this problem has been quite easy, but usually for the ones who enter a home as a "helper," this is a much harder condition to solve. Our girls need home influences, but unless they expect to make cooking or housework their life work, or are doing it only as a means to an end, housework has not proven as satisfactory for the girls as other kinds of employment.

A third problem presents itself when we consider the girl's financial difficulties. The girl who is struggling along in the hospital or in the business world often has an unexpected expense to meet and no reserve on hand. Or the girl, who starts in at housework to save enough to enable her to study something more to her liking, finds it almost impossible to accomplish this on only fifteen or twenty dollars a month, and she often loses her ambition. So far we have been able to do very little to relieve this situation. A few interested people have helped in various ways. One woman has paid the book bill for one of our high school students; several have contributed clothing. The Young Women's Christian Association, of Los Angeles, has given us a scholarship. The girl who is anxious to better her condition deserves assistance. If only we had a fund to draw on for a loan or a scholarship, with the understanding that the money be paid back in small installments after the girl is earning a salary, the result would surely be well worth while, even if a few should fail to return the amount expended.

Once in a while some one of our girls gets into trouble and is given more or less newspaper notoriety, but, handicapped as our girls are, the great majority are leading quiet lives and making good citizens.

Respectfully submitted.

MARY K. JAMES,
Parole Officer.

REPORT OF PSYCHOLOGICAL DEPARTMENT.

One of the first steps taken by the board of trustees after the establishment of the California School for Girls was the provision for the psychological examination of every girl committed to this school.

Aim of the work.

The first aim of the work has been to make such a study of the girls committed to the school as shall be of practical value in meeting the problems which they present. With the exception of cases from San Francisco and Oakland, no report of the mental status or peculiarities of the child is included in the commitment record. It is obvious that much time can be saved if the school authorities have some knowledge of the intelligence, formal education, range of interest, and general mental potentialities of the girl at the very start. A study of our results will show that we have every type of case from the lowest grade defective to the girl of unlimited capacity. Ordinary common sense would dictate a differentiation of method in these cases.

Our second problem has been the determination of facts which will throw light on the general problem of delinquency. Whatever may be true concerning the advantage or disadvantage of institution life in the case of the child, such a community offers an ideal opportunity for intensive study. Just so long as the state continues to commit children to institutions, it behooves us to make a scientific study of the conditions which make the institution a necessity.

METHODS.

Intelligence Tests.

Much has been said recently concerning the value of intelligence tests and particularly of the Binet-Simon series. In the popular discussion there has been much misunderstanding concerning the nature and the scope of these tests. At present it is generally agreed by all psychologists that the Binet-Simon tests give a highly satisfactory estimate of mentality for all ages below ten years. The work at Vineland, N. J., Waverly, Mass., and in the Municipal Court of Chicago, seems to show conclusively that when an individual who is chronologically fourteen or over, grades ten or under by the Binet-Simon scale, it is safe to classify him as feeble-minded. This much seems to be so definitely established as to make the tests particularly valuable in estimating mentality when the problem of responsibility is raised in court.

There is still a difference of opinion among psychologists concerning the value of the more advanced tests in estimating the higher grades of deficiency. The 1911 Binet-Simon series (Binet's last arrangement of the tests) gives a group of tests for the twelfth, fifteenth and the adult ages. The value of the fifteen-year and the adult tests is very much questioned by all psychologists unless these tests are supplemented by others. This questioning of the value of the upper grade tests has led the public to assume that all the tests are questioned, an assumption absolutely contrary to the facts.

Another fact which has been productive of misunderstanding is the existence of various revisions of the series. Since the Binet-Simon scale was originally developed from norms obtained with French children, it has been suggested that certain variations should be made to adapt them to American children. Doctors Huey, Goddard, Yerkes, and Terman have made extensive studies resulting in three revisions. Professor Terman has given particular attention to the amplification and standardization of tests above the 10th year.

It is sometimes taken for granted that the existence of these revisions means a variability within a given series. In a recent court case, for example, a physician who was not a mental specialist stated that the Binet-Simon scale was constantly being changed and consequently had little validity. As a matter of fact, four recognized revisions exist, and these revisions in no way invalidate each other. Rather, they supplement each other. It would seem to the writer that any new standardized series of tests would be a distinct advantage. We are at present working at the Girls' School on the standardization of a series which shall have no tests in common with the Binet-Simon series, but which can be used as a verification of the results obtained with the Binet-Simon or any other scale.

In our work we have used four series, the Binet-Simon (1911), the Huey Revision, the Stanford 1914 Revision, and the Stanford 1916 Revision. A glance at Table I or Charts I and II will show the uniformity of classifications under any of these revisions.

Tests for Special Characteristics.

In addition to the intelligence series, we have tested each girl by supplementary tests. The results of these tests are recorded in such a way that a glance at the record shows the girl's special characteristics. The tests are arranged under the following heads: Sensory Acuity, Perception, Memory, Imagery, Reasoning, Attention. In addition to the page for each of these more intellectual characteristics, is one for emotion. Here a record is kept of the emotional reactions observed during the tests and in the everyday life of the girl.

One hundred and thirty-five cases have been examined. One hundred of these have been tested by all four of the revisions mentioned; thirty-five cases were tested by the Binet-Simon and the Huey revisions, supplemented by the tests of special characteristics.

RESULTS.

Intelligence Tests.

Distribution of Cases. Chart I shows the frequency distribution of one hundred identical cases, and also the comparison of the result with the four series of intelligence tests. All cases grading a given year by the Binet-Simon scale were averaged. The average mental age was then obtained for the same cases by the Stanford (Terman) Revision 1914 and 1916 scale and for the Johns Hopkins (Huey-Goddard) Revision. This process was repeated with each mental age for which we have results. The fraction of a year in the Binet-Simon scale was reduced to months by considering each test for the years ten or under as equal to one-fifth of one year; each of the twelve-year tests as equal to two-fifths of a year; each of the fifteen-year and adult tests as equal to three-fifths of a year.

Agreement of Various Scales. Chart II gives a comparison of the results obtained by the four series in terms of mental and chronological ages. The average chronological age for the cases grading a given mental age by the Binet-Simon scale was used as one determinant of the curve. The chronological age is of less significance in this connection, as all our girls are over fourteen years of age and most of them over sixteen years of age. The average age of all cases represented is eighteen years, four months. That is, practically all of our girls have reached the age which is regarded as average adult mentality in the normal individual.

Table I gives the averages on which Charts I and II are based, as well as the mean variation in each series.

The results obtained by the four series of tests are very nearly identical. At the ninth to the tenth years the Binet-Simon 1911 series grades slightly lower than any of the other series. From the eleventh year to the adult it grades slightly higher than any other series except the Stanford Revision 1914. The later Stanford Revision 1916 grades lower than the Stanford 1914 except at the adult years.

The Johns Hopkins (Huey-Goddard) Revision and the Stanford 1916 Revision give almost identical averages. The Johns Hopkins series gives slightly higher averages except at the sixteen to seventeen years.

Chart II shows the same agreement in results. There is at no point more than a year's variation in the average mental age obtained by the different series. The study of individual cases shows the same agreement as the averages. The data on individual cases will be published in a later paper and is at present available for anyone who is interested in a more detailed study than that given in the averages.

Charts III and IV give comparison of individual cases by the Binet-Simon and Stanford Revision. The hundred cases represented are the same as those averaged in Tables I and II. Chart III shows the distribution of these cases according to the Binet-Simon scale and Chart IV according to the Stanford Revision. The numbers are those given the cases according to the sequence in which they were examined, and represent identical cases throughout all our charts and tables.

A comparison can be made of the classification of the girls in the two series by finding the location of a given number in each chart.

Any grading under 70 per cent is considered moron according to the Stanford revision and so corresponds to any grading under twelve by the Binet-Simon scale, provided the individual tested was over sixteen years of age. The twelfth year by the Binet-Simon scale would correspond roughly to the Stanford border-line grouping. All cases grading above twelve by the Binet-Simon scale would be considered normal. There is no particular point in grouping any cases as "low normal" according to the Binet-Simon scale, as the tests were not devised to make so fine a distinction within the normal group. The few cases in which girls are chronologically under sixteen are indicated in Chart III, as the chronological age must be taken into account in determining the classification of these cases. For example, a girl of fourteen who graded twelve would be counted normal by the Binet-Simon scale.

Table II gives the percentage of cases coming under the various classifications according to the two series of tests.

CHART IV

Frequency distribution of intelligence quotients in 100 cases according to the Stanford revision, 1916. (Cases identical with those in Charts I, II, and III.) Letters F, B and N indicate actual grading of doubtful cases, as feeble-minded, border-line or normal.

The grading for all cases classified as moron by the Binet-Simon scale is identical in the two series, with the exception of Cases 99 and 36. These two cases grade moron by the Binet-Simon and low border-line by the Stanford Revision, though the difference of mental age is less than a year and a half in the two cases. Both cases are distinctly defective and have certain psychoses which make them unstable. Case 99 is that of a melancholic and 36 that of a sex pervert. Both cases would be immediately marked by any psychologist or physician as needing custodial care.

Cases 58, 77 and 88 grade somewhat higher by the Binet-Simon than by the Stanford Revision. Cases 58 and 88 were both classified as definitely defective after continuous study. Case 77 is more of a psychopathic than a mental retardation problem, is in fact at present being studied in the psychopathic ward of the county hospital.

The greatest seeming difference in the two tables is in the border-line group. As a matter of fact, this is just the most questionable point of the Binet-Simon or any other scale, as has already been stated. Psychologists have long recognized the inadequacy of the Binet-Simon grading in border-line cases and the need of supplementary tests. It is customary to classify cases grading twelve or just above twelve as doubtful, until further study can settle classification.

We should consider the line of division ability to reason. Those cases which are defective possess a practically normal memory span, but have little ability to reason. Those cases which are not actually defective, though they grade at about the same age, have a slightly low memory span, but fair capacity to reason.

A person to be mentally normal must have a certain memory span, but it is not true that defectives do not sometimes possess distinctly good memory; that is, a certain memory span is essential for normal mentality, but not a proof of it. The Stanford Revision would seem to offer a better basis for a judgment with reference to individual cases than does any of the other series, because of the greater number of tests, particularly those involving reason.

All border-line cases by either series have been studied carefully, sometimes tested repeatedly at intervals for two or three weeks. Case 26, for example, was worked with thirty minutes daily for two weeks, and finally classified as low normal. The reason for this classification was the repeated evidence of a fairly normal though rather slow learning curve and a distinctly good capacity to reason out problems. Case 63 was one of the most difficult to test. The girl has been in institutions most of her life, has very little adjustability, is hot-tempered, stubborn, and stutters badly. After continued testing, she was classified low normal with reference to her intelligence, though she is, of course, not normal in her nervous and emotional balance.

The following cases have eventually been classified as border-line; that is, as definitely defective with a mental development about equal to that of a child of twelve or thirteen years: Cases 24, 40, 47, 49, 77, 85, 90, 99, 102, 109, 114, 122, 125. We have eventually classified as low normal seven of the cases graded border-line by the Stanford Revision and one case as moron.

In conclusion, our results seem to show that in the study of delinquent girls, or of any individuals whose educational advantages have been limited and whose general environment has been bad, cases grading between 70 and 80 per cent by the Stanford Revision, or above ten and any fraction of ten by the Binet-Simon scale, should not be graded as defectives without supplementary study. In time we may have an adolescent scale as reliable as our present moron scale, but we do not believe that will be achieved until all mere memory tests and tests involving formal education have been eliminated from the years above ten.

In addition to the hundred cases tested by all four series are thirty-five cases which were not tested by the Stanford Revision. Most of these girls are among the first cases tested and have left the school on parole, or are past twenty-one years of age. Since it is the general policy of the school not to parole the feeble-minded, the percentage of defectives is relatively low in this group. Six of the cases are morons and four border-line.

The following table gives the number of cases belonging to each mental division in our first 135 cases studied:

TABLE III.

Moron	32 cases or 24 per cent
Border-line	16 cases or 12 per cent
Normal and low normal	69 cases or 51 per cent
Unusual ability	18 cases or 13 per cent

SIGNIFICANCE OF MENTAL CLASSIFICATION.

The Moron. For the cases classified as moron we have nothing to suggest but permanent custodial care. If there is any question concerning the possible expense involved in such a method of solving the problem, the answer will be found in the histories of the cases given on pages 47 to 55. These feeble-minded girls, before reaching twenty-one years of age, have given birth to five children. The ultimate expense to society of allowing these girls to reproduce and to spread disease is beyond calculation. We suggest custodial care as the real solution of the problem, because while these girls are a menace to society when thrown on their own resources, they are, most of them, easy to control, good workers along mechanical lines, and, with a few exceptions, happy under proper custodial care. Anyone who has had extensive experience with the feeble-minded knows how much easier they are to manage than the normal, provided the proper methods are employed. They become dangerous only when faced by economic and social conditions to which they have not the capacity to adjust.

The Border-Line Case. In spite of the difficulty of classification, the border-line type of case is one of the most difficult with which we have to deal. The high grade defective, with a fair memory and little adjustability, is usually not recognized as defective by society. Adjustments, which her mental limitations make impossible, are expected of her. After she has once become a victim of bad conditions and bad habits, it is practically, if not actually, impossible to develop enough resistance within her so that it is ever safe for her to become a free member of society.

The Normal. Fifty-five to sixty-five per cent of our girls are mentally normal or at least low normal; that is, they possess sufficient mental capacity to adjust to the conditions of everyday life. These girls not only test up to the normal point, but have shown themselves normal in their reaction to formal education and work requirement of our school. Fifteen of them made astonishingly good progress in high school subjects, which were taught for some months by an accredited Los Angeles high school teacher. This group was made up of the fifteen girls who possessed the best mentality according to our tests, quite regardless of their former educational advantages. One girl in the group had had very little formal education above the fourth grade. (For details see report of Case 8, page 54.) The report of this high school teacher was that she had never had better results anywhere than with this group of girls in our school.

The problem in all cases of normal mentality is that of reconstruction. These girls are the victims of bad social conditions, of some drug habit, or of instinctive and emotional unbalance. What must be done is in some way to develop sufficient ideational control along the right lines. In all cases, except those in which there is an actual mental unbalance, it ought to be possible to so develop a girl's ideals and interests that she will become a valuable member of society. In some of our cases of best mentality this process would probably take years, but would be worth the effort in the end.

Emotional Instability. In the case of most of our girls, as would be expected, ungoverned instinct is a part of the problem which confronts us. Psychologically, uncontrolled instinct means emotional instability. This difficulty is due to one of three causes: Weakness of ideational control, as in the case of the feeble-minded; misdirected ideational control, as in those cases in which the attention is given to depraved ideas which heighten certain instinctive tendencies; the overdevelopment of some instinctive tendency.

It may be said that the feeble-minded individual who becomes a physical adult will always be at the mercy of her instincts, unless conditions are so controlled that she has a minimum stimulation of certain instinctive tendencies and constant custodial care. She lacks within herself the power of ideational control.

With three exceptions all of our girls come under the second heading; that is, the experiences which they have had and the conditions under which they have lived have given them the wrong sort of mental background. It is impossible here to go into detail with reference to the sorry, twisted ideas which make up most of their mental content when they enter the school. These ideas serve as a stimulus for instinctive activities which would simply be dormant in the case of an individual whose attention was taken up with other matters.

In twenty-two of the 135 cases studied, the emotional instability is due to the overdevelopment of some instinctive tendency. In thirteen cases the girls are so oversexed as to be a menace to themselves and any community in which they may live. Of these cases, five are feeble-minded, four are mentally normal, and four are of unusual ability. It might be said here that our worst cases of sex perversion belong to the group of unusual mental capacity. In seven cases the main problem is an ungovernable temper; the girls are given to paroxysms of rage over slight incidents and become dangerous at certain periods. Of these cases one is an imbecile, three mentally normal, and three are of unusual ability.

In three cases there is a morbidness which amounts almost to melancholia at times. One of these cases is feeble-minded, one normal, and one of unusual ability.

Psychologically, the problem in all these cases may be stated by the equation $\frac{\text{Idea}}{\text{Instinct}} = \text{Degree of self-control}$. Most delinquencies have their origin in normal instinctive activities. Civilized life requires the control, though not the complete suppression, of practically all forms of instinctive action. The only way in which such control can be exercised is through the force of ideas which direct the activity along the line opposed to the instinct. When ideational activities become habit, a permanent control over instinct is established.

In the case of the feeble-minded, instinct must always be stronger than ideational control, because the instincts reach almost, or in many cases quite complete development, whereas the ideas remain childish and weak.

In the case of the mentally normal individual with normal instincts, the prognosis should be good, provided as much force can be put into changing perverted ideas and developing normal interests as has been expended in developing the child in the wrong direction. The difficulty in these cases is that society at large expects the impossible. It expects us to undo in a few spasmodic efforts what has been constructed through a period of from sixteen to twenty years. At present the California School for Girls is bending every effort to arouse normal interests which shall serve as a control after the girl leaves the institution. To do this, educational facilities and normal, happy home environment, good books and suitable amusements are necessary.

The problem of those who have overdeveloped instinctive tendencies is the same as that of the group just discussed, except that it is more difficult. If the mentality is good enough, a very high degree of ideational control can be developed. These individuals will always be less stable than those with normally balanced instincts, but it is a well known fact that some of the most valuable members of society have had just such excessive strength of instinct.

FORMAL EDUCATION.

Educational Status of Cases. The fact that most of our girls are American born, and that many of them have lived in the state of California the greater part of their lives, means that they have had educational advantages distinctly above those found among delinquents in many other states where there is a large foreign population or a lower school age limit. Table IV gives in detail the educational status of the 135 cases examined. Only six of the cases have a history which shows no formal schooling. In twenty-one cases the school history could not be obtained.

Public School Indications of Cases. It is one of the obvious defects of our present school and juvenile reform system that the public school contributes so little, even by way of information, which would help solve the problems of these children who have so recently been public school pupils. Most of the difficulties in which these girls are involved had their origin in the public school period. When we make a direct investigation of the school history, we usually find that the child had already become a recognized problem before leaving the public school. It would seem entirely feasible to have direct report from the school a part of the court report in each one of these cases. As a matter of fact, what we find is that the child's statement concerning her school work is usually all the information given us by the court.

The most noticeable thing about the school statistics is that twenty-three feeble-minded girls were allowed to go above the fifth grade, several as far as the eighth grade, though they are unable to do those things which would be expected of third grade children. In other words, since no provision is made in most of our schools for the proper education of the mentally deficient, they are simply allowed to go from one grade to another, the justification for this procedure being that physically mature, feeble-minded individuals are a menace to the small children in the regular grades.

Thirteen of our girls come from various high schools. In seven of these cases the girls show the intelligence which would be expected of the average high school student of normal mentality. In five cases they show unusual ability, with a certain amount of eccentricity. In one case the girl is distinctly border-line, and it is somewhat hard to understand how she succeeded in gaining admission to the high school, except as one considers the statement already made concerning the advancement of defectives through the grades.

HOME CONDITIONS.

Chart V and Table V give in detail the conditions of the homes from which our girls come, in so far as we have information concerning them. It should be stated here that we have had to depend on court reports, reports of probation and parole officers, and not on direct investigation. Consequently, it is safe to assume that conditions are worse than is evident from our records. Certain facts, such as a death or separation of the parents, are necessarily a part of the court record when the child becomes a state ward. But many other facts, such as the mental status of the other members of the family, alcoholism, poverty, etc., would only be completely determined by a more detailed investigation than we have been able to make. It is to be hoped that provision will be made in the near future for a research department which shall make this part of the investigation its special problem.

Each circle represents a case. When one or more circles are connected by lines, the various conditions designated were found in one home.

Our study, incomplete as it is, shows the startling fact that out of 135 cases there are only 21 in which the child's parents keep up any sort of a home together. That is, 114 of our girls, or 84 per cent, come from homes which have been broken up for one reason or another. The biggest single factor is the death of the mother, which occurred in 28 per cent of the cases. Next in order the death of the father, 25 per cent of cases; father or mother drink to excess, 26 per cent; the divorce or separation of the parents, 22 per cent of cases, etc. (See Table II.) It is to be noted (Chart II) that in many cases several of the factors mentioned are combined in a single home.

DEGREE OF RESPONSIBILITY OF MENTALLY DEFICIENT.

Responsibility of Defectives on a Par with that of Children of Equivalent Mental Age. During the last few years the question of the responsibility of the mentally deficient has been much discussed in legal and scientific circles. Those who have had extensive experience with the feeble-minded agree that they can not be held responsible for their acts, if they are forced to adjust to the complex conditions of modern life. They have no greater degree of responsibility than children whose age corresponds to their mental age would have, provided these children were placed under the same conditions. That children under the age of ten to twelve are mentally incapable of solving the social and economic problems of the present day is stipulated by our present laws. A child under seven can not be held accountable for any act "he may commit. An infant between the ages of seven and fourteen is presumed to be incapable of committing a crime. In the case of a person between such ages, the burden of proving capacity is upon the prosecution, and a conviction can not be had or sustained unless it is affirmatively made to appear that the defendant was, at the time of the act, of sufficient maturity of mind to understand and appreciate what he did." (Encyclopedia of Law and Procedure, Mack, 1906, Vol. XXII, p. 623.) The problem of the mentally deficient is exactly the same as that of the child, except that the former has adult instincts and strength, superimposed upon the child's mentality.

Legal Status. Legally, feeble-mindedness is recognized under the head of imbecility. "Those designated as imbeciles in law may make use of their senses; may have ideas, memory and some judgment, and may read and write and articulate words with more or less clearness, and even calculate when the calculation is not too difficult." "Imbecility is that feebleness of mind, which, without depriving entirely the person of the use of his reason, leaves only the faculty of conceiving ideas the most common, and which relate almost always to physical wants and habits." (Encyclopedia of Law and Procedure, Mack, 1906, Vol. XXII, p. 1112.)

The laws of the state of California make no specific statement concerning the extent to which a feeble-minded person may be held responsible for his acts. The only specification is that one who understands the nature of his act and knows that it is wrong may be held responsible to the state.

Determination of Degree of Responsibility: Case Histories. To determine the degree to which our feeble-minded girls can be held responsible under the law, we have asked them a series of moral questions. Our lowest grade cases, even those who are unable to tell time or count change, make very good response to all moral questions. They include stealing, immorality and murder in the list of things it is wrong to do. They can state in detail what the consequences of their acts would be. Cases 25 and 115, two of our lowest grade defectives, went into detail with reference to the legal steps which would be taken in case of any one of these crimes. Their answers are no better than those of seven or eight-year-old children of whom we asked the same questions, except that the girls stated details based on a memory of their own experiences in court.

We give a few of our actual case histories, as this seems the best answer to the question concerning the extent to which society has a right to hold these girls responsible.

Case 25. Feeble-minded.Chronological age*—20 years at time first tested. (Now 22.)Mental age—9 years.

In school from ages of 9 to 15 years.

Unable to count change even for small amounts, though can name coins. Unable to tell time. Does not know tables above fours. Writes like a child. Reads fairly well. Said, "Paris the largest city in United States, etc."

Diseased—Hereditary syphilis.

Court record.

Deficiency reported by San Francisco court. Father dead. Mother insane. Record of vagrancy.

Present location.

Now 22 years old. An attempt was made to keep this girl after she was 21 years of age. She assisted with the work at the school, but left of her own accord.

This girl has always been easy to manage except when moody. Is of a very romantic, moody temperament. She did very well as a helper in more mechanical lines of work, and would probably have stayed contentedly for years at the school if the authorities had been able to keep her there. Because the law makes no provision for custodial care for such cases, the girl was free to go at will. On three different occasions she has been picked up by men on the road as she was returning from church alone, and taken to Los Angeles. All three times she has returned to the school after several days of her own accord. After the second absence she returned ill and pregnant. The third absence was spent living in a most immoral fashion. The girl was arrested for vagrancy, lodged in city jail, released, was ill, attempted to get work, but could keep no work.

In summary: This child of physical maturity and child's mentality is free to go or come as she pleases, is held responsible for herself as an adult, though she can not even tell time or count change, or do any of the minor intellectual operations required of an adult. There is no question but what she is responsible for her acts under the laws of the state of California. She comes back to the school repentant and conscious of wrongdoing after each digression. She answers moral questions in such a way as to show verbal knowledge of the difference between right and wrong, which is the law's only criterion of responsibility.

The fact that she is not competent mentally to meet the complex problems of modern life, to look after herself in a time-telling, money-counting, reason-demanding universe, is not accepted by law as altering in any way her degree of responsibility.

Case 50. Imbecile.Chronological age*—20 years.Mental age—7 years.

Physically perfect—large, muscular.

Can not tell time except hour and half-hour. Can not count change. Writes childish but very good copy-book hand; will write page which is just a string of letters which do not make words; perfectly satisfied with result. After working twenty minutes on a letter home, which covered a whole sheet of foolscap paper, and in which "may" and "was" were only real words, says: "Isn't that nice letter? You read it." Copies from book very well.

Born in California. Constantly in school from ages 6 to 16 years.

Court record.No record of mental deficiency in commitment report.

Both father and mother living. "Beyond control of parents and in danger of leading an idle and dissolute life."

Occupation desired.

"To get out and get married."

Present location.

Sent to Sonoma feeble-minded institution after three months.

Case 66. Feeble-minded.Chronological age*—19 years, 7 months (at time first tested).Mental age—10 years.

Has given birth to two children during time a ward of the court.

Good memory. Can not carry in subtraction. Can not add simple numbers without counting. Reads fairly well. In school constantly since 6 years of age.

Court record.

Report of deficiency.

Mother dead. Father drinks to excess. Home completely broken up by mother's death. In 1910 brought into court dependent in neglected condition. "Court placed her in many different homes. Girl ran away repeatedly, living during these intervals in an immoral way." Baby boy born May, 1914. Four months after the birth of child, while still a ward of the court, found living in a rooming house. Gave birth to another child in 1915. Both these children were born during the time this girl was a ward of the Juvenile Court. Diseased.

Present location.

Now past 21 and living questionable life.

Desired occupation.

To "get married and settle down."

Case 36. Feeble-minded.

Chronological age—20 years at time first examined. (Now 22 years.)

Mental age—9 years.

Reads easily, very poor in mathematics, very good mechanical worker, childish, oversexed.

Case history—(As given in commitment record).

Father and mother divorced. Mother remarried. Own father the dissipated son of a wealthy family. Stepfather good man, has paid all bills for girl, but refuses to have her in house. Girl definitely feeble-minded and depraved.

Occupation desired.

Originally wished to be cashier in 5 and 10 cent store. Now wishes to be a missionary.

Present location.

Twenty-two years of age, staying at California School for Girls of own volition. Free to go at any time. Good mechanical worker, happy disposition, romantic.

Case 80. Feeble-minded.

Chronological age—20 years, 7 months at time of first examination.

(Now 22 years.)

Mental age—9 years.

Married. Eighth grade school (according to girl's statement). Has been in school constantly since 6 years of age.

Statement Concerning School Grade Taken Without Question in Three Different Reports.

Reads with difficulty.

Writes illiterately—("I sleten to squar sche.") ("I listened to his queer speech.") [From dictation.]

Does not know tables at all, and adds slowly by counting.

Case history—In a bulky court report, no statement of mental deficiency. Home reported good. Girl has had education and home advantages suited to normal.

Occupation desired.

Wants to be bookkeeper.

Present location.

At the age of 21, dismissed from California School for Girls, according to state law. Husband fixed home to receive girl, who had every desire to return to him. Within a month was arrested for vagrancy, in a rooming house. Is now at large.

Case 13. Feeble-minded.Chronological age*—16 years, 5 months.Mental age—9 years.

Does not know tables above twos. Writes poorly. Can not spell simple words.

Case history—No report of deficiency.

Mother illiterate. Father dead. Vagrancy.

In trouble with another girl.

Present location.

California School for Girls.

Case 119. Feeble-minded.Chronological age*—17 years, 1 month.Mental age—9 years.

Writes like an 8 or 9 year old child.

Affectionate, responsive.

No case history.

Present location.

California School for Girls.

Case 121. Imbecile.Chronological age*—18 years.Mental age—7 years.

Can not tell time or count change.

Case history—No record of deficiency.

Father drank to excess. Parents divorced. Mother remarried. Mother took in washing.

Present location.

California School for Girls.

Case 1. Feeble-minded.Chronological age*—17 years.Mental age—9 years.

Can not tell time or count change; has violent temper and moody disposition. Very affectionate; teachable in purely mechanical way; has failed to learn to tell time after three years instruction.

Case 48. Feeble-minded.Chronological age*—17 years.Mental age—10 years.

Diseased.

Court record—No report of deficiency.

Parents both dead.

Case 82. Feeble-minded.Chronological age*—19 years, 6 months.Mental age—10 years.

School—Educable.

Memory fairly good, but very poor reasoning capacity.

Court record—No report of deficiency.

Ward of the court since 1912. Original charge vagrancy. "Continually before attention of court for this reason." Married. Two miscarriages; one due to abuse. Husband worthless.

Present location.

California School for Girls.

Case 6. Feeble-minded.Chronological age*—18 years, 6 months.Mental age—10 years.

Third grade, Los Angeles schools.

Diseased.

Case history.

Mother dead. father remarried. Home unfit by reason of depravity. Committed to Whittier as a "lewd and dissolute person." Married, one child.

Present location.

California School for Girls.

Case 57. Border-line.Chronological age*—18 years, 7 months.Mental age—12 years.Case history—No record of deficiency.

One child.

Case 132. Feeble-minded.Chronological age*—17 years, 7 months.Mental age—9 years.

Born in California. Knows tables, but can not carry in subtraction. Attempts to subtract larger from smaller numbers. Memory better than comprehension.

Diseased.

Court record—No report of deficiency.

Father drinks to excess.

Present location.

California School for Girls.

Case 46. Feeble-minded.

Chronological age—18 years 10 months at time of first examination. Will be 21 years of age this fall.

Mental age—10 years.

Reads and writes with difficulty. Doesn't know tables above fours. Adds by counting.

Court record—No report of deficiency.

Ward of court since 1912. Father serving term in San Quentin for attempt to murder mother. Mother and father divorced. Mother re-married.

Child paroled to do housework. Found soliciting among Chinamen. From court record: "She was given several chances to make good—we have been lenient with her and used our utmost endeavors to straighten out." From Girl's School record: "Easy to manage, affectionate, good mechanical worker."

Present location.

California School for Girls.

Case 129. Feeble-minded.

Chronological age—14 years, 4 months.

Mental age—8 years.

Omits longer words in reading. Writes like a third or fourth grade child. Allowed to go as far as sixth grade in school.

Court record—No report of deficiency.

Mother intemperate. Father a laborer. An older sister has three illegitimate children.

Present location.

Still at California School for Girls.

Girl committed for burglary; was very daring and cunning in carrying out escapades.

Case 133. Feeble-minded.

Chronological age—16 years.

Mental age—10 years.

Diseased.

Case history.

Committed February 2, 1916. Court record says that she has been on probation since June 9, 1913. That "she failed on probation and that she refuses to obey the orders of the court." While on probation the girl lived in an immoral way. At least one miscarriage during time girl was a ward of the Juvenile Court.

Present location.

California School for Girls.

DEVELOPMENT OF MORAL RESPONSIBILITY IN THOSE OF NORMAL OR OF UNUSUAL MENTAL CAPACITY.

Contrasted with these cases of mental deficiency are those of normal or of unusual ability. We give a few of these case histories so that the public may have some idea of the problem which the school has in handling both defective and normal in such a way as to develop each to its point of highest responsibility. We have no doubt concerning the outcome with these girls of better mentality, if enough time and energy can be put into the task of reconstruction. So many of them already making good in the outside world justifies our confidence.

Case 22. Unusual Mentality.

Chronological age—16 years.

Mental age—Adult.

School—Eighth grade in spite of very irregular life. Mentally very unstable—tendency to hysteria, melancholia.

Court record.

Mother insane, father dead; child traveled about country with mother. Dependent, never delinquent.

Present location.

Paroled.

Case 34. Unusual Ability.

Chronological age—20 years, 3 months at time tested. Now past 21.

Mental age—Adult.

School—Left school at 13 to go to work. Does induction test; code, 8 digits; 7 reversed; remarkable memory; Stanford Voc. 45.

Court history.

Parents separated, father gambler, mother works by the day. Girl is married. Committed for forging checks and vagrancy.

Present location.

Released from school at age of 21 years. Divorced and remarried.

Case 53. Unusual Ability.Chronological age*—17 years.Mental age—Adult.*

School—First year High School; does induction; code; summary of passages; fables; completion test; vocabulary 63; arith. reasoning. Did puzzle box in two minutes (no trial and error).

Diseased. Morally depraved.

Court record.

Mother died when child was born; father remarried. Occupation, chorus girl. Married at 15. Committed for vagrancy. Used drugs, alcohol, tobacco; smoked twelve cigarettes a day.

Present location.

California School for Girls.

*Studied Latin, algebra, etc.

Case 54. Unusuable Ability.Chronological age*—14 years, 2 months.Mental age—Adult.

School—Eighth grade when thirteen.

Court record.

Mother died when child was ten years old. Drunken father and four brothers. Rough boys came to the house. Committed for dependency.

Present location.

Released. Started High School—returned to the court.

Case 8. Unusual Ability.Chronological age*—18 years, 4 months.Mental age—Adult.

School—No school above fourth grade. Reads easily, but writes illiterate letter. Does not know tables above fives. Showed remarkable ability in all tests. Works in a systematic, rapid fashion. All reasoning tests rapidly and well done. Used ingenuity to make up for lack of formal education; for example, adds instead of multiplying when needs to divide 300 by 6 in mathematical problem.

One of six girls in entire school to do Stanford induction test; one of four to do ingenuity test; interprets fables; does code with one error in two minutes. Vocabulary index 54, which is distinctly above average of school; definitions when given exceptionally good; dungeon—a dark room, place of punishment; hysterics—a disease in which one laughs and cries; seorch—stage before burning, etc. It is interesting to note here that girl at first refused to do Vocabulary after one glance at the words.

Court record.

Vagrancy cause of commitment.

Present location.

California School for Girls. Learned forty words a day in about half an hour. Could look at word, visualize it and write it forwards or backwards with equal ease. Learned multiplication tables by looking over a table before going to bed, then saying it over after lights out. Went into Latin class during experiment; did excellent work in Latin.

Case 62. Unusual Ability.

Chronological age—19 years, 4 months.

Mental age—Adult.

School—First year High School. Remarkable ability, rapid accurate worker, emotionally very unstable.

Court record.

Father and mother both dead. Committed for robbery.

SUMMARY.

1. Each of the four series of intelligence tests, the Binet-Simon 1911, the Huey Revision, or the two Stanford Revisions give approximately the same results in determining the mental age in any given case. The gradings according to the Huey Revision and the 1916 Stanford Revision seem to give a somewhat more accurate estimate, or one which corresponds to the mental level which further study and testing ascribed to the individual. There is no case in which the mental classification varies from one series to the other with the exception of border-line cases and those in which psychopathic complications were found.

2. The intelligence tests must be supplemented by other tests in determining the status of border-line and doubtful cases. The particular type of tests used for this purpose should be reasoning and learning tests, as lack of capacity to reason and slowness or inability to learn constitute the fundamental characteristics of mental deficiency. Because of the greater number of tests and the nature of the upper grade tests in the Stanford Revision, the basis for judgment is more satisfactory in this series than in any of the others, and consequently less supplementary work is necessary.

3. Tests for special ability are of value in determining the line of work for which individuals at any level of intelligence are adapted. The tests which we have found of particular value have been those which give us some estimate of capacity for motor adjustment, memory span, type of imagery, capacity to reason and capacity for sustained attention.

4. Thirty-six per cent of the 135 cases tested were definitely feeble-minded; at least twenty-four per cent of these were so deficient as to be institutional cases. Fifteen of these girls are unable to tell time or count change. Most of them read and write with difficulty, in spite of years of schooling, and none of them is able to do any mathematical problems beyond simple addition. In spite of these glaring deficiencies, there are only two courts which mention feeble-mindedness in the court record or commitment papers.

5. Eighteen of the cases tested, or thirteen per cent, are of distinctly superior intelligence. All degrees of formal education are represented in this group. Lack of formal education seems to make little difference in the mental age obtained by any series of tests. A few of the tests were done poorly by all those most lacking in formal education, and should consequently be supplemented by other tests less dependent on the amount of schooling the child has received. No mention whatever is made in the court record or commitment papers of the superior intelligence of these girls, and we are consequently led to suppose that their unusual ability has been as little taken into account up to the time of their commitment to the state institution as has the mental deficiency of other cases.

6. The second largest single group is that of the girls who are not actually deficient, but are still below the average in general intelligence. They belong to the group popularly called "stupid." Under proper conditions they would have become good routine workers. It is probable that suitable training and supervision can make many of them self-supporting members of the community. In handling these cases it must be remembered that while these individuals of slower mentality often make less trouble under simple living conditions, or when a course of action is definitely planned out for them, they are still more apt to get into trouble under complex conditions, because less able than those of better mentality to meet problem situations.

7. In twenty-two cases, or sixteen per cent, the main mental peculiarity is the over-development of some instinctive tendency with the accompanying emotional instability. In six of these cases the lack of balance is sufficiently marked to suggest insanity. In three cases there are periodic spells of insanity. Of the nine cases just mentioned only two are mentally deficient. In thirteen cases the girls are oversexed. Of this latter group four belong to the group of unusual ability; three to the group of mentally deficient.

8. Eighty-four per cent of our girls come from homes which have been broken up from one cause or another.

9. All cases classed as defective, and also many others which subsequently became delinquent, could have been detected at an early age, while they were yet in the public schools. The detection and proper treatment of these cases before they became delinquent would have saved the state incalculable expense and disorder, as well as securing greater happiness for the unfortunate individuals themselves.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA,
DEPARTMENT OF THE STATE LIBRARY,
SACRAMENTO, CAL., June 30, 1916.

To His Excellency, HIRAM W. JOHNSON,
Governor of California.

SIR: We have the honor to submit the Biennial Report of the State Librarian for the two years ending June 30, 1916.

By order of the State Board of Library Trustees.

R. M. RICHARDSON, President.
ALLEN B. LEMMON, Trustee.

REPORT OF THE STATE LIBRARIAN.

To the Honorable Board of Trustees of the California State Library.

GENTLEMEN: I have the honor to submit my report covering the transactions of the State Library for the sixty-sixth and sixty-seventh fiscal years, ending June 30, 1916:

FINANCES.

Balance on hand July 1, 1914-----	$14,345 11
Amount received during the sixty-sixth and the sixty-seventh fiscal years -----	193,861 49
Total -----	$208,206 60
Expenditures during the sixty-sixth and the sixty-seventh fiscal years -----	201,037 57
Balance -----	$7,169 03

THE LIBRARY FUND.

The legislature of 1915 made the same appropriation for the support of the Library as that of 1913, that is, $197,200.00, for two years. While this appropriation was sufficient three years ago, at the present time it is far from enough to enable the Library to carry on all of its activities as they should be. County libraries have not only increased from twenty-six to thirty-six counties, but the service within the counties has grown many fold. This growth necessarily demands more books and a larger number of library assistants to handle them. To make matters worse the price of books has been advanced by several publishers.

The most serious single tax upon the Library fund has been to provide for the Sutro branch. This department it will be remembered, had no special appropriation from the legislature; but its importance was so great that the Library trustees felt justified in taking it, even though it would be necessary to hamper the work of the main collection for a time. We trust that at the coming session of the legislature this deficiency may in some manner be made up by a generally increased maintenance fund.

ONE READING ROOM.

The demand for space in which to stack books became so urgent that in the fall of 1914 the General reading room and the California reading room on the fourth floor and the Documents reading room on the second floor were all abolished and all readers are now served in what had been the Law reading room on the first floor of the Capitol Building. The alternate book cases were removed from this room, thereby making desk space for the heads of the various departments of the Library. It was necessary in making this change to remove about half of the Law collection which had previously been accessible to readers; a change which was not well received by the lawyers. The result in the main has made for efficiency; the heads of departments under this plan are all within easy distance for consultation and the users of the Library are thereby more completely and expeditiously served, though the new reading room is too small and crowded to admit of the quiet which is usually demanded in such a library department.

The Catalog and the Order departments which were formerly located in the southeast corner of the building on the fourth floor now occupy the space vacated by the General reading room. The installation of the elevator makes communication between these departments and the reading room very easy. The space vacated by the concentration of the reading rooms has been stacked. It is easily foreseen that the space thus gained will be seriously overtaxed before the new building is ready for occupancy.

For various reasons the Library has adopted the closed stack system.

LAW DEPARTMENT.

The growth of the Law department has been regular during the past two years. No collection of outstanding importance has been acquired. Under the new arrangement mentioned above the law books are not conveniently handy as they were under the old plan. The current editions of the statutes of the various states and the official editions of the state reports, the United States reports and statutes, some of the more generally used collections of cases and the digests are still kept in the reading room. The books which are out of the room are brought by messengers immediately upon request, and the delay at most is only a few minutes.

A new system has been adopted in the binding of the Supreme and the Appellate court records, which continue to be of the greatest value and use to the legal fraternity. The records are now arranged for binding in the same order as that in which the reports of cases appear in the "California Reports" and the "California Appellate Reports." As the citation of cases contained in the bound volumes of records also appears on the backs thereof, it will be quite as easy in the future to locate the records as it is to find the decision of the court. Under this plan an index will not be essential to the easy use of the records, though it will of course be necessary to have an index for the older records.

BOOKS FOR THE BLIND DEPARTMENT.

The Books for the Blind Department now has 833 borrowers on its list and has 5,683 accessions (books, music, etc.) with which to serve them. During the past two years the total borrowers have increased 198 and the accessions 1,820. The circulation has been 19,679. Our largest monthly circulation was in June, 1916, when 1,260 books, etc., were loaned.

In June, 1915, the head of the department and the Home Teacher attended the meeting of the American Association of Workers for the Blind, held in Berkeley and both gave papers on the work in California. The assistant attended for two days. Our Home Teacher, Miss Foley, was elected second vice president of the association.

Standard Dot having been proposed at the meeting as the uniform type for the English-speaking blind, such books as were available in that type were added to the Library. Although the type has been practically abandoned as a solution of the type question, the books in Standard Dot were a great help in enabling our borrowers to form their own opinions of the merits of the system, and they will always be interesting historically.

We still continue to receive many gifts of books, magazines and music from borrowers and publishers, and all are greatly appreciated. Books are purchased just as fast as suitable ones are published. Music is also added, mainly on request, and many magazines in all types are subscribed for.

A supplement to our Circular and Finding list was issued February 1, 1916, giving all additions to the department since January, 1914. News Notes, giving additions and statistics, continues to be reprinted from News Notes of California Libraries each quarter.

Miss Kate M. Foley, Home Teacher of the blind has been working in that capacity just two years. A report of her work follows. In February, 1916, the head of the department made a trip to Los Angeles and saw the work of the Home Teacher. During the week fifty pupils, some who were being instructed and some who had graduated, were visited. The work being done is marvelous, not only in results but also in the amount accomplished, especially when the great distances covered are considered. The statistics which follow can not begin to show what the Home Teacher actually does, and what the work she is doing means to the blind of the state.

Home Teaching.

The Home Teacher's headquarters are in the Los Angeles County Free Library on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons and in the Long Beach Public Library every other Thursday afternoon. At other times lessons are given in the homes of the blind in Los Angeles, Long Beach and near-by cities. There are pupils at present in Pasadena, San Gabriel, Monrovia, San Fernando, Santa Monica, Glendale, Inglewood and Compton. Outside of Los Angeles County many pupils are being taught through correspondence with the Home Teacher.

Many clubs and organizations of various kinds have been addressed in the interests of the work and for the aid of prevention of blindness.

Handwork is not taught by the Home Teacher, but many pupils are induced either to learn to knit, tat and crochet, etc., or to take up such work again if it had been learned before they became blind. The men are encouraged to work about the house and garden, cut lawns, chop wood, go to the near-by stores and to continue, if possible, the kind of work done before they became blind.

DOCUMENTS DEPARTMENT.

During the period covered by this report the system of classifying the United States documents as devised by the superintendent of Documents has been adopted and the entire collection has been reclassified.

A set of the Library of Congress printed catalog cards for the Department of Agriculture publications has been acquired.

The usual legislative reference work has been continued as heretofore. Reference lists on the following subjects have appeared in News Notes of California Libraries: Torrens system of land registration, Home rule in taxation, Water commission act, Exemption of educational institutions from taxation, Condemnation (of property in excess of that needed) for public purposes, Nonsale of game act, and Alien ownership of land.

The municipal documents collection in particular has grown very rapidly. Publications of more cities, etc., are being received; and the documents have now been fully catalogued and classified.

CALIFORNIA DEPARTMENT.

The following cards have been added to our collection: 48 Pioneers and early settlers, 122 Authors, 33 Artists and 71 Musicians. Frequently the person filing these cards is able to give us photographs and other biographical information in the form of letters, etc., copies of books and pamphlets published, reproductions of works of art and musical scores. The collection of Californiana has been added to in large number, as may be seen by consulting the issues of "News Notes of California Libraries."

The most important single piece of work undertaken by the department during the past two years, is the gathering of material covering the dramatic history of the state. Much success has been had in getting hold of photographs of actors and actresses, play bills, biographical information and copies, both printed and manuscript, of plays written by California authors or produced at California theatres. A very promising beginning has been made in this work, particularly through the kindness of Mr Charles Farrell, former editor of the "Dramatic Review" in placing with us his rich collection of dramatic literature. It is hoped that other persons may be induced to follow Mr Farrell's example.

The newspaper "index" now covers the period from August 15, 1846, to March, 1905, and from January, 1913, to March 15, 1916.

REFERENCE DEPARTMENT.

The work of the Reference Department has proceeded along the lines mentioned in the preceding Biennial Report. With the increase in county free libraries the work of the department has become much heavier; but by reason of the systematization of work, referring requests of individuals to their own local libraries and in general dealing with library systems rather than with individuals, it has been possible to take care of this increase in a satisfactory manner. The addition of a fair number of modern etchings has been welcomed by the art clubs; but the funds available for this purpose have not been sufficient to make the showing which might have been made.

California is still without an educational motion picture and musical record service. We believe that the State Library on account of its distributive system throughout the state, is in the best position to carry on this activity.

CATALOG DEPARTMENT.

The Catalog Department has handled 31,483 volumes and added 98,403 cards to the catalog. This is a very satisfying increase over the amount of work done in the two years covered by the last biennial report. The need of an official catalog, containing an author entry for every title in the Library has been so constant that work on this new tool has been begun. A very good foundation is already at hand in the main catalog kept by the Catalog Department and made up largely of Library of Congress cards. This new catalog will be kept in the Catalog and Order room and will save many trips to the public catalog.

ORDER DEPARTMENT.

The new order system which was installed a little more than two years ago has been an unquestionable success. Almost twice the number of accessions of the years 1912-1914 was made during this biennial period, yet the work of handling them was more easily done.

SUTRO BRANCH.

The Sutro Branch will open its doors to the public in January, 1917. It was hoped that the cataloging and shelving of the books might be so far done that an earlier date could be set; but the fact that funds were not available to employ enough catalogers to finish the task has made this hope futile.

The catalogers have found much material of unusual value in opening up to the light these volumes which had so long been hidden away. With the additions which time will bring, in the way of gifts, when the Branch is ready to receive readers, this collection promises to become an exceedingly valuable reference library. Further delving into it only proves the public spirited generosity on the part of the Sutro heirs in offering it and the wisdom on the part of the State Library Trustees in accepting it for the state.

The Sutro Branch will have quarters in the new San Francisco state building in the Civic Center, the "Program of conditions," etc., for which has been issued to architects desiring to enter the competition for the selection of an architect. It is always true of course that prospective tenants of such a building want more space in the total than may be had with the funds available. The lowest limit which we felt might be set and still enable us to do the work contemplated through the Sutro Branch was given to the Engineering Department when the first survey of requirements was made: a total 15,100 square feet of floor space. The estimate as given in the above-mentioned Program has been reduced to 10,000 square feet, a reduction which will seriously handicap forever the work the State Library might do through the Branch. As the Sutro Branch, must of necessity, under the terms of the gift, remain in San Francisco, it would seem wise so to adjust affairs that working room might be set aside for its use. We can not too strongly urge this very important matter.

COMPILATIONS AND INDEXES.

As required by law, the State Library has indexed the Statutes of 1915 and the Journals of the Senate and the Assembly for the same year and also the similar publications for the extra session of 1916. A handbook for the information of members of the Legislature, 1915, was compiled and published. An index to Code sections amended, etc., by legislative bills was prepared for printing in the daily History of legislative business.

The following compilations were made:

General Health Laws.

Dairy Laws.

California Laws of Interest to Women and Children. Supplement 1913-1915.

Presidential Primary Act, indexed.

Style Book of State Printing Office, indexed.

THE PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION.

While the State Library did not have an exhibit at the Fair, it took part in preparing and supervising the exhibit placed by the American Library Association. During most of the Exposition, some member of the Library staff was in attendance at the American Library Association booth and answered questions which rose out of the material shown. Unusual interest was created by the large map of California setting forth the county free library system. The State Library and the other libraries of California not only financed the placing of the large map and the making of about 2,000 feet of motion picture films showing library development of the state, but also did their full share financially and otherwise towards making the American Library Association exhibit a success. The State Library prepared, printed and distributed several thousand copies of a pamphlet called "California Library Service—Economical, Equal, Complete."

NEWS NOTES OF CALIFORNIA LIBRARIES.

With the addition of each new county free library system, "News Notes of California Libraries" became a fuller and more complete epitome of library work and development in California. The policy of issuing this publication up to date each quarter has been adhered to. As heretofore special articles of a timely library character and bibliographies have been printed in its pages. On occasion it has been suggested that certain articles, well enough in themselves, but outside of a strictly California library nature, be given publicity through this organ, but we have always felt that the greatest good to the library service of this state could be obtained by keeping "News Notes of California Libraries" strictly within the limits set by its title. The work is now in its eleventh volume.

UNION CATALOG AND DEPOSITORY CATALOG.

Libraries throughout the state continue to send cards for filing in the Union Catalog. As the Catalog grows its usefulness increases very rapidly. The depository set of Library of Congress cards received from the Denver Public Library, together with the unfiled accumulations from that library and also from the Library of Congress, have been completely filed. Cards to the number of 130,270 have been received from the libraries of California during the past two years. Information concerning these catalogs and their contents is gladly furnished.

LIBRARY SCHOOL.

Since its organization in January, 1914, three classes have been graduated from the Library School. The class which finished the course in June, 1916, was the first one coming in under the entrance requirement of college graduation, and owing to the fact that college students of the state were not familiar with the opportunities offered by library work, it consisted of only three members. The class which enters in September, 1916, will be as large as the quarters in the State Library will accommodate, that is, twelve. We consider that the school is amply proving its worth. The only difficulty is that the demand for trained workers is far greater than the supply and in all likelihood will continue to be so for several years to come.

The following is a list of the persons who have finished the course, followed in each case by the numerals indicating the year of graduation:

Beard, Ruth, Modesto, Cal., '14. Assistant State Library, Sacramento.
Bomgardner, Esther, San Diego, Cal., '15. Assistant San Diego County Free Library, San Diego.
Briggs, Helen V., Sacramento, Cal., '14. Out of library work.

- Brown, Agnes E., Palo Alto, Cal., '15. Librarian University Farm School Library, Davis.
- Bruner, Helen M., Sacramento, Cal., '14. Assistant State Library, Sacramento.

- Whitbeck, Josephine L., Richmond, Cal., '16. Assistant State Library, Sacramento.

LIBRARY BUILDING.

The bond measure providing $3,000,000 for the construction of two buildings in Sacramento was approved by the people at the general election in November, 1914. Considerable delay has occurred in the acquisition of title to the two blocks of land which the city of Sacramento voted to donate as a site for these buildings. It has been necessary in a few cases for the city to bring condemnation suits, and such matters require much time. Until title to the two blocks is secured and the property turned over to the state, it will be impossible to take any action toward selecting an architect, etc. Meanwhile, however, considerable work has been done in estimating the needs of the various departments of the Library in the new building.

Mention has already been made of the prospects for new quarters for the Sutro Branch.

COUNTY FREE LIBRARIES.

The accompanying table shows very clearly the remarkable development made by the county free library system in California. Without doubt this plan is the most effective and far reaching yet put forward in library work. In the course of a few years every county in California and probably every school district will be organized and receiving in this way a more complete and more economical library service than could be given in any other way. It is worthy of note that in the matter of school districts alone there has been an increase of 545 during the period covered by this report.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, } ss.
COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO, }

I, J. L. GILLIS, being duly sworn, on oath depose and say: That I am secretary of the Board of Trustees of the California State Library; that the foregoing statement of the expenditures of the State Library for the sixty-sixth and sixty-seventh fiscal years, from July 1, 1914, to June 30, 1916, is true and correct.

J. L. GILLIS.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 16th day of October, 1916.

APPENDIX D.

Number of volumes in Library June 30, 1916.

	Number at last report June 30, 1914	Added from July 1, 1914, to June 30, 1916					Grand total
		Purchase	Exchange	Gift	Discard	Total
Main Library, including Law and California -----	170,747	13,428	1,898	*3,064	None	18,390	189,137
Books for Blind-----	3,863	1,355	None	619	154	1,820	5,683
Grand totals ----	174,610	14,783	1,898	3,683	154	20,210	194,820

*Includes U. S. Government publications.

The books, amounting to 13,830 volumes, listed in this tabulation as "Large Loans Collection" in the report of 1912-14, are those which were formerly sent out through the traveling libraries system. In 1911 they were withdrawn; and then were lent to county libraries, particularly those just starting, in large lots. That need no longer exists; so the books have been offered to the libraries of the State at 30 per cent of their list price. Many of them have been sold, for which reason they are no longer given in the total of books in the State Library.

The total in the Sutro collection has not yet been determined.

APPENDIX E.

BOARD OF LIBRARY EXAMINERS.

Members of the Board.

J. L. Gillis, State Librarian, Chairman.

Everett R. Perry, Librarian Los Angeles Public Library, Secretary.

PRESIDENT'S REPORT.

VETERANS' HOME OF CALIFORNIA,
August 28, 1915.

To His Excellency, HIRAM W. JOHNSON,
Governor of California.

SIR: I have the honor to submit to you this, my fourteenth annual report as President of the Board of Directors of the Veterans' Home of California.

Attached to, and as a part of my report, I also submit the reports of the several officers of the Home, namely the Secretary-Treasurer, Surgeon, Engineer and Quartermaster-Commissary, detailing the work and transactions of each department.

The Commandant, Colonel Wm. H. C. Bowen, U. S. A., retired, having resigned on August 15th, no report appears from that officer; but the various matters pertaining to the Home are covered in the other reports. Captain J. P. Edmunds is temporarily acting as Commandant.

The directorate of the Home remains unchanged since my last report.

The personnel of the officers, has, however, changed in several instances.

On June 30th General John F. Sheehan resigned his position as Quartermaster. General Sheehan was an officer of the Home many years—first as Secretary and later as Quartermaster, and served it faithfully and well.

On July 1st the offices of Quartermaster and Commissary were consolidated and Captain J. P. Edmunds was appointed to the position, he having shown marked ability in handling the affairs of the Commissary Department the previous year.

On August 15, 1914, Dr. H. W. Crane resigned his post as Assistant Surgeon, and was succeeded by Dr. A. H. McLeish.

On the 20th of March, 1915, Dr. D. M. McRae tendered his resignation as Surgeon. In his place was appointed Dr. A. H. McLeish, with Dr. L. D. Gass as Assistant Surgeon.

A handsome and commodious Library and Amusement Hall is nearing completion, it having been built with the $15,000 appropriated by the legislature for that purpose.

The building is of frame construction with plastered exterior. It will be steam-heated throughout. The Amusement Hall will seat five hundred people. It will be provided with a fine stage and a moving picture room. Mr. A. B. Spreckels has presented to the Home a drop curtain which is to be painted by Mr. L. P. Latimer, a well-known artist, whose pictures of the redwood forest scenery of California have become famous.

The library is amply large for all future needs. A separate room is provided for those wishing to read. There is an office for the librarian and suitable counter space for attending to his duties.

The library is mostly supported by the Post Fund. Many of the best books, periodicals and newspapers are furnished, and it is probably the most popular resort the Home provides. On July 1st there were four thousand five hundred and fifty-one volumes on hand. The largest circulation in the history of the library was attained this year by the loan of twenty-five thousand one hundred ninety-three volumes to seven hundred and ten cardholders. Fifty-three magazines and thirty-six newspapers have been received throughout the year.

Necessary improvements are continually being made which contribute to the comfort and welfare of the members of the Home. To the recent legislature we extend our thanks for generously appropriating funds for the construction and equipment of bathrooms in the barracks; for wiring for electricity where needed; for plumbing, repairs, improvements, etc.; and for the erection of ten sanitary cottages; in all amounting to $68,500. In addition, $270,000 was appropriated for support and maintenance for the sixty-seventh and sixty-eighth fiscal years, and $2,000 for printing.

We are indebted to the State Department of Engineering and the State Architect for their interest and cordial co-operation in the erection of new buildings and taking care of the many necessary repairs and improvements which constantly need attention.

Concluding, I extend the thanks of the Board of Directors and officers of the Home to the Governor of California, to the State Board of Control and to all state officers with whom we have been associated, for courtesies extended and assistance rendered in our endeavors to administer the affairs of the Veterans' Home of California with fairness and economy, working at all times for the best interest of the State and of the veterans entrusted to our care.

Very respectfully,

SAMUEL W. BACKUS,
President, Board of Directors.

Administration Building.

SURGEON'S REPORT.

VETERANS' HOME, August 1, 1915.

President Board of Directors,

Veterans' Home of California.

(Through Gen. Wm. H. C. Bowen, Commandant.)

SIR: I have the honor to present the annual report for year ending June 30, 1915:

Number of patients treated in hospital during the year.....	783
Number of patients admitted to hospital during year.....	586
Number of patients discharged from hospital during year.....	432
Number of patients remaining in hospital June 30, 1915.....	213
Number of patients treated at sick call during year.....	5,889
Daily average number of patients treated at sick call.....	19.5
Number of surgical treatments and dressings during year.....	8,212
Daily average number of treatments and dressings.....	22.5
Number of patients died in hospital during year.....	120
Number of members died in quarters and on Home grounds.....	3
Number of members died while absent from Home during year.....	18
Total number of deaths during year, including 5 T. A. P.'s.....	141

Of the above—

121 were Civil War Veterans, whose average age was 75½ years.

20 were Spanish War Veterans, whose average age was 47½ years.

Percentage of deaths to total number treated in hospital, 18.

Number of tubercular patients treated during year (about).....	87
Number of tubercular patients who have died during year.....	21
Number of tubercular patients in hospital June 30, 1915.....	29

The following operations were performed during the year:

Amputation of leg.....	1	Fracture of ulna.....	1
Amputation of toe.....	1	Fractures of femur.....	6
Appendectomy	1	Fracture of tibia.....	1
Carbuncle incised and drained.....	4	Potts' fracture.....	1
Hemorrhoids	1	Dislocation of shoulder.....	1
Hydrocele, tapped.....	4	Rib resection.....	1
Paracintesis abdominis.....	2	Rectal abscess drained.....	4
Paracintesis thoracis.....	3	Strangulated hernia.....	1
Super-pubic drainage of bladder.....	1	Minor operations.....	5
Fractures of radius.....	2

The general health of the veterans in the Home is very fair, considering their age. The hospital is crowded to full capacity at all times, and will necessitate building to take care of our ever-increasing numbers.

The present tubercular ward should be turned over to the patients now confined in the old annex and a new and modern tubercular ward built in a suitable location, so as to insure isolation, more room, sunlight and fresh air. Much repair work has been done the past year in the hospital on the plumbing and sanitary fixtures and I believe they are all that can be expected or asked for. The hospital has been re-shingled, the porches have all been rebuilt and the buildings have been painted pretty generally throughout. I believe the food supplied here is good and sufficient in every respect—our milk supply excepted—and arrangements are under way at the present time to increase that.

In closing I beg leave to say that no one can run a place of this kind successfully without the confidence and support of his employees, backed up by advice and support from the board of directors; it has been my good fortune to have had both during my brief incumbency as Chief Surgeon; it has helped me very much, and I herewith tender my thanks.

Respectfully,

A. H. McLEISH,
Surgeon.

QUARTERMASTER-COMMISSARY'S REPORT.

VETERANS' HOME, September 1, 1915.

*General Wm. H. C. Bowen, Commandant,
Veterans' Home of California.*

GENERAL: I have the honor to submit herewith report of the Quartermaster-Commissary Departments of the Veterans' Home of California, for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1915.

The combined departments embrace farm, chicken and hog ranches, orchard, dairy, transportation, laundry, clothing, food and every feature pertaining thereto.

SUPPLIES.

With very few exceptions the supplies furnished by contractors have conformed to the specifications of the contract. When stores are received a sample is taken and forwarded to the California State Board of Health, Bureau of Foods and Drugs, Berkeley, California, with request for analysis and test. The report of the bureau governs the acceptance of the stores reported. It is very gratifying to state that few rejections had to be made.

Home productions have been of exceptionally good quality.

EMPLOYEES.

The departments employ 73 male and 23 female help (38 civilians and 58 members of the Home); total 96. The record shows that the greater percentage of those employed are veterans, members of the Home. In a number of positions, however, their infirmity increased with advancing years; while willing, the work makes it a difficult task to perform. The civilians employed, through the Civil Service Commission, have, as a rule, proven very satisfactory.

Suitable quarters should be provided for civilian employees. At present the quarters are wholly inadequate. Special inducements should be made to hold desirable employees.

DINING HALL.

No effort has been spared to make it attractive and inviting at all times. The interior is well lighted, ventilated (by electric fans), tables and seating so arranged to make it comfortable and convenient for all. On each holiday a special menu is prepared and once a month a special chicken dinner is served. I desire to express my appreciation of the highly efficient services rendered by the Matron, Mrs. C. W. Dibble, under whose direction the waitresses are employed, quartered and cared for, etc.

KITCHEN.

During the year, oil fuel stove burners have been installed; these have proven very satisfactory from every point of view, i. e., cleanliness and economy. The record shows a saving of almost 20 per cent over the use of coal. It has always been the aim of the kitchen to serve good, wholesome and palatable food—in this we have been very successful.

BAKERY.

A change of oil burners has been made in which economy has resulted. Exceptionally good bread is baked.

VEGETABLE ROOM.

One of the great wastes is in peeling potatoes. A new potato peeler has been installed which has served the purpose of eliminating the peeling waste to a great extent. The fresh vegetables received from Home garden have been of exceptionally good quality and sufficient for all wants.

FRUITS.

During the fruit season the following has been received, issued to hospital and general mess:

	Pounds
Apples, fresh	3,377
Peaches	10,363
Pears	3,210
Plums	1,005
Apricots	70
Prunes, dried	1,645
Cherries	3,597
Walnuts	100

WASTE.

Refuse from kitchen, after being filtered, is sent to hog ranch. Old bones, bags, boxes, tea leads, etc., are sold at auction to the highest bidder, the value of which reaches hundreds of dollars each year. It pays to save the odds and ends.

DAIRY.

The herd at present consists of:

Bulls (Holstein)	2
Cows (Holstein)	29
Cows (common)	20
Heifers (Holstein)	2
Calves (Holstein)	13
Total	66

All in good condition.

During the year 37,679 gallons of milk were produced. The Home now possesses an up-to-date modern dairy, thoroughly sanitary in every respect.

TRANSPORTATION.

While the running gear has done good service during the year, it is needless to state that repairs are always required. It is recommended that an auto truck of three-ton capacity be substituted for present freight trucks. It would prove more economical and rapid, in view of the fact that it would carry more tonnage, and the upkeep would be less than for feed for horses, repairs, etc.

HORSE BARN.

The present stock consists of 11 horses and 4 mules. Six of these horses while serviceable are old and therefore can not work out as good as expected.

FARM.

Burbank Spineless Cactus. Two hundred plants were planted last year and these plants are now attaining a very satisfactory growth. The spineless cactus is a natural silage, and valuable as feed. The yield from the field is as follows:

	Pounds
Green feed	29,895
Volunteer hay	124,825
Alfalfa	21,298
Grain hay	101,499
Hay stubble	14,731
Grass for feed	2,555
Total	294,794

The farm showed a net profit of $656.17, with a third crop of alfalfa now in the field, valued at about $200.

CLOTHING.

The strictest economy in issuance of clothing was maintained during the past year. The quality of clothing furnished by contractors was fully up to the specification of the contract.

Clothing purchased during year, number issued, and exchanged:

Value of Clothing Received, Number Issued and Exchanged, During 1914-15.

	Value received	Number issued	Exchanged
Coats	$521 50	148	69

Shoe laces	16 20
Chevrons	3 20
Total	$14,271 54
Total cash sales received,	$844 80

SHOE SHOP.

The Home shoemaker repaired 844 pairs of shoes. The average cost per pair to the Home is .578 cents.

MATTRESS SHOP.

One hundred eighty-three mattresses were made and 176 pillows, 19 cushions, 819 sheets, 965 pillow cases, 429 towels, 203 aprons, 83 mattress ticks and 90 pillow ticks.

TAILOR SHOP.

During the year 511 coats, 898 blouses and 1,212 trousers were recleaned and repaired.

POST STORE.

It being a great convenience to members, officers and employees of the Home, it is a very profitable adjunct as well. For the past year a net profit is shown of $1,832.28.

HOG RANCH STATEMENT.

During the year a departure has been made from raising the common stock hog to that of raising thoroughbred Tamworth hogs for sale. At present writing the pens consist of two boars, two sows and twelve gilts. All registered stock. This is a valuable addition to the ranch.

CHICKEN RANCH STATEMENT.

During the year the system of the plant has been changed, i. e., the "Hogan" system has been established, with a new superintendent in charge. This work has been conducted very successfully. It is fully expected that a marked improvement will result in every respect.

All stock in good condition. Eggs produced and not needed for immediate use are put up in "water glass" and stored. This method has been very successful.

REPORT OF CHIEF ENGINEER.

Brigadier-General Wm. H. C. Bowen, Commandant, Veterans' Home of California.

SIR: I have the honor to submit the following statement pertaining to the work performed in the departments of the Home which are under the supervision of the Chief Engineer, during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1915:

CONSTRUCTION AND INSTALLATION.

Chicken ranch.

House for employees has been completed, fence placed around chicken yard and poultry house, twelve feed boxes made, two bridges built. Shelter house for ducks built. Trench dug around cottage for foreman and trench filled with rock for drainage. House for foreman built with plastering, painting and electric installation complete. Brooder stove installed in small brooder house; thirty-two roosts and thirty troughs were made.

Horse barn.

Room for bus driver was ceiled and three windows placed, and steam line from power house installed.

Post store.

Addition for grocery department made and porch roof on east and south sides reshungled.

Main dining-room and kitchen.

Storeroom partitioned for use of chef. Piping for installing distillate burners in kitchen and bakery run. Connection made on pipe line from dam, and a line run for an independent water supply for oil burners in main kitchen, bakery and hospital kitchen. Steel tank formerly used as a settling tank for fuel oil was placed on hill for supply tank for distillate oil for main kitchen and bakery. New oil burners for main kitchen and bakery installed and are working well.

Offices and administration building.

Frame work on porch, treasurer's office, was covered with wire screen. Cabinets were made for treasurer's, sergeant-major's and sergeant of Company A's offices. Storeroom for records for treasurer's office was made under Commandant's office.

Cow barn.

Yard for penning bull built at cattle shed. End of cattle shed, near new dairy barn, was cut off and roof repaired. Louvers and windows in new dairy barn were screened. Steam line from powerhouse to new dairy barn installed. Two 10-foot gates made and hung at feeding shed for milch cows and mangers repaired. Cess-pit at new dairy barn connected with sewer system and waste water now running into septic tanks.

COMMANDANT'S RESIDENCE.

Sleeping porch built on east side of building.

BOWLING AND SHUFFLE-BOARD ALLEYS.

Roof of bowling alley repaired and roof of shuffle-board alley repaired and tarred and graveled.

HOSPITAL.

Waterways on roof were resoldered and down spouts repaired. Oil tank formerly used for distillate oil at main kitchen installed for distillate oil for hospital kitchen. Galvanized iron heating cabinet made for dining-room. Fifteen electric exhaust fans installed in dining-rooms, kitchen and wards where needed.

HOG RANCH.

House for employees ceiled. Shelter house for brood sows enlarged. Concrete feeding platform built.

BARRACKS.

Floor of lower floor of Chabot cottage, west end, was torn out: about 57 yards of earth excavated, new floor joists and floor placed, old floor rotten and fallen in. Stairway built at south end of engineer employees' quarters, doing away with stairs in center of building and giving room for installing another room. Roof of harness shop reshingled.

FLORIST'S COTTAGE.

New addition completed with plumbing, painting, plastering and electric connections where needed.

DIRECTORS' COTTAGE.

Two doors and frames made, linen closet built, old closet altered for storeroom.

ELECTRIC WORK.

Nine electric lights installed on serpentine road from the stone bridge to the electric depot. Hole drilled through entrance arch and electric light installed. Three electric exhaust fans installed in billiard hall.

ENGINEER'S COTTAGE.

Partition placed in basement of storage room and frame built for skylight in kitchen.

Return line of steam heating system renewed in front of ice plant. Steam line to ice plant repaired. Steam line under administration building was overhauled. Main pipe line from dam was braced and concrete piers installed. Bridge to dam repaired. Filing cabinet made for Engineer's office. Safety guards are being placed around machinery by order of the State Safety Engineer. Center brick wall between boilers Nos. 3 and 4 was torn out as brick had melted and same has been replaced with fire brick set in with "Hi Heat" cement.

Sewerage.

Cast iron sewer pipe was run from Directors' and Nurses' cottages, replacing old terra cotta pipe which was causing stoppage by eucalyptus roots growing into pipes.

Tennis court.

Grading for tennis court has been done as far as possible.

Carpenter shop.

One hundred forty-three caskets and seventeen shipping boxes were made. Twelve benches, forty-eight screen doors and one hundred fifty-six window screens made, and all repairs to furniture and minor repairs to buildings have been done by the Home carpenters.

Painting.

All painting of new work and all repairs in painting has been done by the Home painters.

Tinshop.

All tin and galvanized iron work and construction material required has been manufactured at and necessary repairs in this line have been made in the Home tinshop.

Ice plant.

The ice plant manufactured 162 tons, 145 pounds of ice during the year and supplied refrigeration for the various cold storages in operation.

STATE DEPARTMENT OF ENGINEERING.

Hospital.

Porch floor around south end has been laid and caulked and railing placed. On north end old porch torn down and concrete walls placed and flooring laid and caulked. Old plaster torn off at porch line and metal lath placed. Plaster work on outside of building where torn off was patched. Main hospital building roofs have been reshingled. Eight toilets with flushometers installed in tubercular annex. Walls and ceiling, main buildings, were replastered where necessary. Mud sill in lavatories, Wards 3 and 4, had to be taken out and studding cut away and replaced with concrete foundations. Shower bath installed in old annex. Partitions placed in lavatory, Ward 3, and all inside wire replaced. New plumbing fixtures installed in Wards Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 4, with necessary plastering, woodwork and painting. New basin cocks installed in tubercular annex.

Painting.

All Home buildings, including hospital, fences and sheds, have been painted, both walls and roofs. Interior of Directors' and Nurses' cottages have been painted and varnished. Interior of bakery has been kalsomined. Flagpole painted.

Lavatory, Companies E and G.

New lavatory building has been completed and new plumbing fixtures installed, replacing old lavatory on west end which has been torn off and end of building rebuilt. Lavatory has been oiled and varnished.

Sewerage.

Sewers have been laid from dairy barn, morgue and new lavatory at Companies E and G.

Septic tanks.

Septic tanks have been cleaned out, contact beds have been fitted with mechanical devices and new guides for float valves placed which work satisfactorily; tanks discharging in periods of three hours. Apron lowered and supports cut down for installing larger pipes from tanks to contact beds. Five equalizing tanks cleaned and reducers placed in discharge pipes to septic tanks. New floats placed in tanks and tanks now are working well. Two hundred seventy-five yards of earth hauled and placed over sewer pipe from contact beds to protect from stock.

Carpenter work.

Stairway built on west end of Company E and porch on south side torn down and rebuilt. Partitions taken from hallway of Company

G to lavatory. Rooms at end of Company G relathed and plaster torn off and replastered. Skyline in waitresses' quarters raised to get ventilation and paper roof of inside rooms torn off and tin roof placed. Room in engineer employees' quarters plastered. Porch on upper floor of Administration building torn up and replaced, being badly worn. Lower porch floor, north and south sides, torn out where needed and new flooring laid. Floor in billiard hall replaced and oiled and new steps placed at entrance, south side. Extra rafters placed in blacksmith shop and building reshingled. Directors' cottage and Treasurer's residence reshingled. Steps at north end of Amusement hall rebuilt; old steps and runs in bad shape. Roof of bowling and shuffleboard alleys raised and replaced. South side of jail reshingled. New steps placed Company F, north end.

Concrete work.

Concrete foundations placed under wing and studding on lower porch floor of Administration building and openings left for ventilation. Water pipe from Rector canyon under Southern Pacific Railroad track unearthed and concrete wall placed to protect track in case of leakage. Concrete foundations placed for Nurses' cottage. Concrete walk from gate to steps and curbing around flower beds placed at Engineer's cottage. Concrete foundation placed for steps at south end of billiard hall.

New irrigation system.

The wood pipe irrigation system is complete and water is now being pumped to alfalfa fields.

Oil pipe line.

Oil line is being installed to pump fuel oil from spur track at Southern Pacific Railroad to storage tank in rear of power house, a distance of 3,600 feet. A four-inch pipe line is to be used with an internal steam pipe of one inch to heat oil in cold weather. Concrete foundation has been placed for storage tank and power pump at railroad track. Concrete walls were placed for building for pump and electric motor.

Nurses' cottage.

Nurses' cottage was cut in two and moved about twenty-four feet for addition of four rooms. Electric lights, plumbing and heating were installed in addition.

Respectfully submitted,

T. W. LAWRENCE,
Chief Engineer.

PRESIDENT'S REPORT.

VETERANS' HOME OF CALIFORNIA,

August 28, 1916.

*To His Excellency, HIRAM W. JOHNSON,
Governor of California.*

SIR: I have the honor to present herewith my fifteenth annual report as President of the Board of Directors of the Veterans' Home of California. Attached hereto, and as a part of my report, I also hand you those of the several officers of the Home, viz, the Commandant, Secretary-Treasurer, Surgeon, Quartermaster-Commissary, and Engineer, giving in detail the work and transactions of each department.

On September 18, 1915, Colonel J. P. Edmunds was promoted from the position of Quartermaster-Commissary to that of Commandant. Colonel Edmunds was elected to the position of Commandant on the merit system, his efficiency and trustworthiness having been amply shown in the conduct of the duties entrusted to him the year before. Being the son of a Civil War veteran, and being also a veteran of the Spanish-American War, he is in sympathy and close touch with members, thus adding to his value to the Home.

On October 16, 1915, Captain F. P. Bliss was elected to the position of Quartermaster-Commissary. Captain Bliss came to the Home with a splendid Army record. His experience in this class of work in the Army peculiarly fits him for the duties expected of him in his present position.

In other respects the personnel of the officers remains unchanged since my last report.

The erection of the $15,000 building for Library and Amusement Hall was covered in my last report. I will further mention it to state that the building was opened in October, 1915, and the Assembly Hall officially designated as "Lincoln Theater." A great deal of pleasure has been afforded the members from this valuable addition.

In December, 1915, a moving picture outfit was purchased, and the expense thereof paid from the Post Fund. Possibly nothing that has been done for the members of the Home has given as much pleasure as this. Arrangements are made for four picture shows each week (two under the auspices of the Home), and these are always well attended. A full complement of scenery was also purchased for Lincoln Theater from the Post Fund, thus materially assisting in the presentation of successful entertainments, which are given from time to time.

The new Library is a source of continual pleasure. The best books are purchased and a large number of papers and magazines are subscribed for.

The $25,000 appropriated by the last legislature for ten Sanitary Cottages is being used in the erection of four cottages adjacent to the Hospital and six cottages for barracks near Company C. These buildings will help fill an imperative need for more hospital and barrack room.

The $15,000 appropriation for bathrooms in the barracks is meeting a requirement, and the work on these bathrooms is being conducted by the State Department of Engineering.

Every effort is being made to add to the pleasure and comfort of the veterans who are entrusted to our care, and they seem appreciative of this fact. Harmony exists among them to a marked degree.

Recommendations and specifications are being formulated by the Board of Directors for presentation to the Legislature of the state, having in view the authorization, with your approval, of certain additional buildings, improvements and repairs which seem to be urgently required.

To the Governor of the state, the Controller, the State Board of Control and other state officials with whom we have come in contact, are due, and I hereby extend with pleasure, the thanks of the Board of Directors for their cordial co-operation and many courtesies extended in administering the affairs of the Home.

Very respectfully,

SAMUEL W. BACKUS,
President Board of Directors.

REPORT OF COMMANDANT.

VETERANS' HOME, July 1, 1916.

To the President and Members of the Board of Directors, Veterans' Home of California.

GENTLEMEN: I have the honor to submit herewith my report of the affairs of this Home for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1916, together with the reports of our Secretary and Treasurer, Chief Surgeon, Quartermaster-Commissary and Engineer for the same period. Each officer's report speaks for itself.

Permit me to quote the result of inspection for the past year of the Home by Colonel J. E. Miller, Inspector-General, N.H.D.V.S.:

“Eligibility of Members: All members on the rolls were eligible for membership in the National Home.

“Women: Women are not admitted.

“Collections: No collections are made from members for support of the Home.

“Buildings and Grounds: Buildings generally in good condition, comfortably furnished, well heated and lighted; grounds well kept, considerable attention being given to beautifying.

“Care of Members: Sufficient uniform clothing is furnished free to members. Food appears to be ample in quantity and well cooked and served.

“Medical Care: The hospital is properly furnished and equipped, and is kept in good condition. The sick are cared for by a surgeon, an assistant surgeon, hospital steward and trained female nurses.”

The conduct of members generally was excellent. The action of a few, however, almost entirely due to the use of liquor, reflects upon the ninety and more per centum of members who are honorable, self-respecting men. Would it not be better if these few men were sheltered apart? Therefore, I recommend that at the next regular session of the Legislature, an appropriation be asked for the construction of a particular barrack for the segregation and restriction of these members whose moral standard, physical strength and self-control are weakened by overindulgence in alcoholic liquors: not to be constructed as a place of punishment but of protection, to shield the weak from temptation and protect the self-respecting members from annoyance.

At this Home are representatives of the regulars, volunteers, sailors and marines of the U. S. Army and Navy, who have upheld our flag and national honor—men who fought in the wars during periods from 1846 to 1898, all ranks from private to colonel, and yet, it must be understood that each and every man possesses a different temperament, which must be judged by careful study of the individual. While the Soldiers' Home is probably one of the hardest to manage of any of the institutions, we have had very little trouble. We must have discipline and it must be firm but not harsh. A true soldier does not object to just and necessary rules so long as they apply to all alike. Confer no special privileges to one that we can not offer to all under similar circumstances.

No matter what we may think as to the real character of a man, when he comes for information, or with a complaint, he is entitled to official courtesy and a fair hearing.

The records show that the greater percentage of those employed are veterans, members of the Home, at a wage that is much smaller than that which is paid to civilians in a like position. The time is not far distant, due to advancing age and infirmity, that the members will have to be replaced by civilians with an increase of wage.

The civilians employed through the Civil Service Commission have, as a rule, proven satisfactory. Suitable quarters should be provided for civilian employees. At present the quarters are not available, therefore, new quarters should be provided. Special inducements should be made to hold desirable employees.

By direction of the Board of Directors a great many improvements have been made during the year to promote the comfort and welfare of the members, and I believe this effort, in behalf of the membership, is appreciated.

The library contains very nearly five thousand volumes, embracing books from the eminent authors of America, England, France, Germany, Russia, Italy and Spain. In modern fiction, history, poetry, military achievement, notes of travel and adventure, the best volumes are in the library. The reading room contains magazines, illustrated journals and daily papers. In contribution to the library the generosity and public spirit of Raphael Weill, Barbour Lathrop and Charles Josselyn are recognized.

The Lincoln Theater of the Veterans' Home was opened in October, 1915. The dedicatory performance was under the auspices of the Twelfth Night Club of San Francisco. The drop curtain, the gift of Mr. A. B. Spreckels, represents a redwood grove on the Russian River, Sonoma County, California. The scene was painted by the well-known artist, L. P. Latimer, from an original sketch made by the artist in the Bohemian Club's redwood grove. The curtain is regarded as one of the best works of art owned by the state of California.

The Home acknowledges the patriotic generosity of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and extends special thanks to the commissioners representing that state at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, and to Mr. J. W. McCune, Lancaster, Pa., Past Junior Vice Department Commander, G. A. R., Pennsylvania. They were chiefly instrumental in permitting the Veterans' Home of California to acquire, at a nominal figure, the chairs used in the moving picture auditorium of the Pennsylvania Building of the Exposition. The Home also acknowledges the gift of musical records from Colonel D. M. Burns of San Francisco.

All national and state holidays have been fittingly observed with proper ceremonies.

The recommendations of the officers, as made, I fully concur in.

I desire to thank the members of the Board of Directors, officially and personally, for their hearty support and kindly consideration.

Any success that has attended the operation of this Home during the past year is largely due to the labor and co-operation of the officers and noncommissioned officers of the Home, and the members generally, to all of whom my appreciation is extended, for I fully recognize the fact that no home can ever succeed in being what a home for veterans should be without the support of its members: they must assist in keeping up with the moral tone in promoting harmony and establishing true comradeship, and I am greatly indebted to the vast majority of members, who, by their manly, self-respecting conduct, deserve my commendation.

To the hearty co-operation and hard work of the officers and employees is due in a great measure the cordial relations that have existed between this office and Board of Control and other state officers and the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers and Sailors.

Respectfully submitted,

J. P. EDMUNDS,
Colonel Commandant.

Entrance to Reservation.

The general health of the men about the Home is good, considering their age. The hospital is filled to its limit. The new hospital addition is rapidly being completed and will give us all the additional space needed.

I believe a new tubercular ward should be built, off to the north of the incinerator, where we would have more isolation and sunlight, and more porch-room than we have at present. The old T. B. ward can be fumigated and disinfected, and can be used for patients requiring some degree of isolation.

Along this line is the question of a new kitchen on the northwest corner of the present dining room, giving us the space now used by the kitchen as extra dining-room space, which will be required when the new buildings are occupied. Also, the remodeling of the male help's quarters. They should be brought up to the same standard as the nurses' and waitresses' quarters.

The hospital has had much repair work done on it during the past year; the wards have all been painted and I believe it is in very good repair. Our food is good and sufficient in every respect, as is our clothing, etc. There is one item in regard to food that I wish to mention: Very many of these men have bad teeth—some of them no teeth at all—and I have frequent requests for permits to go on the "mush table." It is my opinion that every man desiring a seat at the mush table in the main dining room should be accommodated, and that means that the dairy should be increased so that there would be an abundance of milk and mush for every man wanting that kind of diet.

In regard to the help of this hospital and their wages: We pay less than the state hospitals for insane, for work that is equal or greater—not less, I am confident. A good hospital attendant will not stay with us very long, for the reason that just as soon as an opening occurs in one of the other hospitals, he leaves to accept these positions. The first attendant on each ward should draw $40.00 per month, the second $30.00, and in place of calling the second man porter, call him second attendant. These wages are $10.00 per month less than the other state hospitals pay.

With the completion of the new buildings, provision will have to be made to increase the help, both on the wards and in the dining room. With the completion of the new hospital buildings—and their being occupied—our population will be about one-third of the Home. I believe it would be consistent to build a small band stand out in front of the hospital and give us music two afternoons each week.

Respectfully submitted.

A. H. McLEISH,
Surgeon.

REPORT OF QUARTERMASTER-COMMISSARY.

VETERANS' HOME, August 3, 1916.

*Colonel J. P. Edmunds, Commandant,
Veterans' Home of California.*

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit herewith report of the Quartermaster-Commissary departments of the Veterans' Home of California, for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1916.

The combined departments embrace farm, chicken and hog ranches, dairy, transportation, laundry, clothing, food and every feature pertaining thereto.

SUPPLIES.

With few exceptions the supplies furnished by contractors have conformed to the specifications of the contracts. The instructions of the State Board of Control, regarding sampling, are complied with, and samples are regularly sent to California State Board of Health, Bureau of Foods and Drugs, Berkeley, California. Their analysis and report determines whether stores shall be accepted or rejected. This service is of great value to the Home.

EMPLOYEES.

The departments employ 78 male and 26 female help (49 civilians and 55 members of the Home), total 104.

The increasing infirmities of the veterans, members of the Home, is causing them to be replaced, in increasing numbers, by civilians.

The problem of quarters for these civilians is a growing one. To retain good help, proper quarters must be provided and properly maintained.

Increases of pay should be made in cases of desirable employees who remain for long periods.

WASTE.

Refuse from kitchen is sent to hog ranch. Green leaf trimmings are sent to chicken ranch. Sacks, rags, shoes and other waste and worn out articles are sold for the best price obtainable.

KITCHEN.

The cooking gives satisfaction. To give real service the whole kitchen and bakery should be reconstructed on a modern, sanitary plan.

BAKERY.

Exceptionally good bread is baked. Also pies, coffee cake, buns, corn bread, ginger bread, etc., which are regularly on our bill of fare.

ORCHARD.

During the fruit season the following was received for issue to hospital and general mess:

Apples -----	1,750 pounds
Apricots -----	160 pounds
Almonds -----	129 pounds
Pears -----	1,075 pounds
Prunes, fresh -----	440 pounds
Prunes, dried -----	20,033 pounds
Walnuts -----	254 pounds

The surplus of 10,000 pounds from the prune crop is to be sold.

VEGETABLE ROOM.

All vegetables used at the Home are raised in the garden, except potatoes and part of the onions. All of the vegetables for the general mess are prepared for use in the vegetable room. A vegetable peeler and a slicer are in regular use, saving both labor and material.

LAUNDRY.

During the year, 286,374 pieces of all kinds were laundered at an average cost per piece of 0.41158 cents. The machinery is in fair condition.

The purchase of a tumbler drier is recommended.

VEGETABLE GARDEN.

During the year the following was received for issue and sales:

Celery -----	480 bunches
Peas, green -----	220 pounds
Rhubarb -----	17 pounds
Onions -----	6,174 pounds
Beets -----	9,235 pounds
Carrots -----	12,224 pounds
Parsnips -----	9,806 pounds
Turnips -----	18,914 pounds
Cabbage -----	9,311 heads
Peppers, green -----	420 pounds
Lettuce -----	716 dozen
Cucumbers -----	796 dozen
Squash -----	11,174 pounds
Cauliflower -----	15 heads
Tomatoes -----	26,020 pounds
Beans, string -----	2,151 pounds
Onions, green -----	1,271 dozen
Parsley -----	62 bunches

SHOE SHOP.

During the year, 1,113 pairs of shoes were soled and heeled. Two men are employed in the shop at $15.00 per month each.

TAILOR SHOP.

During the year, 574 blouses, 189 dress coats and 705 pairs of trousers were cleaned and repaired. One man is employed at $15.00 per month.

HARNESS SHOP.

There were made during the year, 855 sheets, 897 pillowcases, 94 mattress ticks, 21 pillow ticks, 383 hand towels and 395 aprons. In repairing harness 1,018 hours were employed.

HORSE BARN.

The present stock consists of 9 horses and 3 mules. These animals are worked to their full capacity but are not able to do all the work required.

FARM.

The yield was as follows:

	Pounds
Green feed -----	25,160
Volunteer hay -----	77,060
Alfalfa -----	90,145
Grain hay -----	27,790
Hay stubble -----	3,000
Corn fodder -----	11,460
Total -----	234,615

The new irrigation system is working well, although the supply of water is not sufficient to do all that is desired. Green alfalfa is cut and supplied to cows daily. This will be done during the entire season until frost comes.

CLOTHING.

The quality of clothing furnished by contractors was in accordance with the specifications of the contracts.

Clothing purchased during the year, number issued and exchanged:

	Value received	Number issued	Ex- changed
Coats -----	$317 75	25	25
Blouses -----	3,470 25	188	380
Trousers -----	3,788 40	377	673
Overalls -----	103 37	87	123
Jumpers -----	28 57	30	9
Overshirts, merino -----	1,304 00	750	492
Overshirts, cotton -----	202 88	108	353
Knit jackets -----	495 90	178	58
Undershirts, merino -----	690 78	543	806
Undershirts, cotton -----	130 19	96	54
Drawers, merino -----	791 12	594	953
Drawers, cotton -----	183 77	49	169
Socks, merino -----	330 74	768	2,062
Socks, cotton -----	83 58	170	775
Hats -----	758 40	275	488
Shoes -----	2,319 00	309	555
Suspenders -----	93 23	269	291
Handkerchiefs -----	54 10	434	395
Shoe laces -----	23 40	---	---
Totals -----	$15,169 43	5,250	8,661
Cash sales of clothing, $302.54.

TRANSPORTATION.

The running gear has been kept up during the year, notwithstanding the constant changes of blacksmiths. A Studebaker combination passenger and freight automobile, having a capacity of 1,500 pounds, has been ordered and will soon be in use.

It is again recommended that an auto truck of three-ton capacity be substituted for the present freight trucks.

DAIRY HERD.

The herd at present consists of:

Bull (grade Holstein) -----	1
Cows (grade Holstein) -----	46
Cows (common) -----	6
Heifers (grade Holstein) -----	10
Calves (grade Holstein) -----	16
Total -----	79

The herd is being improved by purchase of grade Holstein stock, elimination of common stock, and slaughter of cows which do not produce enough milk to pay for their keep. A thoroughbred bull, not related to any of the herd, is needed to still further bring up the stock.

During the year, 37 calves were born and 28 (bulls and common) sold; 15 cows purchased; 6 cows and 1 bull died; 7 cows were slaughtered; 32,619 gallons of milk were taken up by the commissary for issue and sale. The production of milk, for issue and sale, is now 120 to 130 gallons per day, which is sufficient for the needs of the Home.

HOG RANCH.

Stock on hand:

Boar (Tamworth) -----	1
Sows -----	30
Hogs -----	94
Shoats -----	83
Pigs -----	64
Total -----	272

The ranch supplies all fresh and salt pork used at the Home, only ham and bacon being purchased. The stock is being graded up by the thoroughbred boar, and another is to be obtained for the same purpose. The plant is in good condition except that some minor repairs are needed.

CHICKEN RANCH.

Stock on hand:

Hens -----	2,646
Chicks -----	3,548
Total -----	6,194

During the year, 25,100 dozen eggs were sent to the commissary for issue and sales, and 455 dozen were placed in incubators; 101 ducks, 877 hens and 1,855 cockerels were used for food; 5,398 chickens were hatched in Home incubators.

The work of our superintendent (Mr. Frank Constable) has built up the stock. The second year of the Hogan system has shown its practicability. With certain alterations of buildings now in prospect, we will probably have housing for enough hens to fully supply the Home with eggs. In order to tide over the nonlaying season, 5,549 dozen eggs have been laid down in water glass.

Respectfully submitted.

FRED P. BLISS,
Captain, Quartermaster-Commissary.

REPORT OF CHIEF ENGINEER.

VETERANS' HOME, August 8, 1916.

*General Samuel W. Backus, President, and the Board of Directors,
Veterans' Home of California.*

(Through Col. J. P. Edmunds, Commandant.)

GENTLEMEN: I have the honor to present herewith the following report of the work performed by the various departments under my supervision, during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1916:

ADMINISTRATION BUILDING.

Partition placed in old library for addition to Treasurer's office; studding and lath placed, as well as new floor laid. All alterations made as ordered; new linoleum laid on floor; new shelving placed in vault for Treasurer; screen doors and windows were renewed in building.

DIRECTORS' COTTAGE.

New screen was built over skylight in kitchen; skylight built over area-way between pantry and kitchen; table made for kitchen; screen doors and windows were renewed.

ENGINEER'S RESIDENCE.

Addition to Engineer's residence was built and a new garage, with concrete floors and side walls, was also completed.

TREASURER'S RESIDENCE.

Outhouses at Treasurer's residence were repaired.

NEW LIBRARY AND AMUSEMENT HALL.

Concrete box was placed near library for catch basin for sand from storm water. Twelve-inch terra cotta pipe line was laid from amusement hall for storm water. Sewer line was run from building and connected with sewer system near Commandant's residence. Earth taken out from under stage of "Lincoln" theater to bottom of footing, on account of surface water draining under building. A ditch was dug from bowling alley to stop surface water from getting under the building. Motion picture machine was purchased from the Panama Exposition and installed in "Lincoln" theater. Chairs purchased from same place, were overhauled and installed in theater, chairs on side were secured to floor; center chairs are removable. First motion picture show was given on February 8, 1916, and the performance was very satisfactory and pleasing, pictures being very clear and distinct. Picture shows are being given four times a week. Curtains were placed on windows in "Lincoln" theater, to darken windows, so as to give matinee performances of motion picture shows when wanted. All needed bookracks and cases have been made for library. Fifty-two bronze wire screens, with frames, were also placed in library.

HOSPITAL.

Fifteen ventilating fans were installed in hospital dining rooms, upper and lower, kitchen and lower wards. A carpenter has been employed steadily at hospital doing needed repairs.

MAIN DINING ROOM AND KITCHEN.

Porch on north end of main dining room was taken up, new sills, floor joists and floor replaced; joists and sills were badly rotted. Entry-way in main kitchen was ceiled; double swing doors placed in kitchen; screen door hung to swing outward and all screens renewed in doors. Two kitchen tables were overhauled. Two screen doors were made for main dining room. New drain boards were placed in additions to main dining room for new sinks that were installed by the Department of Engineering. New dishwashing tables made for main dining room.

BARRACKS AND SHOPS.

Old library building has been partitioned off for an addition to Treasurer's office and additional quarters for Company F. Ventilators have been placed in quarters in old shuffleboard building. Stage in old social hall was taken out and walls and ceiling were lathed for plaster, for additional quarters for Company A. Stairway was taken out to janitor's room and a door was placed on outside under porch. Place fixed under porch at Company B barracks, for keeping hose cart for fire purposes. Old steps were replaced at carpenter and shoemaker shops.

CONSERVATORY.

A twenty-four foot addition was placed on south side of conservatory; new benches installed in old building as those in use there were in a very bad condition.

CHICKEN RANCH.

New feed troughs made for chicken ranch; laying houses were overhauled as well as other work necessary for the care of young stock. Seven small chicken houses were built and repairs made to colony houses as required. All fencing was overhauled.

HOG RANCH.

Shelter house at hog ranch was raised eighteen inches and concrete piers placed under same for circulation of air, thereby giving ventilation, and should stop all trouble caused by the winter rains. Concrete platform for feed shed placed and new feed troughs made.

DAIRY BARN.

Fence at cow corral has been overhauled. Sliding door at dairy barn was repaired. Sewer line was run from old dairy barn and connected with sewer system at horse barn. New toilet installed at sleeping quarters of milkers in old dairy barn.

EMPLOYEES' QUARTERS.

Quarters in old power house building, formerly occupied by hospital male employees, was remodeled and fitted up as quarters for hospital waitresses. Six small rooms being made out of the one large room and a space partitioned off for bathroom and lavatory between the two wings of building. All walls were lathed and plastered. New table made and three double compartment wardrobes made for same. Wainscoting placed around porch and porch screened in. Water tank in tower of old power house building was removed and place was remodeled for three rooms for sleeping quarters for the night attendants at hospital. Tank was found to be badly rotted on bottom of staves. Cottage, formerly used as quarters for hospital waitresses, has been remodeled and is now used as a dwelling house by the families of the commissary clerk and baker. Screened porch, dish cupboard and wash tray frames were made for same. Steps were renewed and coal box built for book-keeper's residence.

TENNIS COURT.

Tennis court has been completed and a woven wire fence erected around same.

IRRIGATION SYSTEM.

Connection was made to wooden pipe through alfalfa fields to septic tank and all sewer water now running on alfalfa fields. New centrifugal pump has been installed at well at county road for use in irrigating lower alfalfa fields.

OIL PUMPING SYSTEM.

Have received the parts needed for changing the large triplex pump, that was formerly used for irrigating purposes, to a pump for the purpose of pumping fuel oil from storage tank at railroad track, to the supply tank in rear of power house. The pump easily handles one hundred barrels of fuel oil per hour, at a very low cost; the meter reading shows that the cost for electricity is about one-fourth of a cent per barrel of oil pumped. All millwork for the new pump house has been made by Home labor. During the heavy rains of the last season, the water backed up in the drainage ditch to pump house. The cause of this was, that the ditch at county road had not been cleaned out, and culvert at railroad track was partially filled with gravel. The pump has given complete satisfaction, greatly reducing the cost of getting oil from railroad track to the Home, and is a great saving in time as well as money.

POWER HOUSE.

Safety guards have been placed around all machinery, as ordered by the state safety engineer. Center wall of Nos. 3 and 4 boilers was rebuilt, the wall was widened and fire brick was used in place of red brick, as was formerly installed in old walls. Walls and targets of Nos. 1 and 2 boilers were overhauled and additional fire brick placed in division walls, as old brick were showing signs of melting; back end of same boilers was torn down and rebuilt. Fire boxes in Nos. 3 and 4 boilers were repaired and a baffle placed in back of furnace to spread flame before reaching combustion chamber. New safety valve springs were installed by order of state safety engineer, cutting boiler pressure from 100 to 85 pounds. Pipe line installed from ice plant to power house to run waste water from refrigerating engine condenser to hot well for feed water for boilers. New steam kettles installed in the hospital kitchen. Engineer's office, in power house building, has been enlarged and a new filing cabinet made by carpenter and installed. New power vegetable peeler has been installed in vegetable room in hospital.

PIPE LINE, RECTOR CANYON.

Several trips were made to Rector Canyon to inspect pipe line. Found line in good shape, with the exceptions of a few minor leaks which were repaired. Found strainer holes at dam clogged by silt and the reservoir at back of dam partially filled with rocks and gravel. It will be necessary, this coming summer to install a sluice-gate in dam so the winter rains will free the reservoir. Unless something is done, the pipe line, no doubt, will give considerable trouble from getting sand into line. There is going through pipe line from Rector Canyon about 120,000 gallons of water per day and we are pumping about 40,000 gallons in the same time and are unable to keep domestic reservoir full.

ICE PLANT.

The ice plant manufactured and delivered one hundred and thirty-four tons, thirteen hundred pounds of ice during the year, and supplied refrigeration for the various cold storages in operation in the Home.

CARPENTER SHOP.

One hundred and four caskets and eighteen shipping boxes were made during year. Fifty-two bronze screens made for new library. All repairs to furniture, etc., around camp, were made as needed, as well as minor repairs to buildings and quarters as required. Work has been started on new addition to electric depot, the railroad company furnishing the material and the Home doing the labor.

PAINT SHOP.

All painting of new work and all repairs in painting has been done by Home painters, as required.

TIN SHOP.

All tin and galvanized iron work and construction material required, and all necessary repairs to same, has been done in the Home tin shop.

STATE WORK.

HOSPITAL.

Woodwork in lavatories in Wards Nos. 2 and 4 has been replaced. Old woodwork in wheel chair lavatory has been torn out and replaced by new, walls relathed and plastered, concrete floor placed and new plumbing fixtures installed in same. Work of rescreening hospital building has been completed; two hundred and twenty windows and thirty-seven doors have been made and wired. Three doors and one hundred and fourteen transoms have been rewired. The above screens are of bronze wire and should go a long way toward making the building fly proof. Three "Armeo" iron sinks have been installed in hospital kitchen and dishwashing room, with all the necessary water and sewer connections. Work of installing a larger water supply system, to hospital, has been completed, and same is giving great satisfaction. All lavatories in hospital building and annexes have been repainted where plaster was torn off to install new plumbing fixtures.

EMPLOYEES' QUARTERS.

All plumbing fixtures in bathroom, toilet and lavatory have been installed in new quarters for hospital waitresses, including all the necessary sewer and water connections. Plumbing fixtures for toilet, bathroom, hot water heater, and wash trays have been installed in quarters for commissary clerk and baker's residence, with all necessary connections. Work of repainting interior of old power house building, used as quarters by the male civilian employees of the hospital, has been completed; material for this painting was furnished by the Home.

BARRACKS.

Porches built for Companies D and E and painted. These porches were built for the purpose of airing bedding. Steam line to Company C cottages, post store, restaurant and amusement hall and library has been completed, radiators installed in post store, restaurant and Company C cottages, line tested out and is working well. There was considerable delay in the completion of this work, owing to the heavy rains. Work of rewiring the Home has been taken up with the Department of Engineering and a representative of the department has been on the grounds to look over the work and am awaiting his report to find what further steps will be taken in the matter. Wainscoting on walls of Company G barracks has been removed and walls relathed for plaster; this has been done as a sanitary measure. All loose plastering in old social hall, now used as quarters for Company A, as well as that on walls of Company G, has been removed and walls replastered with "Reno" hardwall plaster.

IRRIGATION SYSTEM.

Eight-inch wooden pipe for irrigating alfalfa fields has been laid. Four-inch wooden pipe taken up and relaid in vegetable garden, completing irrigation system in both places. New centrifugal pump, installed at well at county road for irrigating lower alfalfa fields, has been tested out, proving to be very satisfactory, pump delivering 500 gallons of water through six and eight-inch pipe at a distance of 2,200 feet.

OIL PIPE LINE.

Concrete foundation placed for oil storage tank at oil spur track and galvanized iron storage tank erected; concrete foundation placed for oil pump and pump placed thereon; concrete culvert placed under electric railroad; concrete walls for pump house placed and building erected; concrete box was placed in center of oil spur track to catch oil from cars to fill storage tank. Alterations made to pump, changing same from a water to an oil pump, and connections made to oil line to supply tank at the power house. All work completed and giving great satisfaction. Pump house given two coats of paint. Seven hundred and fifty feet of ditch was dug to drain pumping station.

MAIN DINING ROOM AND KITCHEN.

Galvanized iron flashing placed on roof of main dining room, between kitchen and dining room. Two "Armeo" iron sinks installed in main kitchen. Two white enameled iron sinks installed in additions to main dining room.

BUILDINGS.

Blacksmith shop has been repainted. New addition to conservatory has been given two coats of paint. "Armeo" iron sink has been installed in dairy barn for can-washing purposes.

NEW SANITARY COTTAGES.

Contractor has force of men on grounds excavating for and placing forms for foundations. All forms for foundations for the four sanitary cottages at hospital, except inside form for heater room have been placed and are ready for concrete. Excavating is going on for the six sanitary cottages and forms are being placed as rapidly as possible.

NEW BATHHOUSES.

Foundations for the above bathhouses have been placed. Work of erecting buildings is being done as rapidly as possible. Roughing-in plumbing is being done as buildings are erected, and fixtures will be installed as rapidly as possible.

Respectfully submitted.

T. W. LAWRENCE,
Chief Engineer.

STATIONERY AND SUPPLY DEPARTMENT.

In April, 1911, shortly after assuming office, the Superintendent of the Capitol Building and grounds installed a stock record system by which a record of all purchases of supplies and the disposition of same is kept. Prior to that date several thousand dollars worth of supplies were purchased each year and no record of same kept; even the bills for supplies were not filed away for reference. Only a portion of the bills for stationery and supplies purchased prior to 1911 could be found. No record of the disposition of the supplies was made. Supplies were purchased in small lots as needed, no competitive bids were secured, and no uniformity of supplies was attempted, resulting in great waste to the state.

A comparative table, showing prices paid for office supplies prior to 1911 and the prices paid by this department in 1911, 1912, 1913 and 1914, was published in the last report of this department, which showed an average saving of 47 per cent. This record has been maintained for the fiscal years, 1915-1916.

In the report of 1914 a recommendation was made to the effect that the purchasing of stationery and office supplies for all the state departments throughout the state should be centralized in one general supply department, as had been done with the offices in the Capitol Building, much greater economy and efficiency would result. At that time each institution and department, outside of the Capitol Building, secured bids on its own particular requirements, there was no standardization of office supplies, and purchases were made from time to time in small lots, as the supplies were needed.

Governor Johnson, in his message to the legislature of 1915, recommended the creation of a State Purchasing Department, which recommendation was later enacted into a law.

This department, feeling a deep personal interest in the success of the new general department, later recommended to President Neylan of the Board of Control and State Purchasing Agent McMillin, the taking over of the $4,000 stationery and general supply stock, also the revolving fund of $6,000, in order that a centralized general office and stationery supply department should be maintained in the Capitol Building. The recommendation was agreed to and well-equipped office and storerooms and basement space was assigned such new division of the State Purchasing Department.

Although divorced from the purchasing end of the state's business since May, 1916, this department feels that the work it started back in April and May, 1911, by and with Governor Johnson's sanction and encouragement, of buying state goods at right prices and keeping a proper record of their disposition, has borne good fruit in the creation of the State Purchasing Department. That department is in the infancy of its value to the state. Let it not be encumbered at any time with too many red tape rules and methods; then its success is assured.

During the sixty-sixth fiscal year we distributed from our supply department $6,605.69 in supplies. Of this amount, $1,957.91 was supplied the legislature. In the sixty-seventh fiscal year the special session of the legislature used $87.70 supplies from our supply department. The total amount disbursed from our stockroom in the sixty-seventh fiscal year was $4,585.87. This is for a ten months' period in the sixty-seventh fiscal year up to and including April 30, 1915.

On May 1st this department turned over to the State Purchasing Agent all the supplies on hand as a nucleus for a central stockroom for the entire state. Under his direction the system which we have been following for several years in this department can be extended to all state offices, commissions and institutions, with proportionately larger savings, owing to the much greater volume of business to be handled. From our records the Purchasing Department will be able to control purchases of supplies for the stockroom, as we have a record of the exact amount of each article used by the various departments for several years past.

HANDLING OF LEGISLATIVE SUPPLIES.

The following is a copy of report made by this department to the 1915 session of the legislature, relative to the handling of legislative supplies. It was printed in the Senate Journal of May 4, 1915, and in the Assembly Journal of May 3, 1915:

SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, May 3, 1915.

To the Honorable Members of the Forty-first Session of the Legislature of the State of California:

GENTLEMEN: Herewith I present for your information report of the legislative supplies furnished the legislature for the present session, also comparative tables showing cost and amount of supplies as compared to the sessions of 1909, 1911 and 1913. This report covers the present session up to and including April 30, 1915.

Senate Daily Journal.

Previous to the session of 1911 no itemized bills for purchases made by the secretaries or sergeants-at-arms of either house of the legislature were filed in the Controller's office, and a search of the archives in the office of the Secretary of State has resulted in finding only the itemized bills of the sergeant-at-arms of the Senate for 1909. For total purchases made by the aforesaid officers of the legislature, but not itemized prior to 1911, a search of the journals, page by page, has had to be made.

Along about 1900 the sergeant-at-arms of each house and the secretary of the Senate acquired the habit of purchasing supplies and stationery for the legislature that had been previously secured from what was then known as the janitor's office of the Secretary of State. The high prices paid for such supplies is brought out by reference to the following table, and the prices then were lower than for former sessions. These high prices also prevailed on stock furnished from the janitor's office.

This system of furnishing supplies was checked somewhat by this department in the 1913 session. I addressed a communication to the sergeant-at-arms of each house at the beginning of the session, stating that this department was prepared to furnish all stationery and supplies on requisition, without cost to the legislature.

The table on page 12 gives the prices paid by the sergeant-at-arms as compared to the prices paid by this department at that time, the difference in many instances exceeding 50 per cent. Our purchases are made on yearly contract, secured after fullest competition, and it is needless to say that the saving over retail prices is considerable. The supplies are issued by this department only on requisitions signed by the secretary of the Senate, chief clerk of the Assembly, the sergeant-at-arms and the chairmen of the various committees.

13 tin cash boxes.....	35 75	19 50

The above items, taken from bills presented by the sergeant-at-arms during the 1913 session, are only cited as comparative prices and do not show the total purchases.

Previous to the 1913 session there had never been any record kept that would show the amount, cost or disposition of supplies used by the legislature. The establishment of such a system by this department was of great value in making up our stationery schedule at the beginning of the present fiscal year. The items used by the legislature were included and purchased on the regular contracts.

I am glad to state that during the present session this department has had the fullest cooperation of the officers of the Senate and Assembly, and the result will be seen in the final totals.

In 1909, the Senate, through its secretary and sergeant-at-arms, expended for stationery and office supplies, exclusive of the cost of codes, statutes, expressage, postage, binders, etc., $7,645.76. The Assembly for the same session purchased, through the sergeant-at-arms, supplies to the amount of $5,178.60, making a total of $12,824.36. The same supplies in 1911 cost $7,922.63; in 1913, $4,102.41, and in 1915, $2,896.12.

In 1909, typewriters were rented at the rate of $10 each per month; in 1911, $4.00 per month; in 1913, at the rate of $3.00 per month; and for the present session we are paying $3.00 per month, with no charge for the month of February, making a net rental of $9.00 for the four months, or at the rate of $2.25 each per month.

In 1909, an electrical firm was paid over $700 by the legislature for electrical supplies and work that is now furnished by the electrician of this department, without charge. In 1911 the electrical supplies cost the legislature $391.20. In 1913 the only charge of this nature was $2.00 for rent of an electric heater for one of the committee rooms, and this session there has been no expense of this kind charged to the legislature.

The ice and water service this session has been furnished by this department from our central ice storage plant without cost to the legislature. In 1909 this service cost the sum of $918; in 1911, $734.95, and in 1913, the sum of $766.25. In previous sessions this service has been furnished through the sergeant-at-arms. Our ice is now purchased at the rate of $5.50 per ton, as against $20 per ton paid prior to the installation of the central ice storage plant.

In 1909 $286.35 was paid by the sergeant-at-arms for locksmith and key work; in 1911, $496.75; 1913, $162.25 (of which approximately half was expended through this department), while this session there has been no charge whatever for this work, the same being performed by our typewriter repairman in connection with his regular duties.

In 1909 there was expended by the sergeant-at-arms the sum of $509.28 for carpenter work, such as repairs to windows, desks, etc. In 1911 this cost the legislature $672.59. In the past two sessions all work of this kind has been taken care of by the employees of this department without cost to the legislature.

During the present session on two occasions this department has furnished potted plants and flowers for decorative purposes in the legislative chambers, which in former years cost several hundreds of dollars on similar occasions. By referring to the report of the Committee on Inaugural Ceremonies I note that the total expense of the inaugural ceremonies this session was but $92, as compared to $402.60 in 1911, $1,305.77 in 1907, $1,823.90 in 1903, and $1,208.95 in 1899.

In the following comparative table I would like to call your attention to the fact that the period covered by the 1900 session was but three months, the same for 1911, over four months for 1913, and four months for the present session.

Two years ago, on the suggestion of State Printer Friend W. Richardson, now State Treasurer, and the superintendent of this department, the statutes were so amended that the bill filing rooms of each house, which were formerly, when separately conducted, so productive of confusion and unsatisfactory results, were consolidated into one centralized bill-filing room for both houses, under the direct management of the State Printer; and the hiring of porters and watchmen for both houses of the legislature and their management, which had in past sessions of the legislature produced such unsatisfactory results, was placed under the direction of the Superintendent of Capitol Building and Grounds.

That such change has been successful in increased efficiency and at less cost than heretofore is no doubt apparent to all the members of the legislature, particularly those who have served in former sessions.

Senate Daily Journal.

This department is prepared to receipt for the return upon adjournment of the legislature of any supplies furnished on requisition to committees or members thereof.

Respectfully submitted,

GEORGE G. RADCLIFF,

Superintendent Capitol Building and Grounds.

By J. F. MISPLEY, Secretary.

TYPEWRITER SERVICE DEPARTMENT

In November of 1911 the attention of this department was directed to the matter of the care of typewriters in the Capitol Building, which numbered approximately 100. The offices were compelled to call in outside repairmen whenever their typewriters were in need of attention, paying for the same from their contingent funds.

In November, 1911, with the consent of the State Board of Control, there was appointed a typewriter expert. It was his duty to inspect, clean, oil and repair all the typewriters and adjust new ribbons whenever needed. In addition to this, all the small general repair work, such as keys, locks, etc., was turned over to him. During the legislative session we were able to render prompt service to the numerous typewriters used by the legislature, which amounted to about sixty machines. The key work for the legislature is also handled by the typewriter expert. In September, 1914, there were approximately 150 typewriters taken care of by this department. There are at the present time 220 typewriters, 34 adding machines, 2 Edison mimeographs, 8 dictaphones, 2 multigraphs, taken care of by this department. A record is kept of the machines, showing the number, operator, when purchased and when traded in for a late model.

We have also maintained a centralized mimeograph machine in this office, where almost the entire mimeograph work of the state government in Sacramento is furnished.

The stenographers in various offices cut the stencils, bring them to this department and our typewriter expert runs the desired number of copies. The mimeograph department has been of great assistance to the offices in the building, particularly the Civil Service Commission, in turning out announcements, forms and examination questions. There are many rush jobs that the printing office would be unable to fill in a hurry, which the mimeograph department is able to turn out on short notice. Since inaugurating this department the following work has been done:

ICE SERVICE.

A little more than two years ago an ice storage house was installed in the basement, the construction work being done by our own employees. Ice is purchased at the wholesale rate of $6.00 per ton. Delivery to the different offices in the Capitol and Forum buildings is made each morning, and in the summer time twice a day. All the work in connection therewith is performed by either the engineer or fireman of the Capitol, in addition to their regular duties. No charge is made to any of the departments for the ice. Previous to two years ago each department bought and paid for its own ice at the rate of one cent per pound, plus shrinkage.

The following record shows the total net pounds of ice furnished each department from July 1, 1914, to July 1, 1916, and the cost to this department at the rate of $6.00 per ton (the approximate old-time cost to each department being three and a half times the amount given below):

REPAIRS TO THE BUILDING.

During the past spring and summer the engineer and fireman, when not busy with their other duties, re-puttied, where needed, all the skylights on the roof of the Capitol and gave each framework two coats of paint. There are forty-five of these skylights, average size 8 by 10 feet, eight lights each. They also cleaned and painted two large ventilators 10 by 10 by 5 feet each; also one smokestack 6 by 6 by 16 feet. In the aggregate they put in twenty days of eight hours each on the work and used ten gallons of paint and several paint brushes.

This fall the same two employees did the following work on the three water tanks, each 6 feet in diameter by 6 feet high, in the attic of the Capitol: First, washed out thoroughly with water; second, all rust scraped off; third, washed all over with alcohol to destroy rust remnants; fourth, two coats of red lead and oil. This was a most difficult job, but it was well done.

During the past summer the engineer and fireman painted the iron fence around the four front blocks of the Capitol property. Time on the job, fifteen days each; paint used, nine gallons; brushes, three No. 25 Adams.

Several offices have been furnished with new carpets this year and before the present fiscal year several others will be so treated.

Painters are at work at present painting and tinting several legislative committee rooms on the fourth floor, after which they will do some repair and touching up work on the other floors.

A most spacious and well equipped substation for the United States Post-office Department has been installed in Room 23, first floor of the Capitol.

This winter, during the rainy days when the men can not work outside, it is expected that much clean up and repair work will be done on the dome stairway and walls.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING.

In 1909 and 1911 the state was paying four cents per kilowatt hour for the building lights, which was seven-eighths of the monthly bill; three cents per kilowatt hour for the dome lights, two cents per kilowatt hour for the elevators, and a monthly rate of $72 for eight old style obsolete arc lamps on the grounds.

In the spring of 1911, after the new department had been created, the Superintendent of the Capitol began negotiations with the electric power companies doing business in Sacramento, with the result that in July a contract was effected with the Great Western Power Company whereby the state was to pay $1\frac{1}{8}$ cents per kilowatt hour for all electric energy consumed, the same to be measured from the meter in the basement of the Capitol Building and which meter was to be read jointly by a representative of the corporation and a representative of this department. When this contract was entered into with the Great Western Power Company, which corporation was the lowest bidder, the same rate ($1\frac{1}{8}$ cents) was made to apply to the State Printing Office, which for years had been paying five cents per kilowatt hour for all energy.

Since this contract went into effect the state has installed in the Capitol Park what is termed an underground conduit system for park lights, with the result that today there are 29 luminous arc lamps, 56 walk lamps and 12 dome arc lamps in operation, giving a total candle power of 132,500, as against 8 arc lamps in the park and 12 in the dome previous thereto, and only giving a candle power of 10,000.

An illustration of the saving made and the increased efficiency of the lighting system can be noted below. The bills for the month of January in 1909, 1911, 1913 and 1915 are taken, as these are the legislative years:

	Candle power	Kilowatt hours	Amount of bill
1909	10,000	28,228	$1,026 55
1911	10,000	38,457	1,429 75
1913	132,000	29,640	555 81
1915	139,000	25,250	473 44

Since this department was created there has been installed the following electrical equipment:

Department	Equipment	Consumption	Remarks
Engineering	Blue print machine	9,600 watts	Efficiency increase.

Building	New equipment	1,000 watts	Adding machines and mimeographs.
	Total	179,866 watts

The old style arc lamps on the grounds cost $9.00 each per month for energy, and only gave 500 candle power per lamp. The new arcs we have installed give a candle power of 2,500, while the expense of operating is but $2.97 per month.

In addition there have been installed intercommunicating telephone systems as well as buzzer and bell systems, both in the Capitol Building and in state offices in the Forum Building.

In the Capitol Building many of the obsolete electric fixtures have been replaced within the last two years by modern lighting units, giving a better distribution of light and in many cases cutting down the consumption of current. In the committee rooms the old fixtures have been replaced by modern lighting units, giving more and a better distribution of lights.

WORK DONE ON CAPITOL GROUNDS.

The greenhouse was furnished with a first-class heating system in 1914. This plant also furnishes heat for the State Insectary.

During the winter seasons of 1914-15 the ground employees built a new fence around the nursery yard; new bins for soil, sand, leaves and fertilizers; a new lath shade-house 20 by 50 feet, 30 garden benches, new iron pipe arch for the wistaria arbor in front of the Capitol; 30 garden-valve boxes; two chrysanthemum shelter frames, one 14 by 80 feet and one 20 by 60 feet; all flower beds in the nursery were lined with new redwood curbing; all old frame boxes in the nursery yard were replaced with new ones, totaling 150 feet in length by 6 feet in width; 50 new glass sashes 3 by 6 feet; new flooring in the boiler pit; redwood curbing, 1½ by 6 inches, installed between shrubbery beds and lawn on the four blocks surrounding Capitol Building, requiring 2,250 lineal feet of lumber; the old greenhouse partially rebuilt, repaired and painted; two coats of paint, inside and outside, to the gardeners' toolhouse; all the electric light posts painted twice each year; park benches painted each year at least once; ladder, tools and garden stakes painted each year; lath house, nursery fence and all bins painted at least once.

About 11,000 square feet of new cement sidewalk has been constructed, about four-fifths of which was replacement work. Altogether, in the last two years, a cement worker and helper have been hired about six months in such work. A goodly portion of this work has been done in and around the "California" section of the park, Fourteenth and Fifteenth and M and N streets. Before the fiscal year ends, if the funds hold out, cement curbs and gutters will be installed on M street from Fourteenth to Twelfth, and on Thirteenth street from L to N. The department buys all material, at competition prices, that goes into work of this kind.

Many new trees and shrubs have been added to the park collection, particularly in the California section.

The trimming and cleaning of the trees and shrubs in the park is followed up every winter, and Head Gardener Vortriede reports that they have never been in better condition than at present.

Two large camellia trees were last year presented to the park by Mrs. M. J. Curtis.

The United States Department of Agriculture donated a number of plants.

The city of Sacramento was granted an easement, revocable by the state at any time, for a new 20-inch water main through the park on the Thirteenth street line, from L to N. This department insisted, and which was done, that the city commissioners officially make request for such easement and then accept the conditions that the state prescribe in the matter. This agreement is on record in the archives of the state, the city hall and in this office. Without expense to the state, the city connected the park water pipe lines to the new large main, put in water gates where required, dug and filled the ditch in a manner prescribed by the head gardener, and finished the work within a prescribed time limit. Eighty dump cart loads of soil were available from the ditch for use in other parts of the park.

During the past two years there were used in park work :

176 loads of manure, mostly for flower beds.

10 loads of sand at propagating house.

20 loads loam at propagating house.

30 tons sugar factory lime for lawns.

8 tons bonemeal for lawns.

$\frac{1}{4}$ ton nitrate and $\frac{1}{2}$ ton superphosphate for flower beds and greenhouse.

496 tons of Folsom Prison decomposed granite for park walks.

The park nursery produces over 80,000 plants a year, grown from seed and cuttings. All seedlings have to be transplanted once and most cuttings have to be shifted twice from cutting boxes to three and four inch pots, before being planted out in the grounds. The park nursery supplies potted plants for the Governor's Mansion, the Capitol and Forum buildings offices and also the cut flowers and greens for the same places. All this work is done by the florist and one gardener, except on rainy days they have the assistance of several gardeners to help transplant seedlings, make cuttings, clean greenhouse plants and do other work around the nursery.

The nursery grounds are too small for the present day purpose, though they should not be enlarged in the Capitol Park. Head Gardener Vortriede suggests that the state buy five acres adjoining the State Fair Grounds on the north. Here should be grown all cut flowers needed for Capitol buildings and Governor's residence, also the bulk of bedding plants for the Capitol Park, Governor's residence grounds, Sutter Fort, and State Fair Grounds; also greens for decorative purposes could be grown here. This nursery would need from the beginning a propagating house and hotbed frames and sashes. In time to come a fine state conservatory for plants should be built here.

When the new state buildings are finished it will be found an absolute necessity.

During the past two years the services of Head Gardener Vortriede have been much sought after by many school districts in the state for the purpose of inspecting and plotting out schoolhouse grounds and furnishing working plans for the same. About three years ago the department inaugurated this "side issue" work for the head gardener, and since then it has grown to a greater magnitude than was expected. Much of the head gardener's time is now taken up in preparing such architectural landscape plans and in most cases he has to first visit the school district. The latter is the only expense incurred by the districts in such work. Recently the head gardener has furnished park working plans to several of the smaller cities of the state.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

The total 1917-1919 biennial appropriation request filed with the Board of Control and the State Controller, for salaries, maintenance and supplies, is $5,000 less than that granted by the legislature in 1915, and if the same is allowed the work in and around the grounds and Capitol Building can be kept up to the present standard and no doubt permit within the next two years of even further improvements.

The only special appropriation that will be requested of the legislature is one for $5,000, with which to defray the cost of giving the exterior of the Capitol Building, next fall, one coat of paint and also re-tar and re-gravel the roof.

Next year, no doubt, architects will be busily engaged at work on competitive plans for the two new buildings, costing $3,000,000, which the state proposes to erect on the two blocks of land facing the Capitol Building, and in connection therewith this department suggests that the architects be requested to prepare the basement plan of the new office building to the end that therein may be accommodated the engine and boiler rooms, electric generating plant, well or wells, pumps, ice storage room, a general or separate shop for a carpenter, painter, electrician, upholsterer and other regular mechanics whose services will be required when the new state buildings come into use. After completion of the aforesaid improvements the Capitol Building could be connected easily with the new, modern and less costly heating plant, and the Capitol grounds and building could be furnished with water at a saving of $150 per month.

If this plan prevails, then most of the basement of the Capitol Building which, with but few changes, can be made as near fireproof as the basement of any building in the country, should be properly converted into the permanent archive department for all branches of the state government, the need and value of which will be more appreciated in future years.

If the state does not possess the legal right at present to enter into long term fuel oil contracts, then the quicker such is done, the better.

In 1911 this department secured a rate of 76½ cents per barrel for fuel oil for the Capitol Building, with the privilege of buying at that figure for at least three years. A contract was entered into only until July 1, 1912. The year-to-year rates per barrel follow: 1911—76½ cents; 1912—85 cents; 1913—85 cents; 1914—94 cents; 1915—95 cents; 1916 to November 15th—95 cents. At the present time the state is paying $1.30 per barrel on a 1,200-barrel purchase order, which will be sufficient for the Capitol Building for at least one year.

If the price of fuel oil should at any time within the next year or so drop to less than $1.00 per barrel, it would be well for the state to enter into a long term contract for such necessary commodity for what is going to prove its more extensive use in the Capitol, the new state buildings and the state printing office.

STATE CAPITOL OF CALIFORNIA.

BY GEORGE G. RADCLIFF.

The state of California justly lays claim to having the most magnificent capitol grounds in the country, one of the best equipped capitol buildings for its size to be found in any of the states.

The Capitol grounds cover an area of 33.5 acres, extending from Tenth street on the west to Fifteenth street on the east, five city blocks, and from L street on the north to N street on the south, two city blocks. For further description of this beautiful park reference is made to the article by State Gardener Vortricde.

The Capitol Building is stated to be one of the best constructed, most substantial and beautiful capitols in the United States. It is reached from the four streets surrounding the grounds by means of broad walks and carriage drives, the ascent from the ordinary level being attained by two gently sloping grass-covered terraces. The work on the foundation of the building was commenced on September 24, 1860. The corner stone was laid with Masonic ceremonies May 15, 1861, and the building completed under original plans as amended, which left the basement unfinished, in the year 1874. It was first occupied by the Governor and state officers November 26, 1869. The Supreme Court met there December 3, 1869, and the legislature took formal possession December 6, 1869. This occasion was observed by a general display of flags and the firing of a salute. The cost of construction up to that time was $2,600,000.

The plans of the Capitol were drawn by F. M. Butler and were selected by the commission on May 19, 1860, as the best and most artistic of seven competitive plans submitted. Reuben Clark was appointed superintending architect, which position he held until the latter part of 1865, when he had to resign on account of ill health. On January 1, 1866, G. P. Cummings was appointed superintending architect: later A. A. Bennett succeeded Mr. Cummings, and the building was completed under his supervision.

During the years 1906-07-08, under the administrations of Governors George C. Pardee and J. N. Gillett, the State Capitol Commission, composed of the Governor, the Secretary of State and the State Treasurer, expended the sum of $372,925 in completing the attic and basement and remodeling parts of the interior.

The architecture of the building is of the florid Roman-Corinthian style. The building faces the west, has a basement and four stories surmounted by a dome, and contains 146 rooms. The remodeling work added seventy rooms to the original number. The average size of the offices on the first and second floors is 28 by 28 feet, the height 20 feet on the first floor and $18\frac{1}{2}$ feet on the second. The Appellate Court room is 28 by 30 feet and 20 feet high. Some half dozen of the offices are a few feet smaller than the average given.

The exterior walls of the basement and first story are constructed of California granite, and the three upper stories are of hard burned brick covered with mastic and four coats of white paint.

The north, south and west walls are of perpendicular and horizontal construction. At the north and south ends, on the east or rear side, an ell or wing 81 feet in width extends out 58 feet from the main line of the building, and from the center of the building on the same side, a semicircular wing 69 feet across at its greatest width is built out for a distance of 54 feet. This middle wing is entirely occupied by the State Library.

The following are the principal measurements of the State Capitol in detail:

Elevation of embankment upon which the Capitol stands from street level at junction of Tenth and M streets to grade at base of building.....	10	feet
Height of building from grade at base of Capitol to ball surmounting the lantern at top of dome.....	237	feet
Total elevation of ball of Capitol above street level at junction of Tenth and M streets.....	247	feet
Length of building (greatest dimensions).....	320	feet
Depth of building (greatest dimensions).....	164	feet
Height of building (not including dome).....	94	feet
Height of basement story (in clear, from floor to ceiling).....	8	feet
Height of first story (in clear, from floor to ceiling).....	20	feet
Height of second story (in clear, from floor to ceiling).....	$18\frac{1}{4}$	feet
Height of third story (in clear, from floor to ceiling).....	$16\frac{3}{4}$	feet
Height of fourth story (in clear, from floor to ceiling).....	$10\frac{1}{2}$	feet
Wings at north and south ends (east side) width.....	81	feet
depth.....	58	feet
Semicircular wing in middle (east side) width.....	69	feet
depth.....	54	feet
Space between wings at ends of building and semicircle in middle.....	27	feet
Area covered by building.....	52,480	square feet
Diameter of rotunda, first floor.....	$53\frac{1}{2}$	feet
Circumference of rotunda, first floor.....	168.07	feet
Height from first floor to top of rotunda.....	125	feet
Length of main halls.....	222	feet
Width of main halls.....	$15\frac{1}{2}$	feet
Size of Senate chamber.....	73 x 56	feet
Size of Assembly chamber.....	73 x 75	feet
Height of Senate and Assembly chambers.....	$36\frac{1}{2}$	feet

There are two entrances on the east, one each on the north and south, and one—the main entrance—on the west side of the building. The entrances to the building on the north, south and west sides are through massive arched granite porticos, supporting colonnades of iron pillars making other porticos on the second or legislative halls story. The corridor at the entrance is of Utah white sandstone trimmed with a California marble base and large panels of California onyx framed with marble. The doors of the other entrances to the building, to the portico on the front of the building on the second story, and to the entrances to the Assembly and Senate chambers are of massive hand-carved walnut.

The basement is used for storage and record rooms for the several state officers, for the state archives, for the receiving and shipping of goods, books, etc., by the superintendent, State Library, and other departments. The engine rooms, dynamo and meter rooms are also located in the basement.

The corridors of the first floor are beautifully tiled; a colored representation of the great seal of the state in the floor panels six feet square ornaments the entrance to each corridor. The rotunda is decorated with colored stucco work, the wall panels are scroll and figure work, and to the height of the first story is ornamented with scrolls and representations of mining, of science, literature, art, music, seed time and harvest.

On the first floor are located the offices of the Governor, Secretary of State, State Controller, Board of Equalization, State Treasurer, Clerk of the Supreme Court, Attorney General, the law library, the court room of the Second District Court of Appeal, the chambers of the judges, and the offices of the clerk, bailiff, and stenographer of the court.

On the second floor are located the offices of the Lieutenant Governor, Superintendent of Capitol Building and Grounds, State Printer, Speaker of the Assembly, Tax Commission, telephone exchange, newspaper reporters' room, supply room of the State Purchasing Department, and Surveyor General; the Senate Chamber also is located in the south L and the Assembly Chamber in the north L on this floor, east of the corridor. In accordance with custom, the Senate Chamber is furnished in red and the Assembly in green, the desks of the members are of black walnut, and those of the presiding officers are of hand-carved mahogany. Neither one of these rooms is decorated, and the ceilings and walls of both are white with the exception of the lobbies under the galleries, which are painted green in the Assembly and blue in the Senate. In the Senate Chamber hangs a magnificent oil painting of Washington, and in the Assembly Chamber one of Lincoln. On the frieze over the Lieutenant Governor's chair in the Senate Chamber is the following Latin motto in gold leaf: "Senatoris est civitatis liberatem tueri," which being translated means, "It is the duty of a senator to guard the liberty of the commonwealth." On the frieze over the Speaker's chair in the Assembly is the following Latin motto: "Legislatorum est justas leges condere," which being translated means, "It is the duty of the legislators to make just laws." The Senate and Assembly chambers are wainscotted with California marble, and are large, roomy, and well lighted. Accommodations are provided for the presiding officers' clerks in rooms adjacent to the chambers, and a large gallery in each house for the sight-seeing public.

The corridor of this, the second floor, is tiled with marble mosaic, in panels; in each corner and the center are representations of bunches of California poppies.

The library has a large semicircular room off the corridor on this floor; in fact, the library has been assigned rooms on every floor of the building, and occupies about thirty per cent of the floor space of the entire Capitol.

On the third floor are the galleries of the Senate and Assembly chambers, and the numerous offices of the State Board of Control, the Inheritance Tax and Corporation Tax departments of the State Controller's office, and offices of the State Purchasing Department.

The fourth floor, with the exception of the space occupied by the library, has been arranged for legislative committee rooms and employees offices.

From the dome the scenic beauty impresses the visitor. The view will repay one for climbing the iron stairs from the fourth floor level to the top of the dome. If one should get tired, he can stop at the first or second landings, one quarter or half-way to the top, and walk around the outside of the dome, at either of these stations, and the view will be delightful; but if he will continue on and climb the winding stairs to the very top he will obtain a magnificent panoramic view of the Sacramento Valley and its surrounding mountain ranges. On the east can be seen the Sierra Nevada, on the west the Coast Range, away off to the north the snow-capped peak of Mount Shasta, and to the south, Mount Diablo. The course of the American and Sacramento rivers at the northwest corner of the capital city, and their course as one river can be traced for miles on its winding way towards the sea.

In the latter part of 1914 approximately 40,000 square feet of office space in the new Forum Building, Sacramento, was leased for a term of years to accommodate the growing requirements of the state government in Sacramento and relieve the overcrowded condition of the State Capitol, where for several years previous the legislative committee rooms, during the recess periods of the legislature, as well as every available basement room, had been used as offices.

In 1914 the city of Sacramento, by a nine to one vote, approved of the issuance of a $750,000 bond issue for the purpose of purchasing the two blocks of residence property immediately in front of the State Capitol on Tenth street and then deeding the same to the state of California. On these two blocks of land will be erected a library and court building (combined) and a large office building, costing $3,000,000. Construction work on these buildings will likely commence in the fall of 1917.

Early next year the state will actively commence the erection of a $1,000,000 office building in San Francisco.

In Los Angeles the state has leased, and uses for office purposes, several floors of the Union League Building.

STATE CAPITOL PARK.

BY STATE GARDENER VORTRIEDE.

The grounds within which the State Capitol stands extend from Tenth street on the west to Fifteenth street on the east, and from L street on the north to N street on the south, taking in ten blocks in all, of the city of Sacramento, including the space which would otherwise be occupied by intersecting streets, and comprising an area of 33.5 acres. The western 11.9 acres were donated by the city of Sacramento to the state; the eastern portion, containing 21.6 acres, were bought by the state for the sum of $100,000.

The grounds are well planted with trees and shrubs; their grateful shade is enjoyed by many visitors. Their growth to large size in comparatively few years, and their evident health and vigor speak volumes for the fertile soil in which they grow and the fine climate they enjoy.

The two magnificent terraces set off the imposing Capitol Building to its best advantage, leading all around the same, and planted with geometric precision in harmony with the architecture of the building. East, or back of the Capitol, the planting is more in the natural style.

All continents and all climes have contributed to the wealth of plants in these choice grounds. The date palms from Asia, Africa and South America; the fan palms from Asia, North America and Australia; the bamboos from Asia; the dracenas from Australia; the pampas from South America; the cedars of the Himalaya Mountains; the cedars of Lebanon; the incense cedar from the California Mountains; the stone pine of Italy; the Aleppo pine from Southern France; the cypresses of North America, South Europe, Eastern Asia; the Araucarias of South America and Australia; the fir trees of Norway and California; the Cunninghamias, maidenhair trees, Cryptomerias from China and Japan; the gum trees, rubber trees, silk oaks, acacias, bottle-brushes from Australia; the orange, lemon, loquats, persimmon, pomegranate from Europe and Asia; the walnuts from Asia and America; the horsechestnut from Asia; the butternut and hickorynut from America; the elms from Europe and America; the oaks, evergreen and deciduous, from Europe and America; the pepper tree from South America; the olive of Europe; the laurels of Europe and California; the camellias of Asia; the strawberry bush of Europe; the Pittosporums of Australia; the magnolias of America and Asia; the varnish tree of Asia; the locust of America; the tulip tree and catalpa from the East; the box elder from the East and West; the redwoods from the West; and many more could be named, all of which find a congenial home on these beautiful grounds of rich soil in such a mild and equable climate.

About in the center of the grounds is a plot of half an acre, densely planted with Eastern North American trees. This is an interesting grove of trees and shrubs, collected, planted and dedicated to the state of California by the ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic. They are historic trees collected from the most prominent battlefields of the Civil War. We find here the black walnut, the shellbark hickory, the ash, the water oak, the willow oak, the blackjack oak, the silver maple, the red maple, the rock maple, the tulip tree, the basswood tree, the mulberry, the juniper, the black locust, the American or white elm, the slippery elm, the wahoo elm, and the dogwood.

The three acres southeast between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets and N street and Capitol avenue will be exclusively used for native California flora. Here the plants of the desert, such as the many different and interesting cacti and yuccas, plants loving sunshine to its fullest extent, will meet the moisture and coolness of shade-preferring plants, like the many different ferns, the azalea and huckleberries.

The Sequoia gigantea from the Sierra Nevada meets here its only relative, the Sequoia sempervirens of the northern coast ranges; the sugar pine of the high Sierras; the ocean spray loving Monterey pine, the valley and Douglas oaks of the sunny, dry valley, the tanbark and holly oak of cooler, moister Coast Range; the almost extinct Torrey pine and the silver fir, Abies conusta, meet here the omnipresent bull pine and digger pine.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL.

To HIRAM W. JOHNSON,

Governor of California.

I herewith transmit the first biennial report of the State Corporation Department.

Respectfully,

H. L. CARNAHAN,
Commissioner of Corporations.

October 28, 1916.

REPORT OF STATE CORPORATION DEPARTMENT.

The operation of the Investment Companies Act, or so-called Blue Sky Law, in California has clearly demonstrated the expediency of its passage and the necessity of its continuance. Adopted by the votes of the people for their own protection, the beneficial effects of the law have been so apparent that they have been persuasive even with most of those who, before its passage, sincerely opposed the measure, and the clean business interests of the state, though closely and directly affected by the provisions of the law, have become its staunchest friends.

Not only has it been demonstrated that deception and fraud in the issue of corporate securities can be largely eliminated and legitimate business made more likely of success because of initial examination and subsequent supervision by the state, but that these things can be accomplished at a nominal cost and burden to the state and to the corporations involved.

Expense Not Burdensome.

In the period of 20 months covered by this report—January 1, 1915, when the State Corporation Department commenced its work, to September 1, 1916—2,680 corporations, having an aggregate authorized capital stock of $869,005,104, made applications to the department. The commissioner signed 4,816 formal orders affecting the issue of securities. He permitted the issue by 1,970 companies of 82,781,439 shares of stock at an authorized selling price of approximately $246,353,759, and the sale by 93 companies of bonds of the face value of $59,699,400 at an aggregate minimum selling price of $57,989,881, an average of about a half million dollars per day (including Sundays and holidays) since the department was organized.

For the same period, the total cost of maintaining the department, including the payment of salaries, initial expense of organization and purchase of furnishings and equipment, also providing for the maintenance of a branch office at Los Angeles, was $54,998.16. This is less than one-fiftieth of one per cent of the selling price of the securities authorized to be sold, and considerably less than one one-hundredth of one per cent of the authorized capital stock of the corporations making application to the department. It is also less than a one five-hundredth part of the average cost to the corporation of selling the same securities where they are marketed through brokers or agents.

The total receipts of the department in fees from all sources were approximately $35,000, a tax of a little more than one one-hundredth of one per cent of the selling price of all securities authorized, the remainder of operating expenses being made up from the $10,000 appropriated by the legislature to put the act into operation and from the general funds of the state. The fees required to be paid to the department to cover the cost of examination and supervision of the issue of securities are insignificant compared with the fees which are required to be paid merely for the service of filing articles of incorporation in this and other states.

California Holds Her Own.

California is the second state in the Union in the number of corporations doing business within its boundaries, sixth in the amount of capital invested in corporate enterprises organized within the state, and also sixth in the amount of corporate earnings, being exceeded only by the states of New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Illinois.

It is a significant fact, and a sufficient answer to the lugubrious opponents of all forms of business regulation, that with the Blue Sky Law in operation for nearly two years, California has maintained these relative positions in spite of abnormal conditions which have given a tremendous impetus to business in the eastern states, but which have not materially affected the western coast.

The aggregate authorized capital of new corporations, domestic and foreign, filing their articles in California for the year 1915, was substantially in excess of the record for the preceding year before the Blue Sky Law became effective, and the aggregate capitalization of new corporations for the first eight months of 1916 shows a large increase over the corresponding months of 1915.

Honest and legitimate business has not been hampered, and California is well rid of other classes of corporate enterprises which have either voluntarily fled, or have been assisted in their departure to other states where conditions are more to the liking of the Wallingfords of industry.

Sisson's diving bell, designed to lure treasures from the vasty deep and money from the pockets of the unwary, presented to us by the Blue Sky Commissioner of Oregon, has floated eastward from Los Angeles. Berry's airship has flown to other climes where folks are still separated from their money in purely atmospherical ventures. Railless and earless monorail projects hastily concocted in fertile brains and based upon the intensive study of a two-inch paragraph in a scientific magazine; wave motors that solved the problems of power conservation—on paper only; gold machines that swallowed gold instead of yielding it—the countless gold-brick promotions of febrile imagination, especially indigenous to the southern part of the state, have moved on, unwept and unsung, save for the melancholy chorus of their victims.

Beneficial Effects Evident in California.

A comparison of the number of companies promoted in California during the past 20 months, simply for the purpose of unloading cargoes of handsomely engraved and worthless paper on the public and to then dry up and blow away, with the number of like ventures in any similar period preceeding, is a fair test of the efficiency of the law. Another fair test is to compare the decrease in promotion frauds in connection with new California companies with the increase of such frauds through companies organized outside of California and whose stock, there issued, is peddled here.

This comparison has been so evident and favorable to the law as to cause general comment among business men in position to observe the change. The occasional cry that business is being hurt comes usually, either from those who do not understand the operation of the law and who have not taken the pains to learn, or from those whose business will not stand inspection. Such criticism frequently furnishes reasonable ground for inquiry as to the safety and integrity of the venture in which the critic may be interested.

Stands for Fair Dealing.

The essence of the Blue Sky Law is the spirit of fair dealing. Its administration does not call for the promulgation of a new code of ethics or business principles. Fraud and misrepresentation in the financing of corporations and the sale of corporate securities, which the law is intended to reach, have always been condemned by honest business and honest men. There is no need to impose onerous burdens upon the financing of clean enterprises or to teach honest business how to be honest in newly discovered ways. The department is working only to the end that corporations generally shall conform to the standard of integrity that has been manifest among the decent corporations of California both before and after the law went into effect.

It is not the purpose of the law that the state shall attempt to remove the ordinary hazards of business or that it shall attempt to limit the right to engage in speculative enterprises as long as they are fairly conceived and honestly conducted. Fairly informed of the hazards, the mentally competent should be allowed to determine for themselves whether they desire to risk their money in any lawful venture.

Flexibility Proves an Advantage.

The necessity of such regulation as will protect the public from fraudulent schemes and unprincipled schemers is fairly evidenced by the demand of the people themselves, which has been so general and insistent that no less than 17 states have adopted Blue Sky laws in various forms. California's law is probably the most flexible in its operation of them all. At the same time it is not subject to the constitutional objections that have been successfully urged against similar legislation in other states.

Largely, perhaps, because most of these laws have sought to place definite and specific limitations upon the discretion of the administrative authority, the general custom elsewhere has been either to unconditionally deny an application or to issue a purely formal permit without imposing restrictions as to the amount or character of securities that may be sold, the commissions that may be paid, the disposition of promotion shares, and other matters vitally affecting the destiny of the corporation and the welfare of the investing public. This must result either in a denial of authority to enterprises that might reasonably be trusted to go forward under proper conditions, thereby injuring those who have already invested, or in the grant of authority without imposing conditions necessary to safeguard both prior and future investors.

In California, with the advantage of a more elastic statute, the department has pursued the practice of placing on the face of permits authorizing the sale of securities to the public, a succinct and accurate recital of the financial condition and purposes of the company, based upon the sworn statement of its officers or upon independent investigation by the state.

The company is then required to deliver a copy of the permit to the prospective purchaser of its securities, so that, although the business may be extremely speculative in character or even hazardous, he is fairly advised of the facts and can exercise his own judgment as to the desirability of the investment.

Where it appears necessary or expedient, such conditions are imposed as will tend to give assurance of the fairness and feasibility of the project, rather than to deny applications and discourage enterprises in which people may desire to invest and which may succeed, even though success seems somewhat improbable.

Constitutionality Not Questioned.

The constitutionality of California's Blue Sky Law has not been attacked. Nor is such an attack, if made, likely to meet with success. To establish the validity of the California statute, it is not necessary to rest it solely upon the police power of the state, as is the case with the statutes of several eastern states that have been successfully assailed in the federal courts. Ample authority for the passage of our law may be found in the power reserved by the state to itself, in the constitution, to impose limitations upon the power of corporations.

The scope of police power, on the other hand, rests in the discretion of the court of ultimate resort and can not be accurately defined until that court has spoken. The decision is dependent upon the opinion of the judges as to the public necessity for such legislation—whether the condition sought to be remedied is affected with such public interest as to justify the remedy proposed.

On account of the judicial criticisms of the statutes of other states, it is doubtful if the scope of the California law should be extended beyond the limits where it can be rested safely upon the reserved powers of the state until the Supreme Court of the United States has decided cases now pending before it involving a definition of the limits of the police power of states to enact and enforce such regulations. And, of course, the law should not be amended at any time so that it will impose upon legitimate business such burdens as to render the attempted cure worse than the existing injury.

The courts which have felt impelled to question the constitutionality of these eastern laws have quite uniformly approved of their purpose. In at least two states where the laws were declared unconstitutional, the attacks against them were led by legitimate business interests, which, while they thoroughly approved of the aims of the statute, objected to features which proved unduly onerous to honest and conservative enterprises.

In this state, the administration of the law has not met with similar objection, and the better business men, realizing that their business will be benefited through the drawing of a line between them and crooked business, have generally supported the department.

Worthless Securities Kept Off Market.

The direct financial benefits, accruing through the elimination of worthless or fraudulent securities from the markets of the state, can not be accurately estimated in figures. But a brief survey of the activities of the department may serve to show what has been accomplished.

Few applications to sell securities have been flatly denied. The effort has been rather to persuade corporations to so modify their plans of organization and business as to offer fair conditions to the investor.

Numerous corporations which either did not furnish information essential to a proper determination of their applications or would not or could not conform to reasonable conditions deemed necessary for the protection of the public, have abandoned their plans. Many others, whose plans of business, tentatively submitted, have failed to meet with the approval of the department, have refrained from making application.

Of the corporations filing applications, approximately 120, having an aggregate authorized capital of $53,000,000, and applying for permission to issue securities of the aggregate par value of approximately $23,000,000, have been denied authority or have abandoned their plans, either failing or refusing to furnish necessary data, or to adopt such modification as would justify affirmative action. Of the 1,970 corporations permitted to offer their securities, the permits of 304 have been subsequently revoked by the commissioner. This action was taken in some cases upon application of the company which had completed its financing, or which for other reasons, desired to withdraw its securities from the market; in others, because of abandonment or failure of the enterprise, and in a number of cases upon discovery that the business was being conducted in such a manner as to imperil the interests of stockholders.

The act provides a method of appeal from any decision of the commissioner. The fact that no appeals have been taken is fair evidence that the action of the commissioner, either in denying or revoking or in imposing conditions upon the right to sell securities, was in each case justified by the circumstances.

Some Examples of Suppression.

The activities of the department have not been confined merely to the elimination of trashy frauds, but have been equally concerned with larger enterprises which have offered conditions even more dangerous to the public because their securities, offered as a conservative investment, upon investigation proved to be something less than a bad speculation.

A dignified San Francisco corporation, installed in an expensive suite of offices, was one of the leading opponents of Blue Sky legislation. Shortly after the law became effective, the reason was apparent. It had sold to more than a thousand purchasers nearly a million dollars worth of unsecured promissory notes and called them bonds. Into the purchase of this paper had gone a lifetime of savings of many old men and women, the bulk of estates left by husbands and fathers to their widows and orphans, the accumulations of those who wanted the safest investment and the surest income. On an examination of the company's application to continue their sales, it was found to be in a hopelessly insolvent condition. Its right to carry others down in the crash which followed was not only denied, but the creditors were assisted in organizing so that they saved for themselves a substantial proportion of their claims that otherwise would have been lost.

Another San Francisco company, operating under the cover of a highly reputable but inattentive board of directors, and conducted by a dishonest manager, who attempted to conceal the loss of its only asset of value, applied for permission to sell stock at a price above par. Investigation revealed the fact that the company did not even have a plan of business left. It had previously unloaded considerable stock on the public. Neither it nor its manager has since been permitted to rob others.

This situation and the action taken found an almost perfect duplicate in Los Angeles.

A Fresno capitalist, selling stock in an alleged banking enterprise, which would never have been able to secure a certificate to do a banking business, quickly suspended operations when the department acted, although jurisdiction was doubtful. The grand jury took up the case and there has been some restitution.

Charles A. Elder, convicted of fraud in the operation of the Los Angeles Investment Company, except for the interference of the department, would be now promoting a similar enterprise.

Liquidation of an insurance company was determined upon when its promoter found the State Corporation and State Insurance departments working in harmony for public protection. The company had intended to continue stock sales, which it could not do except by misrepresentation, as the cost of promotion had exceeded the limit established by law, and it therefore could not be granted a certificate to do an insurance business.

An eastern voting machine concern, which had issued more than two and a half millions in stock for patents and paid out from the money secured from the public more than $200,000 cash in salaries and commissions and had not yet marketed a single machine, was denied authority to offer that kind of an investment to Californians.

Recitals of such cases might be prolonged indefinitely. They are related only as examples for the purpose of indicating the character of a few of the enterprises with which the department has had to deal and from which it has protected the public.

Facts Condemn Some Enterprises.

It is not infrequently true that a plain recital of facts concerning the plans of a company which do not appear to be practicable or offer a reasonable chance of success, serves practically the same purpose as a denial of authority to sell its securities. For the prospective investor, being fairly informed of the actual facts and not having to rely upon the rhetorical accomplishments of a smooth salesman, shies at the venture.

Some complaint has been heard that such permits make stock selling difficult. If this is true, it but demonstrates that stock selling in the past has been easier because the investor did not know what he was buying and obtained this knowledge only through costly experience.

Money saved from ultrahazardous and impracticable ventures means that more capital is available for enterprises which reasonably promise returns, and legitimate and efficient business is profiting because of the caution of the public.

Problem of "Promotion Stock."

One of the most serious problems with which the department has had to deal is the disposition of so-called "promotion stock." The unrestricted issue of large blocks of stock for little or no tangible consideration gave rise to the most vicious practices. The crooked promoter deliberately organized a corporation for the purpose of grabbing half or more of the stock, misrepresented it to purchasers, who were led to believe that their money was to finance the enterprise, pocketed the proceeds himself, and then proceeded on his way to the next scheme, rejoicing and jingling. The company was usually left without a business head, without money, and without a hope of successful operation.

Not infrequently, too, the organizer who took promotion stock without dishonest intent, was tempted to sell and realize a personal profit as soon as the company had established a selling price for its unissued shares. The almost inevitable outcome was to ruin the company's chance of financing itself and add another carcass to the boneyard of abandoned hopes.

The history of a holding company formed to finance the construction of a railroad out of Stockton is a recent and typical example of this evil. After building a part of the line, holders of promotion stock began advertising their shares for sale at 20 cents, while the company, desperately in need of finances, was trying to sell stock at a dollar per share. Of course, nobody would buy for a dollar stock that could be purchased for one-fifth that amount. Two streaks of rust, ending nowhere in particular, and the loss of a large amount of money, mostly by people who could ill afford to lose, is the result.

Promoter Must Win for Investor.

The inventor who organizes a company upon the possible value of his invention, the prospector who locates a claim which may develop into a profitable mine, the promoter who contributes valuable services or other foundations for business enterprise, which may succeed if properly financed and managed, is justly entitled to a fair reward. There is no disposition to deny it to him, but the department maintains that he is not entitled to "cash in" until he has made good for those who finance the enterprise.

Where stock is permitted to be issued for considerations of intangible value or impossible of fair appraisalment, it is usually made a condition that the certificates shall be placed in escrow so that the shares may not be resold except under the supervision of the department. When the company has been financed, is a going concern, and has established a value for its shares so that a purchaser is not likely to be defrauded, the escrow is terminated.

In the 20 months covered by this report, shares of stock having an aggregate par value of $44,563,000 have been ordered deposited in this manner. A part of it has been released from time to time where such action was not likely to prove injurious to the company or to the public. Some has not been deposited at all, the thought of actually having to work for their reward proving most annoying to certain promoters. In the latter event, the stock is either not issued and the project abandoned, or, if the promotion stock had already been issued before the law went into effect, the company's right to sell treasury stock and inveigle others into a hopeless situation, has been promptly revoked.

To establish any fixed rule as to the amount of stock that should be issued for considerations of indefinite value, has been impossible. But it has generally proved true that the promotion hog can not travel far in California, because, if he is inclined to take a larger share of the enterprise than conservative corporation policy would approve, his porcine qualities are made so evident on the face of the permit that the prospective purchaser fails to respond.

To Make Investment More Attractive.

The department has met with no little success in urging companies, where the promoter desires control (and frequently he should have it for the welfare of the enterprise), to create a preferred stock to be sold to the cash investor while the promoter retains his interest in common stock. The man who puts up the money secures a more desirable investment, making the project easier to finance, and the promoter or inventor or miner, as the case may be, profits equally if his business succeeds half as well as he thinks it is going to do when he presents his plan to the department.

Dangers of Insufficient Capital.

One of the principal causes of business failure is lack of sufficient capital. A corporation that needs $50,000 to carry out its plans or fairly test its project, and is able to raise but $10,000, is almost invariably headed for the rocks, and the stockholders' money is simply wasted. The financial shore is strewn with such wrecks, although they may have been honestly and even skilfully captained under such adverse conditions.

To avoid this situation, the department, where it seems expedient, frequently provides that subscriptions shall be taken contingent upon raising, within a prescribed period, the full minimum amount required to carry on, or, at the least, reasonably begin the business of the corporation. If the company is unable to raise sufficient funds to meet its minimum needs, the subscriber may rescind his subscription and recover the amount paid in by him, and nobody is injured. If the amount is raised, it immediately becomes available for use and with sufficient capital the business is more likely to succeed.

Organizers of corporations who have real confidence in the success of their plans have welcomed the suggestions of the department as to fair methods of organization and the restrictions placed upon the resale of their shares, because they are finding it easier to interest capital when capital is assured that the promoter is going to work for the company and that the company was not formed for his exclusive benefit.

Regulating Commissions.

Regulation of the amount of commissions that may be paid on the sale of securities has corrected a reprehensible practice to the advantage alike of clean business and the investor. It has seriously disturbed the practice of the buccaneer promoter who voted himself a majority of the corporation's shares for services, and then proceeded to install himself as fiscal agent, not infrequently taking from 40 to 60 cents (and in some cases even more) out of every dollar paid into the company by purchasers of its treasury shares. The burden thus imposed upon the residue of the investment that finally reached the company's treasury was so great that the chances of successful operation and the payment of dividends were extremely remote. Clean business was often forced to compete to secure skilful salesmen, and the cost of financing the better class of corporations also became excessive.

Investigation of one corporation operating in Sacramento developed startling facts, though typical in a lesser degree of many other promotions. This company, if it had been honestly, economically and efficiently promoted and managed, apparently had an opportunity to achieve substantial success. Half a million dollars worth of its stock, however, had been handed out in exchange for an invention. Fiscal agents, who participated largely in the promotion stock, and who also had the management of the enterprise, had a contract allowing them a 40 per cent commission on stock sales. An examination of their own books showed that they had actually retained more than half of all monies received, and although they owed the company money for commissions withheld, they were loaning it money at interest to pay operating expenses. The value of the outstanding stock, based upon tangible assets, was but a few cents per share. In spite of these facts, application was made to raise the selling price of the company's stock from $1 to $2 per share, so that subscribers at the lower price who had not paid in full would be deceived as to the actual worth of the shares, and pay up. The department refused to countenance such practices and stopped a rank stock-selling scheme which was fattening the insiders while the company starved to death.

The department puts a definite limitation upon the expenses of financing enterprises, endeavoring in each case to fix as a maximum the amount that experience has shown should be sufficient to sell securities of like character in similar projects. Except in a few unusual cases, this does not exceed 20 per cent of the gross selling price of the securities and is usually less. In fact, the total commissions authorized to be paid in the sale of stock in the past 20 months amounted to approximately six and a half million dollars, or but two and seven-tenths per cent of the gross selling price of the shares, the average being largely reduced, of course, because a great many companies are financed without any expense for such purposes.

Eliminating the Crooked Salesman.

Through its supervision of agents who must secure certificates before offering for sale the securities of investment companies, the department is weeding out the crooked salesmen who have employed every trick and device short of the use of a blackjack to separate the credulous from their dollars and who frequently deceived even the investor of average prudence.

Outlaw Wildcats Still Operate.

Control over advertising matter concerning the securities sold under the department's supervision has resulted in the elimination of printed promises of impossible returns, fraudulent and deceptive in character and skilfully designed to trap the unwary, with which the state was previously flooded.

The department, however, has no control over the wildcatters operating from the cover of other states, who endeavor to unload their own worthless certificates for personal profit through the medium of cunningly worded advertisements. The only present remedy for this situation is the vigorous enforcement of the penal statute against fraudulent advertising and the insistence upon the part of the people, before even remotely considering an investment, if they would save themselves from almost certain loss, that these outlaws shall obtain a clean bill of health from the Commissioner of Corporations.

The people may safely assume that corporations which find it necessary to evade the provisions of the Blue Sky Law, are not organized for the benefit of the investing public. They may further make up their minds to one of two things—or accept both conclusions—that the promoters are enjoying the ancient and dishonorable pastime of unloading their own stock for personal profit, or that they have adopted the subterfuge of bringing stock, which has been issued to themselves in another state and is, therefore, not subject to the Blue Sky Law, into this state for resale, because their plan of business is such that they dare not present it to the department for inspection.

The investor in such securities usually can have no assurance, other than the word of the promoter who has evaded a California law framed to protect California investors, that any of his money is going into the enterprise to work for him, and no genuine assurance that he is investing in anything more substantial than a promoter's nightmare.

No Injury to Honest Mining.

Misapprehension as to the attitude of the department and the effect of the operation of the Blue Sky Law on speculative enterprises has largely disappeared. This is true in spite of the zealous efforts of wildcat promoters to foster the impression that the law would prevent the development of such enterprises and particularly of the mining industry. Their zeal is inspired by the fact that they desire to excuse their own departure from the state on some plausible pretext; whereas, the real reason is simply that their schemes will not stand the light of day.

It is true that the Blue Sky Law has largely terminated that character of mining—neither placer, quartz nor dredge—which consists in transferring gold to the pocket of the trickster from that of his victim. But it is equally true that the law encourages the kind of mining that contemplates digging a hole in the ground and finding out what may be there.

Many honest corporate ventures are pure gambles and are known to be so by every stockholder. Though speculative, their business may be as legitimate as that of manufacturing rolled oats. If men want to band themselves together in a corporation to go out into a new and untried field and, with their eyes open, take a chance of discovering oil or paying ore, there is no reason why they have not as much right to do so in this form of organization as they have as individuals.

The department does insist, however, that the company desiring to sell stock in its venture show that it has a place to dig a hole, that the prospect be fairly represented to the purchaser of shares, and that his money shall go into the process of development. The policy is rather disturbing to the professional wildcatter, but makes for honest mining. The fact that 312 mining and oil companies, having an aggregate authorized capital stock of $314,262,300, have been authorized to issue $78,580,500 of their securities, is fairly indicative that legitimate mining enterprises have been encouraged.

Adding Safety to Investment.

Where corporate securities offered for sale are represented to be, and in the eyes of the public approach a conservative investment, the department insists that they shall be of that character. Before permitting the sale of bonds, notes, or other definite promises to pay, it must appear that there is a sufficient present security and a reasonable probability that the company issuing them will be able to meet interest payments when due and to repay the principal amount at maturity. Where the purchaser of such securities faces any unusual risk, the company is required to fully advise him of the facts. The wisdom of this policy will be evidenced by the lessening number of foreclosures, and is already apparent in the growing public confidence in this class of securities.

Bureau of Information for Investors.

Every investor in corporate enterprises under the supervision of the department now has a place to which he may appeal for impartial, disinterested and authoritative information regarding the affairs of the company in which he is interested. The extent to which many corporations have been careless of their obligations to small investors is illustrated by thousands of inquiries received by the department from stockholders who have been unable to secure satisfactory information from the companies in which they have invested their earnings and are either ignorant of their legal rights or have not sufficient at stake to justify the expense of an independent investigation.

Although it has no power to conduct examinations, except of such companies as are within its jurisdiction, the department is endeavoring to secure information as to the standing of all enterprises concerning which inquiry is made, and is becoming a general clearing house of information regarding corporate securities generally.

In one case, a widow contemplating the exchange of a country hotel property for 6,000 shares of stock in a refrigerating company that she was assured had always sold for a dollar a share, was saved from loss or a lawsuit by use of the long distance telephone. Investigation by the department, at her request, developed the fact that the company had expired some few years previously and the stock was worth only the current price of bond paper after it has been soiled with printer's ink and sealed with gold wafers.

Public Coöperation Necessary.

To aid the department in detecting and preventing fraud, the people of California are urged to coöperate closely in the administration of the law. The commissioner should be advised of every misrepresentation made in the sale or attempted sale of securities, past or present, so that prompt action may be taken to correct irregularities, and that swindlers may be properly catalogued and denied participation in further enterprises.

Many victims of fraud are disinclined to complain, because they consider their misfortune a reflection upon their business capacity and prefer to accept loss in silence rather than to expose themselves to possible ridicule. It is the duty of all good citizens, however, to protect others from like experiences, and only through the accumulation of such information will the state be able to most effectively carry out the purposes of the law.

While the discovery of crooks is essential to the successful operation of the law, it is but incidental to the other work done in its administration. The department also recognizes that the right kind of promotion and management is one of the most valuable elements in corporate success. An established reputation for ability and integrity is considered in the department, as in any bank, an asset that frequently possesses value measureable in actual dollars, and is always persuasive of honesty of purpose.

Caveat Emptor.

The fact that actual fraud may be largely eliminated and the public protected to some extent against incompetency and bad business methods, does not mean that the prospective investor in corporate securities, the sale of which has been permitted by the state, should not carefully investigate and satisfy himself as to the character of the securities offered him and the standing and ability of the management of the enterprise.

Less than 10 per cent of corporations formed during the entire history of the state have regularly paid dividends from surplus profits earned by them. The same is true of other states, and it is probable that the proportion of failures in corporate business is not greatly in excess of other forms.

The department does not, and manifestly can not, determine for the public whether a business will certainly be successful. It has no control, nor should it have, over the prices that may be charged for products or over competition in any field of industry. Neither can the state guarantee human efficiency.

Speculative enterprises may fail to realize anticipations although honestly and skilfully managed. Business of all kinds will continue to fail through poor management, want of sufficient capital, lack of opportunity, or any of the hundred and one hazards with which almost every venture is surrounded.

The endeavor of the department is to see to it that corporations offering their securities to the public are honestly organized, have a reasonable business plan, are decently managed, and that the prospective investor is fairly advised of the material facts relating to the enterprise to which his subscription is solicited.

Department Aids Corporations.

The department's work is not confined alone to the protection of the investor. It is a bureau of service to the corporation, as well as to the public, and is daily exerting its influence to aid corporate business to proceed along practical lines and to avoid the abnormalities of organization and promotion that experience has proved to be impractical or destructive.

The knowledge that the department has gained of the more successful forms of business organization is available to those who desire guidance and wish to proceed in a manner most likely to accomplish their aims. Advantage of this fact is being taken by corporations and those interested in them, in a constantly increasing measure. Uniformity of organization along better business lines should not only mean a brighter prospect for success, but should naturally inspire in the public a greater confidence in legitimate ventures and render it easier and less expensive to finance clean enterprises.

The department has endeavored at all times to give authority promptly to all ventures honestly promoted or operated, and in doing this to make the burden of compliance with the act as little onerous as possible. Technicalities of procedure have been eliminated as far as is consistent with a proper determination of the merits of the company applying for authority. Formal hearings have been almost entirely dispensed with in the interest of dispatch, and examinations have been conducted at the expense of companies only where no other form of investigation would elicit the necessary facts.

The purpose and intent of the Blue Sky Law are universally commended. It is hoped that its administration thus far has served to justify its enactment. The consensus of business opinion seems persuasive of the conclusion that the State Corporation Department has established itself as a useful and efficient branch of the government. Its endeavor will be to continually extend its field of usefulness to the state and to all of the citizens of California.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

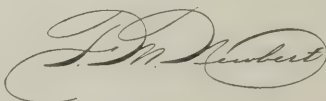

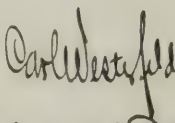

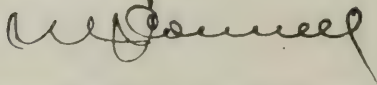

June 30, 1916.

To His Excellency HIRAM W. JOHNSON.

Governor of the State of California.

SIR: In accordance with law, we submit for your consideration the twenty-fourth biennial report of the Fish and Game Commission, the same being a record of the work, receipts and expenditures for the biennial period July 1, 1914, to June 30, 1916. A summary of the work accomplished occupies the first pages, followed by the detailed reports of the department heads and district offices. The appendix contains the statistical reports. Heretofore the biennial report has been the only printed record of the commission. Current activities now are recorded in the quarterly, CALIFORNIA FISH AND GAME, published under our auspices. Further detailed accounts of the work of this board can be obtained, therefore, by referring to volumes 1 and 2 of this periodical.

Respectfully submitted.

Board of Fish and Game Commissioners.

By ERNEST SCHAEFFLE,
Executive Officer.

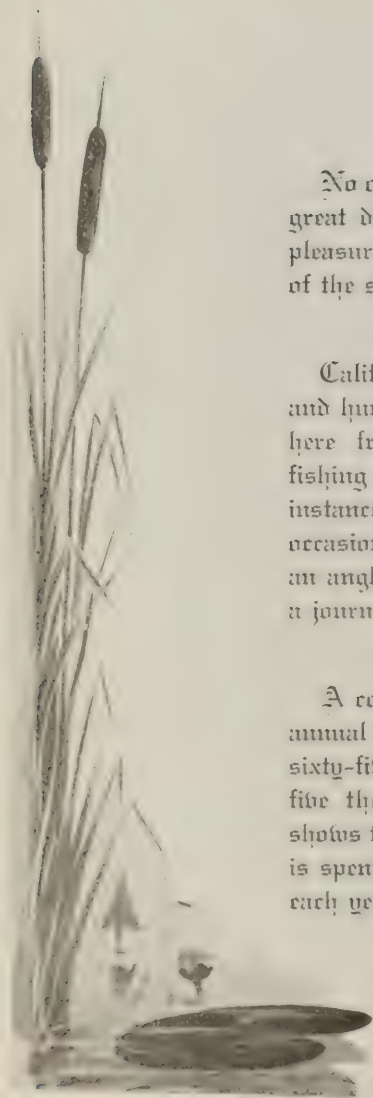

No other natural resource brings such great dividends in money, food, health, pleasure and happiness as does the asset of the state's fish and game resources.

California is a sportsman's paradise and hunters and fishermen are attracted here from all over the world. The fishing near Santa Catalina Island, for instance, has been on several different occasions of sufficient interest to bring an angler from South Africa, entailing a journey of thirteen thousand miles.

A computation based on the average annual expenditure of the one hundred sixty-five thousand hunters and eighty-five thousand anglers in California shows that at least twenty million dollars is spent in the pursuit of fish and game each year.

INTRODUCTION.

The past biennial period has been one of marked advance in the protection and preservation of wild life, the propagation of fish, the stocking of streams, the construction of fish ladders and screens, and above all in the accumulation of important data on fish and game and in the development of a public sentiment favoring wild life conservation. All of the duties of the commission as prescribed by law and above outlined have been performed as fully and faithfully as the financial and other resources have allowed.

The accomplishments here reported have been made possible through funds obtained by the sale of hunting licenses, commercial fishermen's licenses and anglers' licenses, and from fines received from violators. No appropriations have been made by the legislature. Although the larger burden of support rightly falls on the men who hunt and fish, yet, either no revenue, or revenue not in proportion to the benefit received, is derived from others having an interest in game resources. For instance, the fisherman who secures but a few fish each day which he sends to market, pays a larger license fee than the salmon cannery, which profits enormously by the fact that the fish supply is maintained. The market hunter who commercializes game pays the same license as the man who hunts but once a year. The trapper of fur-bearing mammals pays nothing towards the support of investigations needed to assure the conservation of the resources from which he draws profit. Could the license fees be made proportionate to the benefits secured, funds would be available for the further development of the game and fishery resources by the commission.

Many eastern fish and game commissions have the cooperation of numerous sportsmen's organizations, who hire attorneys and otherwise help in conserving game. There are few active organizations of this kind in California and the enforcement of the fish and game laws and efforts to conserve fish and game rest almost wholly with the commission. The problem is made still more complicated because of the lack of cooperation shown by the peace officers of the state and because of the extraordinary size of California, which necessitates each warden patrolling an area in some instances as great as the state of Vermont. (See Fig. 6.)

Nevertheless, the fish and game laws are being enforced as never before. Not only are practically all offenders arrested, but convictions are had in almost every instance. We believe that the consistent enforcement of the game laws is a valuable educational force. Nothing deters the criminal so effectually as knowledge that all crimes will be punished with certainty. The favorable attitude shown by the people of this state at the present time is in part due to the systematic and relentless enforcement of fish and game laws.

In spite of a very severe winter in 1916, game conditions appear to be favorable. Several species of big game, such as antelope and mountain sheep, are little more than holding their own, but every effort is being made to save the remnant. Waterfowl and upland game birds are still to be found in abundance. That more and more men appear to be taking the field each year indicates that California's supply of fish and game is still large enough to encourage, rather than discourage, the hunter and angler. Increased interest in hunting and fishing is clearly evidenced by the augmented sale of licenses up to the end of the fiscal year 1914-15. Fewer hunting licenses were sold in 1915-16, but there are indications that there will be an increase this coming year. On the other hand, there was a marked increase in the number of anglers' licenses sold in 1915 (for detailed figures see p. 242).

Enforcement of Fish and Game Laws.

More arrests have been made and more convictions obtained in this than in any previous biennial period. The fish cases numbered 882 and the game cases 1205, making a total of 2087. Over 83 per cent of the total cases resulted in convictions, a higher percentage than is obtained in any other class of cases of like degree. The fines collected amounted to $33,415, and in addition 3103½ days of imprisonment were exacted from violators. Failure to secure a license led to the arrest of 424 hunters, 141 anglers and 140 commercial fishermen. Violations of the deer laws resulted in the arrest of 227 and violations of the trout laws 100. The fact that there were 115 convictions in non-game bird cases well shows the strong sentiment in favor of protecting songbirds (see p. 239). The increased number of arrests in the past few years indicates a more rigid enforcement of the game laws rather than an increase in violations.

Deputies of the commission have made 512 searches of markets, restaurants, private individuals, conveyances, etc., for illegal fish and game.

Fig. 1. Snapshots of black-tailed deer in Santa Cruz County. Photographs taken by W. E. Peckham on his ranch near Watsonville, California.

The seizures of illegal fish and game have been many. The more conspicuous totals are: ducks, 6695; geese, 1265; quail, 432; shore birds, 120; rabbits, 462; deer meat, 3802 pounds; trout, 5293 pounds; striped bass, 3900 pounds; salmon, 4195 pounds. All wholesome fish and game confiscated is donated to public and charitable institutions, from whom many grateful letters of acknowledgment have been received. Illegally used fishing apparatus, including nets, lines, etc., to the number of 337, have been confiscated. These represent about 12,668 fathoms, or 76,008 feet. This apparatus, after condemnation in superior courts, is destroyed or sold in accordance with law.

The Protection of Fish and Game.

Since the development of public sentiment is necessary to the proper conservation of wild life, emphasis has been placed on educational and publicity work. The Bureau of Education, Publicity and Research has been active in placing before the people of the state, by means of lectures, a quarterly bulletin, and newspaper items, the work of the commission and the needs of fish and game. The motto of this department is "Conservation Through Education." The quarterly, CALIFORNIA FISH AND GAME, has furnished a medium for the publication of statistical and financial reports and of facts regarding fish and game resources. This policy of keeping the people of the state informed of the status of, and the activities of the commission in conserving fish and game, has been instrumental in winning needed support for conservation measures and in increasing interest in the bird and animal life of the state. In preparation for further work of this kind and of future legislation a great deal of data has been accumulated. For example, the kill of deer has been annually compiled in order that there might be a basis for regulating the annual kill to the supply. Material in the form of teachers' bulletins has been issued and the attempt made to stimulate the teaching of nature study in the public schools. The proper education of children is a fundamental conservation measure. Such research problems as the food of the roadrunner, the food of ducks, and the status of introduced game birds have been undertaken and other economic and scientific investigations are contemplated.

The prosecution of such publicity as is being furnished by the Bureau, backed as it is by scientific research, will necessarily bring about a new era as regards wild life conservation. Knowledge of wild life and its needs assures good laws and the efficient patrol force helps to assure consistent obedience of them.

The newspapers of the state, especially those of southern California, have shown great interest in fish and game matters, and the publicity given by them has greatly aided the commission in successfully carrying forward its work.

At the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, the Fish and Game Commission, in cooperation with the California Academy of Sciences, installed an extensive exhibit depicting the wild life resources of California. Several habitat groups of game mammals were conspicuously placed in appropriate surroundings. To the south was a fine group of desert mountain sheep, to the west a group of black-tailed deer and to the north a typical hunter's camp among redwoods. In the camp were hung some of the different species of game birds, and tree squirrels and mountain blue jays were to be seen perched in the trees overhead. Between the major groups and placed in rocky caves were a black bear watching her cubs at play, and a mountain lion guarding her kittens while they fought over a dead fawn. An aquarium contained live golden trout from the Whitney region and representatives of other trout found in the state. Attractive colored booklets, giving facts in regard to fish and game and a statement of the reasons for saving the wild life resources of the state, were distributed by the assistant in charge of the information booth. Exhibits were also installed at the State Fair, the Chico Fair and at other county fairs.

Under the direction of Charles R. Gilmore, engineer-draftsman, the work of recording on maps accurate data on lakes and streams, which was instituted in 1912, has been continued. Eventually these maps will show the location of lakes and streams, the volume of water in each, the fish plants made with data on the kind of fish, by whom planted, when planted and the expense attached thereto, and the ownership of the land bordering the principal fishing streams. The data will be of particular value in connection with future fish planting operations.

Proper fish and game protection and legislation must be based on accurate information on the abundance, distribution, food, habits and life history of each fish, bird and mammal concerned. This information is obtainable only through scientific investigations and the systematic collection of data. Two departments of the commission, the Bureau of Education, Publicity and Research and the Department of Commercial Fisheries, are actively engaged in making available the data necessary to the proper and efficient conservation of fish and game resources. Furthermore, the records of the status of fish and game and of the activities of the commission are being kept in such a way that endeavors in the future may profit by them and laws and conservation measures be planned accordingly.

Game Refuges.

In order to provide safe breeding grounds for game birds and mammals a number of game refuges have been established by legislative enactment. Prior to 1915 there had been created but two large state refuges. These were the Pinnacles National Forest Monument, situated in the counties of San Benito and Monterey, and a portion of the Cleveland National Forest, in Orange and Riverside counties. To these were added in 1915, an area in California Redwood Park, in Santa Cruz County, commonly known as the Big Basin, a portion of the Trinity National Forest, in Trinity County, and a large part of the Angeles National Forest, in Los Angeles and San Bernardino counties. the Trinity refuge comprising 64,000 acres and the Angeles 600,740 acres (see Fig. 6).

In addition to these state refuges there are a number of national reserves, such as the Klamath Lake Bird Reservation, in Siskiyou County, the Clear Lake Bird Reservation, in Modoc County, and the Farallone Bird Reservation, on the Farallone Islands. The national parks should be counted as refuges along with these reservations, for in them no hunting is allowed.

The combined state game refuges now occupy an area almost equal to the state of Rhode Island. There are 782,998 acres of national forest lands set aside as game refuges, where all hunting is prohibited, except that for predatory animals, under permit.

Still other additions to the game refuges of the state have been made under the law providing "that any person, firm or corporation, owning and in possession of patented land in the state of California embracing an area of not less than 160 acres, may transfer, by an instrument in writing, * * * to the state of California to preserve and protect all wild game on the land described therein, for a period of not less than ten years." On February 1, 1916, John S. Bryan of Hollister transferred to the state of California the right to preserve and protect for ten years all wild game on his ranch of 8570 acres, situated in the Gabilan Range, in Monterey and San Benito counties. The establishment of other refuges of the same sort is contemplated. The creation of a reservation around Santa Catalina Island, where all fishing except with hook and line is prohibited, will improve, doubtless, the angling for large game fishes. The waters surrounding the island in reality become a refuge for the small fish which form the food of the tuna, black sea bass, albacore and yellowtail.

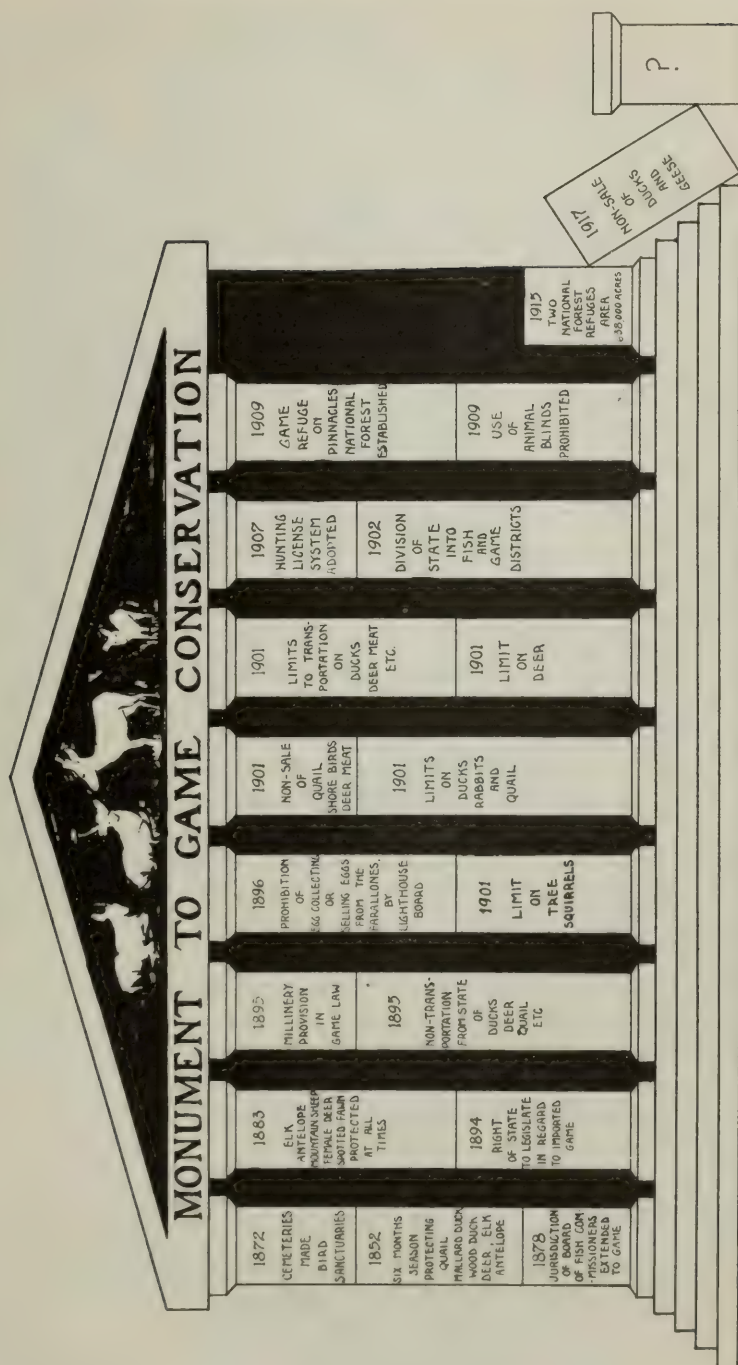

Fig. 5. A monument to game conservation in California. Much has been accomplished, but there is still much to be done.

The wisdom shown in providing sanctuaries where game may increase undisturbed is already apparent. These sanctuaries will in time act as important and permanent sources of supply, the increase spreading into the surrounding country to furnish food and sport.

Legislative Results.

Among the many important laws passed by the last legislature was the one enlarging the jurisdiction of the commission. For many years the board had legal jurisdiction only over fish. Later game was placed under its control. The extension of its control so that the "protection and preservation of wild mammals, wild birds, fishes, mollusks, crustacea and all forms of aquatic animals and plants" comes under its jurisdiction, has made it possible to more effectually administer the wild life resources of the state. The song-birds are a natural resource as well as the game birds, and the conservation of the plankton of the sea is a prerequisite of abundant fish life. The existing interrelation between the different forms of wild life is so intimate that it were folly to administer one without the other.

The attempt to redistrict the state more satisfactorily, although perhaps causing some inconvenience on the part of the hunter and fisherman, has been productive of beneficial results. Not all kinds of fruit grow in the same locality. Nor does the same kind of fruit ripen at the same time in the lowlands and in the high mountains. The same is true of game and fish, and because there is such a wide variety of species and of conditions, conservation is dependent upon a districting system that will equalize as nearly as possible the hunting and fishing season and the privilege granted the hunter and fisherman. It may appear sometimes that the arbitrary lines drawn work an unnecessary hardship, but it should be remembered that the lines must be drawn somewhere.

Believing that the commercialization of game means early extirpation, the commission has continuously advocated a law prohibiting the sale of all game. Laws already prohibit the sale of all game birds with the exception of ducks and geese, but these birds have been killed in large numbers for the market. The point at issue, however, is more largely the control of the market hunter rather than the actual sale of birds on the market. Experience has shown that nothing short of shortening several seasons and giving needed protection to geese. Bag limits on waterfowl and upland game birds were also materially reduced, thus going a step farther than the federal law. The additional protection given salmon by the prohibition of netting in the Sacramento River above Vina and the making of a closed season from May 15th to the close of the year for the district between Vina and Colusa, has resulted in a notable increase in the fish ascending the McCloud River. The legislation regulating the operations of commercial fishermen is assuring the conservation of the fishery resources. The law giving protection to the spiked buck has been widely observed and unanimously indorsed. The uniform season for rabbits and quail has been instrumental in keeping the gunner out of the fields until the young quail have matured. Although the rabbit may sometimes be a pest, yet if we profit by the experience of Pennsylvania this game mammal of the common hunter must be carefully protected. Pennsylvania is now attempting to restock the state with rabbits. The dove season is now much more satisfactory and band-tailed pigeons have received needed protection. The elimination of "bull hunting" has proved to be a wise conservation measure. The future will still more clearly demonstrate the value of the new and amended fish and game laws of the 1915 legislature.

The District Offices.

On account of the vast area of our state and in order that the work of the commission in the various parts might be expedited, there have been created three administrative divisions, the San Francisco, Sacramento and Los Angeles. The head office is located in San Francisco. Here are also the offices of the departments of Fish Culture, Commercial Fisheries, Licenses and Bookkeeping.

Assistants working in the San Francisco Division patrol an area covering 46,000 square miles with a population of nearly 1,500,000. The Sacramento office attends to the work of the commission in the Sacramento Valley and the northeastern part of the state, covering an area of 43,347 square miles with a population of nearly 500,000. The Los Angeles office is in charge of the southern part of the state which has an area of 56,435 square miles and a population of nearly 1,000,000. For several years, the commission maintained an office in the San Joaquin Valley at Fresno. It was deemed expedient to combine this office with the San Francisco office early in the year 1916. Mr. A. D. Ferguson, who had been in charge since the division was created, was made Field Agent with duties extending into all parts of the state.

Conspicuous among the activities of the Sacramento Division have been the winter feeding of game and the seining of fish from overflowed lands.

During the severe winter 1915-16 it soon became apparent that large numbers of deer and quail would starve unless feed was provided for them. Deputies were ordered to procure feed and to stimulate the interest of others in the work. As a result, many hundreds of deer and quail were supplied with food until the melting of the snows again furnished them a natural supply (see Figs. 8, 9, 10 and 11).

Fig. 8. Deputy O'Connor of Grass Valley, Nevada County, leaving on horseback to feed quail during severe weather, winter 1915-1916.

The drying up of overflowed bottoms in the Sacramento Valley annually causes a great loss in fish life. No more practicable method of conserving the valuable fishery resources of the great valleys has been found than is demonstrated in the efforts to seine out and plant in other places the fish which would otherwise die with the drying up of these overflowed areas (see Figs. 12 and 13). The Sacramento District office has carefully watched the areas where this danger exists and has been instrumental in saving thousands of black bass, perch, catfish, crappie and sunfish.

Fig. 10. Valley quail being fed at Bishop, Inyo County, during severe weather, winter 1915-1916. Thousands of quail were saved because fed by Fish and Game Commission deputies.

In addition to routine work the Los Angeles District office has carried on a noteworthy publicity campaign. The activities of the Southern Division office and the fish and game resources of the south have been given wide publicity. In addition study has been made of the commercial fisheries, which are yearly growing more important (see pages 80-100). The maintenance of a breeding stock of quail in Inyo County is due largely to the efforts of this division in feeding the birds during the severe winter weather of 1916. Many deer were also saved from starvation.

Fig. 11. Feeding quail, winter 1915-1916, at Bishop, California.

The San Francisco District office has a most difficult problem in the large alien population of the Bay cities. Effort has been largely concentrated on the strict enforcement of the fish and game laws pertaining to the coast districts (see pages 135-137). The legal shipments and sale of game in San Francisco have been carefully supervised, and due to the activities of the efficient patrol service the illegal shipment and sale of game has been practically eradicated. The transfer companies, which were subterfuges by the commission houses to evade the limit law on ducks, have been put out of business and further attempts to evade the law by making parcels post shipments have been prevented.

The Fresno Division office has been instrumental in greatly improving fishing conditions in the Sierras. Trout fry have been carried by pack train to the most isolated streams and lakes. The range of the beautiful golden trout has been greatly extended and several stocking experiments of value have been instituted. Of particular interest is the experiment now under way, devised to test the present theory regarding steelhead trout. A number of these trout have been placed in barren waters in the high Sierras where they will be landlocked. It is hoped that the experiment will demonstrate whether this sea-run form will revert quickly to the landlocked form (see pages 147-153).

The attempt has been made to stop, as far as possible, the pollution of waters by refuse from wineries, sugar factories, gas plants, and oil refineries. Many investigations have been carried on to determine the amount of pollution, and many manufacturing companies have been forced to install filters and other devices for preventing pollution. Marked improvement is to be noted in the type of equipment used. The old straw filter used for obtaining lampblack has been succeeded by three types of mechanical filters—the Oliver, the Kelly and the Butters, the latter of which appears to be the most successful. We are glad to acknowledge the cooperation of all of the larger companies. They have willingly expended thousands of dollars in the attempt to prevent waste destructive to fish from entering the waters of this state. For a more detailed report, see pages 127-134.

There has been a steady reduction in the number of lion bounties paid and it is evident that mountain lions have become greatly reduced in number. As a consequence thousands of deer are saved each year. Bounties were paid on 162 lion scalps in 1915 and on 111 between January 1 and June 30, 1916, as against 482 in 1908, 361 in 1909 and 333 in 1910. Without taking into consideration cattle and sheep, the saving in deer alone has more than justified the total expenditure of $49,160 during the last nine and one-half years, during which time the bounty has been in force. We are glad to report that there has been little or no fraud connected with the payment of lion bounties. A claim for each lion must be made upon a blank form and this must be signed by the claimant and three witnesses and acknowledged before a notary or justice of the peace. In addition, the claim must be accompanied by an account of the pursuit and killing of the lion, giving details as to the method used, the number of deer carcasses left by the animal, and such other facts as may be of assistance in determining the damage done to deer and other game. Two litters of young animals sent in were found to be on examination the young of coyotes. There was no evidence, however, that the men making application for bounties on these animals were not sincere in their belief that they were young mountain lions. It may be that the lion bounty should be increased in order to still further reduce the species.

The above are a few of the many activities of the commission directed toward the better protection of fish and game.

The Patrol Force.

There are in the employ of the California Fish and Game Commission sixty-eight assistants or deputies who do active patrol duty. Additional temporary assistants are employed during the open seasons. The regular assistants are stationed in various parts of the state where fishing and hunting conditions are the best and in centrally located places from which they can cover to the best advantage the district allotted to them. The assistants are not bound by any arbitrary lines but are expected to extend their activities into adjoining districts. In this way, there is left no unguarded area such as there would be if they were bounded by fixed lines.

Each assistant is encouraged to work with the one in charge of the adjoining district and whenever help is needed to bring violators to justice, the two are expected to assist each other as fully as possible. Deputies are often concentrated in one locality to apprehend chronic violators and new men are sent into old territory in order to make the work more effective.

All of the employees and assistants of the Fish and Game Commission are now under civil service regulations. The assistants are selected after a rigid examination. This examination, consisting of two parts—one written, the other oral—is given by a board of examiners, the members of which have had many years of experience in the enforcement of the game laws. In the oral examination, the candidate is called before the examiners. Each examiner then checks on a form the various characteristics of the applicant—his appearance, health, decision, manner, information, reliability, ambition, body-build, alertness—in fact, every characteristic that has any bearing upon the duties to be performed. Questions are asked that are intended to bring out the candidate's understanding of game and fish conditions and his ability to look after himself and camp stock under all conditions and his understanding of what game conservation really means. In this way, the candidates peculiarly fitted for practically every branch of the service are secured. Although ratings are made separately by each examiner, invariably the same conclusion in regard to the candidate's fitness is reached. The written part of the examination includes questions that will bring out the candidate's idea as to the meaning of the various laws, his ability to tell from hypothetical questions as to whether a violation has occurred and his knowledge of the habits of the various species of game to be found in the state. None of the questions is particularly difficult and should be found easy by the candidates having a general knowledge of the duties of an assistant and of the interpretation of the game and fish laws. By reason of the care taken in the selection of assistants, it will be possible in a few years to have a force of men who not only have the natural ability, but who have a very deep interest in the conservation of fish and game. Without these qualifications no one who is charged with the enforcement of the game laws can be successful.

During the past several years, the Fish and Game Commission has had an auxiliary force of unsalaried assistants. In certain instances excellent results were obtained through these men, but in general the results were very disappointing. Most of them did not take an active interest in law enforcement. Some of them even used their badge to cover up their own and their friends' violations. Frequently very flagrant violations were overlooked and more frequently petty cases were sworn to that should have been handled outside of court. At the time that the Workmen's Compensation Act went into effect, it was realized that the expense of carrying insurance on the army of special assistants was not warranted—a ruling from the Attorney General being to the effect that the commission was liable for accidents that might occur. On this account it was decided to cancel the appointments of all special deputies.

A "Manual for Deputies," arranged by Messrs. A. D. Ferguson, George Neale, R. D. Duke, J. S. Hunter, and W. H. Shebley, was published in May, 1914. This manual deals with the more important phases of a deputy's problems, and gives an insight into the powers and duties of deputy fish and game commissioners. It is of particular value to the newly appointed officer. The six divisions of the Manual appear under the heads: Qualifications, Arrests, Expense, Routine and Forms, Decisions and Civil Service Regulations. The following quotations from Part I, show the standards which are set for deputies of the California Fish and Game Commission:

Qualifications—A deputy fish and game commissioner should be honorable in all his dealings; whether with the public, his superior officers or his fellow deputies. The eye of the public is upon him; the honor of the commission is in his keeping. A deputy is out of place in the great and important work of conservation in which the California Fish and Game Commission is engaged unless he can command the respect of those with whom he comes in contact. Even the most persistent lawbreaker is bound to respect the self-respecting, upright officer, though he bring him to justice and punishment. * * *

Energetic—The good things in his line do not come to the deputy who waits for them. The duties of the deputy fish and game commissioner are peculiar in that—unlike a sheriff or other peace officer, who usually acts upon information furnished by others—the deputy must, from the nature of things, himself take the initiative. He must not only do patrol duty in the ordinary sense of the word, but he must endeavor to anticipate the movements of those who would violate the fish and game laws. He must be ever alert. He should thoroughly post himself on those sections wherein the fish and game laws are most frequently violated. He should study the methods of the professional game law violators. He should cultivate the friendship of law-abiding people and open channels for information concerning those things of which he ought to get early knowledge.

Courageous, but courteous, is a qualification which goes far in the making of a good officer. A timid man can accomplish little; an overbearing one can do more harm than good. * * *

Tactful—Poise is essential. A reputation for making arrests on frivolous grounds or for being too easily persuaded to drop prosecution is alike detrimental to the deputy's chances for efficiency. No hard and fast rule can be laid down as to when to make arrests; the deputy must exercise his judgment. But on general principles no consideration of prominence or influence, when the offending party is of the age of mature judgment, should cause the deputy to deviate from his attitude of dispassionately but firmly insisting that the law be vindicated. * * *

Relations with other officers—The position of deputy fish and game commissioner is unique as compared to other officers of the state, county, or municipal governments, inasmuch as his duties are at once executive, administrative and educational. While his jurisdiction conflicts in no way with that of other peace officers nor theirs with his, yet sheriffs, constables, policemen, harbor officers, and inspectors of various arms of municipal governments are all in a position to render him invaluable assistance. The deputy should earn the confidence and respect of all such officers that their cooperation may be ready and voluntary. * * *

Under the heading "Arrest" the deputy is directed when to make an arrest, how to make an arrest, what degree of force may be used, and what disposition is to be made of a prisoner. What kind of expenses may be incurred by the deputy in the discharge of his duties, and the manner of presenting his claims for reimbursement is described under the heading "Expense Claims."

The efficiency of the patrol service has been greatly improved in the past few years because of the increased facilities of transportation which have been provided. Most deputies now have automobiles; others motorcycles. An allowance of a certain amount per mile, while the automobile is used in connection with a deputy's work, covers expenses and upkeep. The distance which can be covered in patrol work is thus increased many times and the tracing of all violators made possible. Four patrol boats are now in service and Evinrude motors make the use of smaller patrol boats possible on the rivers during certain seasons. However, a large patrol boat for use in enforcing commercial fisheries regulations along the southern California coast and offshore islands is essential to the proper enforcement of laws and the gathering of needed scientific data.

Propagation of Game Birds.

Little effort has been made to continue the introduction of foreign game birds. Believing that sufficient attempts have been made to stock the state with ring-necked pheasants, and that the game farm has not proved its worth, the efforts at propagation on the farm have been curtailed. Consequently, but few ring-necked pheasants have been reared, and only a few hundred birds have been liberated. In order that breeders might be furnished information as to the possibilities in quail and duck breeding, the farm has been stocked with valley quail and wild ducks and experiments carried on to determine the success which can be obtained in artificially rearing them. The main justification for a game farm appears to lie in its value as a station for carrying on breeding experiments, the results of which will benefit game breeders, rather than in its value as a practical means of increasing game. Judging from the experience of other states it seems best that the greater amount of effort be placed on the conservation of native species rather than on the introduction of foreign ones which are apt to supplant valuable native species, become pests, or introduce some infectious disease. A detailed report on the activities of the Game Farm can be found on pages 120-126.

Fish Culture.

In order that hatchery operations might be better administered the office of the Department of Fish Culture was moved from Sisson Hatchery to San Francisco in the fall of 1915. W. H. Shebley was placed in full charge of the department and E. W. Hunt was appointed Field Agent with the detail work of the hatchery and the car messenger service under his supervision. G. H. Lambson, of the United States Bureau of Fisheries, formerly superintendent of Baird Hatchery, qualified through civil service as superintendent of the Sisson Hatchery. These changes have greatly facilitated the work of this department.

The hatcheries of the state have propagated a larger number of fish in this than in any previous biennial period. During the season of 1915 alone, 48,000,000 fish were planted in the streams of California, a number sufficient to furnish every resident of the state with sixteen fish (see Fig. 16). Eight hatcheries and six egg collection stations have been operated to their full capacity and the present stations will have to be enlarged and new ones installed in order to meet the increasing demand for trout fry. An additional hatchery building has been erected at the Sisson station, making five buildings in all. With this added equipment it is possible to hold the fry until they attain a better growth and hence are better able to withstand the changed conditions incident to planting.

As in past years, the salmon eggs procured from the United States Bureau of Fisheries have been hatched at this station and the fry carefully reared and fed until they were two or three months old, at which time they were distributed in the Sacramento River and tributary streams near Sisson, and in the Klamath River. In addition, a large number of fry have been held in ponds until they were eight months old. They were then distributed in the Klamath and Sacramento rivers early in the fall. Experience has shown that the best results in salmon culture are to be obtained by rearing several million fry on the upper reaches of the Sacramento River where the water is pure and cold and where the fry can be liberated in the headwaters of the Sacramento out of reach of the predatory fishes which infest the river lower down.

So large a number of trout fry were reared at the Sisson station that two cars had to be employed in the distribution of these fish. A baggage car was rented from the Southern Pacific Company and equipped with a gasoline engine and aerating system (see Figs. 20 and 21).

It has been found that the retaining of a stock of brood fish in the ponds gives a dependable supply of eggs each year. The take of eggs in the rivers, on the other hand, is variable. The pond system is therefore being improved. There were on hand in the ponds at the Sisson Hatchery on July 1, 1916, over 300,000 brood fish.

The Tahoe hatcheries have been operated to their full capacity during the last two seasons. It is planned to acquire a new site for the Tallac Hatchery where fry can be held until later in the fall. Fry if reared to a large size stand a better chance of survival after being planted in the Lake. The Department of Fish Culture is planning to make increased efforts to propagate lake trout (Salmo tahoensis). This valuable fish should be increased in number by artificial propagation. New varieties of game trout should be added to the native species now found in Lake Tahoe.

Brookdale Hatchery was operated during the season of 1915-1916 under a lease procured from Santa Cruz County. As a return for the use of the hatchery Santa Cruz County annually received 500,000 steelhead trout fry to be distributed entirely in the public waters of that county. Over 3,000,000 fish were reared at this hatchery in 1915 and over 1,500,000 in 1916.

The Ukiah and Fort Seward hatcheries reared both steelhead and rainbow trout. At the Fort Seward station 140,000 black-spotted trout, obtained from Lake Almanor, were reared and distributed in the Mad and Eel rivers. The situation of this hatchery is such that it can also be used for salmon culture. Next year an attempt will be made to obtain a supply of eggs from the Eel River.

The Bear Valley Hatchery, established by San Bernardino County, has been operated by the commission during the past two years. All of the fry reared were planted in Big Bear Lake and nearby streams of San Bernardino County. Adverse conditions hindered operations in 1916 and the output was therefore below normal.

The new temporary hatchery installed at Lake Almanor Dam, in Plumas County, had a successful season in 1916. At this station 1,635,000 rainbow trout eggs were collected and held until ready for shipment. Plans are being made for an additional egg taking station at Domingo Springs, one mile from Rice Creek Falls. This egg collecting station will help furnish a supply to the Almanor Hatchery.

The egg collecting station established on Hat Creek in 1915 had to be abandoned because of the tremendous flood of mud sent down the Hat Creek Valley as a result of the eruption of Mount Lassen. Not only were operations necessarily suspended, but all the fish in the stream, from its source to its confluence with the Pit River, were destroyed. This was one of the most serious destructions of fish life in recent years in California.

A location for a Southern California hatchery has finally been selected and what will be the most up-to-date hatchery in the world is now being built on Oak Creek, in Inyo County. The hatchery building, 192½ feet by 45 feet, is being constructed of natural stone, gabro and granite taken from the floor of the valley nearby and will cost approximately $60,000. The lower floor will contain, in addition to the hatchery room, offices, storerooms and a laboratory, and the second floor will furnish quarters for the help. The most up-to-date plumbing will be used. The location of this hatchery is unique, with snow-capped Mt. Whitney, the highest peak in the United States, in the background and Death Valley, 427 feet below sea level, seventy miles to the south-east—the roof and the cellar of the United States. The situation on Oak Creek will furnish an abundance of pure, cold water and eggs for the hatchery will be obtained at the Rae Lakes in the Sierras, at an elevation of 10,500 feet, reached by crossing a pass 13,000 feet in elevation. The rising generation may be able to point to this hatchery as the finest and most beautiful one in the world. This new hatchery will be able to supply fish to all points in southern California and as far north as Merced and the Yosemite Valley.

The falling off in the supply of shad in the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers has necessitated investigations leading towards the institution of shad propagation. Shad were originally introduced into California by the Fish Commission in 1871. The fish for stocking were procured from eastern states. Within a few years shad became very abundant and they have continued so until recently. On the other hand, shad in the eastern states from which they were obtained have greatly decreased in numbers and requests have been received from the Massachusetts and Connecticut commissions for shad eggs for use in their hatcheries. In order to determine whether shad culture is feasible in California an experimental station was erected on the Sacramento River at Yuba City. Experiments proved that shad eggs can be successfully hatched and the fry kept free from bacteria and fungus. It is planned to hatch several million shad and striped bass this coming year. For further details of the fish cultural work see pages 54-79.

Although the supply of fish in our streams does not appear to be decreasing, yet new conditions may endanger the supply. The number of anglers is increasing each year. Furthermore, each angler is increasing his annual catch. Streams which were formerly inaccessible are now reached with ease by means of automobiles. Consequently, greater and greater demands are made upon our hatcheries. To meet this demand new stations must be established and old ones enlarged. It also may be that some limitation upon the number of fishing days per week or the making of a shorter open season will alone counteract the effect of the ever increasing catch.

If there were no other justification for the existence of the Fish and Game Commission it could well rely upon the results of its attempt to stock the streams of the state with fish. Hundreds of lakes and streams formerly barren of fish life now contain millions of fish and these fish furnish food and recreation for all who will cast a fly or drop a line. Trout are now to be found in nearly every living stream easily accessible to the angler. Furthermore, there have been introduced into the waters of the state a number of food and game fishes not formerly found here. Black bass, striped bass, shad and several other species now add greatly to our fishery resources. Due to the activities of the commission the state of California offers as fine fishing as can be found anywhere, for there are far more fish in the lakes and streams than there were when the white man first came to the state.

Fishways and Screens.

Considerable progress in the installation of fishways and screens has been made. Eighty-six suitable fishways have been constructed at many places where fish have been unable to ascend streams because of dams or some natural obstruction, and ninety-two other sites have been surveyed. By the removal of large boulders and other natural obstructions the breeding grounds of fish have been greatly extended. In one instance more than 100 miles of spawning grounds were added by the removal of such an obstruction.

Experience has shown that the largest canals can be screened and the flow of water be undiminished. Even the work of cleaning has been reduced to a minimum. Large revolving screens which work in sections can be quickly cleaned by turning a crank, thus saving the labor attached to the cleaning of a parallel-bar screen. The cost of a 50-foot screen of this type is approximately $2,200. With the exception of the

Fig. 33. Screen installed in an irrigating ditch near Edgewood, Siskiyou County. Fish are prevented from entering this ditch, but the flow of water is unhampered. Photograph by A. E. Culver.

San Joaquin Valley, where some of the large canal owners are resisting the order to install screens, we have met with willing cooperation. Nearly 600 surveys have been made and 377 screens have been installed.

Commercial Fisheries.

The rapid growth of our fisheries has necessitated more detailed and accurate knowledge in order that our fishery resources may be intelligently conserved. The Department of Commercial Fisheries, established in 1914, has been making careful study of the coast fisheries and has been gathering data which will be valuable as a basis for future legislation. A law enacted by the last legislature requires dealers and handlers of fish to make accurate monthly statements of the quantities and varieties of fish handled. These reports are being systematically compiled and the statistics regarding fishery products are being published in CALIFORNIA FISH AND GAME. Study has been made also of fish marketing and the department is at present cooperating with the State Market Director in attempting to unite the producer, the dealer and the people for their mutual benefit, and in fixing the maximum price the consumer should pay for fish. Largely due to the fact that accurate data was supplied the Market Director by this department of the Fish and Game Commission, splendid results have been obtained.

A large number of marked salmon fry were liberated in the Sacramento River, Scott's Creek and San Lorenzo River in 1911 and 1912. A considerable number of these fish which have returned to the same streams have been obtained and data as to the age at which salmon seek fresh water, which is of much importance, is accumulating. Further experiments of this kind have been instituted.

Several important developments in California fisheries have necessitated careful study in order that control measures might be instituted. Of particular import is the growth of the long-finned tuna or albacore industry. The output of canned tuna now is more than double the value of the output of salmon or sardines. The tuna packers themselves are anxious to know more about the migration and life history of the albacore. Fortunately the United States Bureau of Fisheries has begun an investigation, but there is still much to be done.

Shad in the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers have been decreasing during the past few years, due to overfishing. The total catch for 1915 was 3,816,048 pounds. Thirty-three carloads of fresh shad were shipped east. If this amount of fishing continues protective measures will be necessary to prevent serious injury to this fish. Already dangerous conditions are to be found. A record made in 1914 of the proportion of male to female shad on the upper San Joaquin River showed that the males outnumbered the females twenty to one. The sexes are normally about even. If an emergency measure could have been passed by the Fish and Game Commission the situation could have been promptly dealt with. This not being possible, no measures can be instituted until the meeting of the next legislature.

The annual catch of California halibut exceeds 5,000,000 pounds. Although this fish is better protected than ever before, owing to the fact that dragnetting has been prohibited and the present law prescribes an eight-inch minimum mesh, it may be necessary to still further increase the mesh limit and a further conservation measure might be the closing of small areas to fishing.

Stringent laws now prevent the drying of shrimps, and the former destruction of young fish is prevented by confining shrimp fishing to South San Francisco Bay. At present only a few boats fish intermittently and the catch totals only about 350,000 pounds per year. Profit in the past has rested principally in dried shrimps since the price obtained for fresh ones—six and seven cents per pound—does not cover the higher operating cost.

Increased demand for potash which formerly was imported from Germany has led to the establishment of a new industry. The immense beds of kelp found along the California coast are now being cut and the kelp converted into potash. Four companies are operating at San Diego, five at Long Beach and one at Wilmington. Several new factories are under construction. It is believed that this industry will not have a serious effect on any of our fisheries. Many have feared that cutting of kelp would destroy the breeding grounds of the barracuda and the spiny lobster. Preliminary investigations do not support this view. There are other allied questions awaiting solution. For instance, it is important to know how the present operations may be regulated in order to assure a future supply. Already there is talk of county ordinances. Kelp and like products come under the jurisdiction of the Fish and Game Commission and regulatory legislation is being planned.

Many of our sea fisheries have not been fully developed. The rapid growth of the sardine and albacore fisheries in the past few years is evidence of this. The albacore, formerly an unappreciated food fish, now takes rank as the most valuable of all. Were people made acquainted with several other species of fish other new fisheries might be developed. The shell fisheries of this state have been largely neglected. Many species of shellfish found in abundance along the coast would make excellent food were people educated as to their value. Furthermore, the soft-shell clam from the Atlantic coast could be profitably distributed here in bays where it does not now appear. There is also a future for oyster culture in California. To stimulate interest in these undeveloped fishery resources and aid in developing them is one feature of the work of the Department of Commercial Fisheries. For further details see pages 80-101.

Acknowledgments.

In the fulfillment of its duties the commission has had the help and cooperation of many different organizations. The United States Forest Service has greatly assisted in the administration of the fish and game laws and in the accumulation of data on the life histories of the different species of fish and game. The annual reports by chief forest deputies have been particularly valuable in furnishing information on the status of fish and game in the national forests. The Forest Service is in a position to render invaluable aid to the Fish and Game Commission by helping in the enforcement of fish and game laws, in the ridding of the forests of predatory animals, as well as in the propagation of fish. As an example, some twelve years ago, Supervisor Geo. W. Naylor of Inyo, then a forest ranger, carried fourteen rainbow trout over the almost impassable, bleak heights of the Sierras from the San Joaquin side, delivering safely in a camp bucket thirteen of them, which were put into Rae Lakes. These fish were the progenitors of one of the most wonderful rainbow trout centers known, which will furnish the eggs so badly needed to meet the enormous demands of the great southern California hatchery now being completed five and one-half hours below on Oak Creek. The University of California and Leland Stanford Junior University have continuously put at our disposal collections and laboratory equipment, have directed investigations and have helped to solve many puzzling questions. Acknowledgment is also made of the assistance of the United States Bureau of Fisheries, the United States Biological Survey, and of the fish and game commissions of other states, particularly that of Nevada, which has generously donated large numbers of brook trout. All of the railroad companies of the state have generously furnished free and reduced rate transportation of fish, attendants and special employees.

Statistical Reports.

Statistical reports of the several departments, including a record of fish-planting operations and a statement of the revenues and expenditures, are to be found in the appendix.

REPORT OF DEPARTMENT OF FISH CULTURE.

The Honorable Board of Fish and Game Commissioners.

GENTLEMEN: We have the honor to herewith present a report from the Fisheultural Department, for the years beginning July 1, 1914, and ending June 30, 1916—the third report since being placed in charge of fish culture.

Reports from all parts of the state indicate the beneficial results that have followed the systematic stocking of public waters under the supervision of men skilled in handling the fish. Notwithstanding the heavy drain on the streams and lakes by the ever increasing number of anglers, trout have appreciably increased in most of the streams where proper conditions have prevailed.

The ever increasing numbers of automobiles have carried the anglers on their journeys to all the accessible fishing waters in greater numbers each season. We find that a great many anglers who a few years ago, before the advent of the automobile, only fished one or two days in the season, now make frequent excursions to their favorite fishing grounds and take from the streams many times the number of fish that they did years ago. The increasing number of anglers, also the ease with which they can now reach the streams and the increasing zest for outdoor pleasures, such as angling, will soon make greater demands on our hatcheries, and to meet this demand some of our hatcheries will have to be enlarged and improved and new stations established. The Department of Hatcheries must meet the augmented demand for fish until such time when our annual limit of output has been reached, then a limit to the number of fish that each angler can take each season must be made by the legislature, either by limiting the number of days each week that persons can fish, or by making a shorter open season. With the contemplated improvements in our hatchery work, the time for this added legislation has not arrived and we hope it may be deferred for a number of years. California can safely say that, with only a few exceptions, fishing in most all of the streams is as good as it ever was; but with the extremely heavy fishing of the last two or three years we must keep close watch to see that our streams are not over-fished.

Administration Changes.

The commission decided during the fall of 1915 to have the office of the Department of Pisciculture moved from Sisson Hatchery to San Francisco. This move necessitated a reorganization of the department. E. W. Hunt, who has been superintendent of the Tahoe hatcheries for twenty-five years, was made Field Agent of the Department of Pisciculture, with the detail work of the hatcheries and the car messenger service under his supervision. A. E. Culver was placed in charge of screen surveys and A. E. Doney in charge of fishway surveys. As the superintendent of hatcheries had retained his appointment as superintendent of the Sisson Station since the date of his appointment as superintendent of hatcheries in November, 1911, a change in the superintendency of the Sisson Hatchery was necessary. A civil service examination was held in January, 1916, and G. H. Lambson, who had been with the Bureau of Fisheries as superintendent in the car messenger service and superintendent of Baird Hatchery, successfully passed it and was appointed by the commission as Superintendent of the Sisson Hatchery.

Stocking Lakes in the Inaccessible Mountain Regions of the State.

In the high Sierras and in the western part of Siskiyou and Trinity counties are hundreds of lakes of various sizes that are now barren of fish life. These can all be stocked at a small expense to the state and a greater area of fishing ground added to the state's wealth of waters in which game fishes will thrive.

Other improvements can be made by transplanting insects and other items of food from other waters to the streams and lakes that are lacking an abundance of proper food for trout. This work should be taken up at once and carried on systematically until all the streams and lakes that are deficient in proper food for the trout are in condition.

Fish Propagation.

Eight hatcheries and six egg collecting stations have been operated to their full capacity during the last two seasons and it will be necessary to enlarge our present stations and establish new ones to meet the demand for trout fry as well as to do the salmon work properly.

Our hatcheries should all be equipped with enough troughs and rearing tanks to rear the fry to a fair size before shipping. The relative advantages of planting fry or fingerlings in our streams and lakes is a question that is being brought up continually and in which there is a great difference in opinion. In our judgment both systems have their advantages, depending on the size of the stream, altitude, amount of natural food, variety of the fish and the season of the year. By studying these conditions and using good judgment and care in the distribution of either fry or fingerlings good results can be obtained.

The best results are obtained in planting fry in the smaller tributary streams in spring and summer when there is an abundance of food provided naturally to support fry at that age. In southern California, in the lower altitudes, conditions appear to be somewhat different and a larger fish planted in the fall seems to do the best; but in the mountainous parts of southern California, spring planting has given excellent results.

Fig. 39. Fish ladder constructed by Northern California Power Company on Butte Creek, Tehama County. Photograph by A. E. Culver.

The planting of fingerlings has an advantage over fry when the fish are planted in large streams or rivers where there are no spawning beds or natural feeding grounds for the fry, such as exist in the smaller streams. These places are not very numerous, as in most river systems suitable tributary streams can be found in which to deposit the fry, and as they develop they work slowly down the streams into the larger bodies of water, following their natural inclinations.

Some enthusiasts would have us rear the fish until they are almost large enough to catch, before planting. This would be beyond the finances of the commission to carry out, and furthermore a fish artificially fed too long is not a good rustler when liberated and is apt to suffer considerably before getting accustomed to natural conditions. Some of the best results have been obtained where fry from two to three months old have been planted. Absolute proof of this is at hand where new species have been introduced in the streams. Fry, if in perfect condition, free of bacterial disease, carefully reared by a skilled fish-culturist and planted in the small tributary streams, are sure to give good results. We have been a close observer of these conditions for over thirty years in California and feel that we are pursuing the right policy in planting the majority of the fry from our hatcheries when they are from two to four months old.

A number of writers who are not fish-culturists have advocated the building of ponds and nurseries along the banks of the different lakes and streams in the state to rear the fry until they are fingerlings before they are released into the streams. This might do in a few localities, but when we figure on rearing 16,000,000 or 18,000,000 of fry on thousands of miles of streams the proposition is impracticable, even if the state had money enough to build the ponds and to pay men to care for the fish. To turn the fry over to inexperienced persons, even where they go to the expense of building the ponds, is a poor policy and one in which the public as a rule will not benefit. The experience of fish-culturists who are working for the public good must be considered in preference to enthusiasts and theorists. Fishculture is a well demonstrated practical proposition and the experience of men skilled in this work must be considered if the public is to get the benefit of the money invested.

Fishways and Screens.

The work of installing screens in the ditches and canals of this state and of constructing fishways over dams and obstructions has progressed entirely satisfactorily during the last two years. A. E. Culver as screen surveyor and A. E. Doney, fishway surveyor, have been untiring in their efforts to enforce the law and conserve the fish.

One hundred seventy-eight surveys of ladders over dams have been made. As a result of these surveys eighty-six obstructions have been removed or fishways installed in order that fish might have a free passageway.

Nearly six hundred screens have been ordered installed and 377 have been reported as completed. The wide extent of operations is indicated by the fact that screen surveys have been made in thirty-five different counties during the last two years.

Some new and difficult problems have presented themselves in both the screen and fishway work, but good progress has been made over the entire state, with the exception of the San Joaquin Valley, where some of the large canal owners are resisting our efforts to install screens in their canals. These owners object on the grounds that the screens are impractical and will impede the flow of water. This is a flimsy excuse, as experience has proved that the largest canals can be screened and the flow of water be undiminished, if they are properly cleaned. The parallel bar screen can be made to do good work and not cause any trouble under normal conditions. During extremely high water when floods prevail in the streams caused by melting snow or storms in the mountains carrying down an excess of floating matter, the screens can be removed for a short time to allow the debris to pass. When conditions are normal the screens can be replaced. It would be folly to say that the large canals can not be screened. If we can not have them screened all the time, we should make an effort to save as many fish as possible by keeping the screens in place when it can be done without damage to the flow of water in the canals.

A screen is being installed in the Pacific Light and Power Company's canal at Borel in Kern County that works in sections on a revolving shaft. It can be cleaned at any time by turning a crank that turns the screen sections edgewise with the current and allows the debris to float down the stream. As soon as the debris is washed off, the screen is turned back in place. Some such device can be arranged if the parallel bar screens are considered too hard to clean. Any of the types of screens that we have recommended will work, if they are cleaned. We find that the trouble appears to be that some of the owners of the larger canals do not want to pay for the extra help required to clean the screens.

The commission plans to rigidly enforce the law regarding the screening of ditches and no excuses will be entertained. Taking it as a whole, the screen work has been very successful, considering the number of ditches and canals that we have had to handle and the great difference in conditions that prevail in different parts of the state.

Pollution of Streams.

The pollution of the inland streams by sawdust, slimes from the mines, and other waste matter polluting the streams, has been given attention whenever reports have been received. We have not had any serious trouble with any of the cases handled, although numerous complaints regarding stream pollution by mining operations are received. Many reports come from the old mining districts where the fish were destroyed in the early history of mining operations in this state and no further damage can be done. Wherever new plants are reported we insist that all the slimes be impounded in storage reservoirs or vats until the heavier material has settled.

The flotation process of working ores has given us considerable trouble, as the pulp is so fine that it is very difficult to settle, remaining in suspension in the water for weeks. The damage that it does to the fish is very slight if the plants are not too large. We are giving this, one of the latest processes of handling ores, special study, for this method will probably be used extensively in nearly all mining operations in the future.

Propagation of Shad.

Early in the season of 1916 the question of propagating shad was taken up by the department. The heavy fishing for shad in the bays and in the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers for the last few years had caused noticeable falling off in the numbers of these fish and to keep the supply up it was deemed necessary to resort to artificial propagation.

About the same time we received a request from the Massachusetts and Connecticut Fish and Game commissions requesting the California commission to collect shad eggs from California waters and ship them to their hatcheries, as they were desirous of restocking the depleted waters of the Eastern states with shad. Shad were introduced into California by the California Fish Commission in 1871. They increased rapidly until a few years ago the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers were fairly alive with them in the spring and summer when the run of shad was at its height.

The excessive fishing and pollution of the Eastern rivers has caused the shad to become very scarce and it was the desire of the Massachusetts and Connecticut commissions to restock their waters. We agreed to collect the shad eggs for the two commissions, as it was considered an opportune time to carry on experiments to locate the spawning places of shad as well as to make experiments to determine whether shad culture could be carried on successfully in California, and to determine whether the process of fertilizing the eggs and propagating the fry could be improved upon.

Consequently, the commission decided to operate a shad hatchery on a small scale during 1916 to carry out the experiments and to gather data in preparation for more extensive operations next season. When operations were begun in May, it was thought that all the eggs necessary for the shipments East, as well as for our experiments, could be collected by the latter part of May or early in June, but the season proved to be unfavorable and the work dragged along into July without sufficient eggs being obtained at one time to make a shipment East.

Fishing began on June 3d with our crews at Yuba City. The run was poor all through the season in the upper reaches of the rivers; nowhere near its size in former years. The light run of shad in the upper river was due to the very cold spring, cold water, and later to the high, roily water caused by the melting snow in the higher altitudes. During the season 1,421,000 shad eggs were collected and 872,000 fry hatched and successfully released in the Feather River. This work was under the immediate supervision of Superintendent G. H. Lambson of the Sisson Hatchery. Data regarding the movements of the shad that will be valuable in future shad work have been compiled as well as the results of the experiments in hatching the shad fry. The eggs were successfully hatched and the fry kept free from bacteria and fungus.

This coming season the shad work should be taken up in earnest and several million shad as well as striped bass should be hatched and distributed in the Sacramento River to keep up the supply of these valuable fish. Shorter seasons for catching these fish should be established by the legislature.

Sisson Hatchery.

Sisson Hatchery has been operated on the same general plan as in former years. The fry are held until they are from three to eight months old and are then shipped to all points in California where the local hatcheries can not supply the number and variety of fish desired.

As the result of a cooperative arrangement with the United States Bureau of Fisheries the commission received 34,300,000 quinnat and 1,900,000 silver salmon eggs in 1914-15 and 18,400,000 quinnat salmon eggs in 1915-16. These eggs were hatched and the fry carefully reared and fed until the majority of them were two to three months old; then they were distributed in the upper reaches of the Sacramento River and tributary streams near Sisson, and in the Klamath River. These fry were deposited in natural feeding grounds under conditions as nearly perfect as it was possible to find. Several million of the fry are held each season in the large ponds at Sisson Station, where they are carefully looked after and systematically fed until they are about eight months old; then they are distributed in the Klamath and Sacramento rivers early in the fall. A record of the numbers and place of distribution of these plants will be found in the statistical report of distribution from Sisson Hatchery.

During the fall of 1914, the commission decided to construct another hatchery building on the grounds of the Sisson Station to enable them to hold the fry so they could attain a better growth by giving them less crowding and more trough space. Accordingly, plans were made by the Department of Hatcheries, which the board approved. The plans called for a building 190 feet long and 42 feet wide, to contain 148 hatching troughs. As the expense of constructing this hatchery was over one thousand dollars, we had to have the work carried on under the supervision of the State Department of Engineering. This was to comply with a recently enacted law. To allow us to carry out our plans of constructing this building, W. F. McClure, State Engineer, kindly appointed the superintendent of hatcheries a deputy state engineer to construct the building. The work was rushed and the building completed in time to receive part of the salmon eggs from the Bureau of Fisheries' stations during the latter part of the hatch of salmon eggs for the season of 1914 (see Fig. 44).

With its five hatchery buildings and auxiliary battery, containing in all over 500 troughs, and its 52 breeding ponds, the Sisson Station must be considered one of the largest hatcheries in the world. The station now has a capacity of fifty million trout and salmon fry per season.

One new pond was rented from Mr. Rupp, during the winter of 1915-16. The lease on the large pond, known as Sisson Lake, expired in the fall of 1915 and we were not able to have it renewed, so Mr. Rupp, who owns one of the large ponds leased by the commission for salmon culture, agreed to construct another pond and lease it to the commission for the rearing of fish. The pond was completed early last winter and stocked with salmon, where they are thriving. These fish will be distributed during the fall of 1916. We would respectfully recommend that the commission take measures to purchase these leased ponds or acquire more land near Sisson Hatchery to construct large ponds such as these, of one acre or more in area, for the rearing of salmon fry. The more experience we have in rearing salmon fry in ponds, the more we are convinced that the best results in salmon culture are to be obtained by rearing several million fry each season on the upper reaches of the Sacramento River where the water is pure and cold and where the fry can be liberated in the fall out of the reach of the predatory fishes that infest the Sacramento River after it enters the valley proper.

Fig. 44. Hatchery "E" at Sisson Station, completed January 1, 1915. This is the fifth large hatchery building erected at Sisson.

Fig. 45. Feeding fish in one of the ponds at Sisson Station. Photograph by Union Lithograph Company.

The increased number of trout fry hatched at Sisson Station during the season of 1915, 11,372,000, caused the Hatchery Department to design a more extensive plan of distribution. Accordingly, it was decided to operate two distribution cars. Arrangements were made with the Southern Pacific Company to rent a baggage car and have it equipped with a gasoline engine and an aerating system. This car was equipped at the Southern Pacific Company shops in Sacramento and put into the service July 1, 1915 (see Fig. 20). During the distribution season of 1916, two distribution cars were used from Sisson station.

The total number of fry distributed from Sisson Hatchery during the season of 1916 was 9,597,000, consisting of the following varieties: rainbow, eastern brook, Loch Leven, black-spotted, steelhead and German brown trout. There will be approximately 18,000,000 quinnat salmon distributed from Sisson Hatchery this season.

The pond system is being maintained and improved. We find that it is necessary to keep a good stock of brood fish in the ponds to give us a supply of eggs that we can always depend upon.

The number of fish on hand in the ponds at Sisson Hatchery July 1, 1916, was as follows:

	Adults	Two years old	One year old	Fry	Total

Tahoe Hatcheries.

The Tahoe Hatcheries have been operated to their full capacity during the last two seasons. Mr. Hunt has had immediate supervision of these stations, as in former years. The output of fry will be shown in the statistical tables for these hatcheries.

We again respectfully recommend that the much needed improvements at Tahoe station be carried out in the near future. The Tahoe Hatchery should be enlarged so as to give it a larger trough capacity and Tallac Hatchery should be removed at the earliest possible date from Taylor Creek to Tallac Creek or to any other site where the water is suitable for rearing fish. The water in Taylor Creek is not fit for hatchery purposes. Taylor Creek rises in Fallen Leaf Lake and its water, during the warm weather, becomes impure from the organic matter in the lake. The fish become affected and it is necessary to plant them early in the season before they have made their proper growth. Negotiations are under way at present to acquire a new site on a nearby stream where the fry can be held until later in the fall, before distributing them. A battery of tanks is being planned in which to rear the fry to a much larger size than formerly, before planting them.

We repeat the recommendation made in the last biennial report regarding increased efforts to propagate the large lake trout (Salmo tahoensis), by trapping the upper Truckee River and Blackwood Creek for their eggs. This valuable fish should be increased in numbers by artificial propagation.

Fig. 46. Seining for striped bass to be transplanted to barren waters. Photographs by H. H. Hunt.

New varieties of game trout should be added to the native species of trout in Lake Tahoe, thus affording a fish for the angler as well as for the commercial fisherman. The Department of Fishculture is making arrangements to carry out these plans.

Considerable complaint has been made regarding the leeches affecting the trout in the streams entering into the lake, and the commission has been requested to remove the logs and brush from the creeks as the erroneous impression prevails that the logs are infested with the leeches and if the logs were removed the fish would not be affected. The common leech occurs in many fresh water streams and lakes and inhabits the gravel and rocks in the beds of the streams. It may be found on the logs and pieces of wood in the creeks, but only incidentally, as its native habitat is in the bottom of the streams among the gravel and rocks, and under the bank where it finds lodgment. It is parasitic on fishes, and if all the logs and wood in the streams entering Lake Tahoe were removed, the leeches would be present just the same. As soon as the fish enter the creeks from the deep water of the lake and come into the shallow water, the leeches attach themselves to the gills and mouths of the fish and in a short time the fish become greatly emaciated from loss of blood. When the leeches are gorged they drop off the fish and bury in the gravel at the bottom of the creeks. Where the leeches are numerous and a large number attach themselves to a trout the loss of blood is great and the fish often dies; but the number actually killed is not as great as some persons imagine. The trout are naturally weak during the spawning season and some of them perish from their efforts in spawning as well as from the leeches. The trout artificially spawned at the egg collecting stations escape many of the dangers incidental to spawning in the creeks, such as the ravages of leeches and the grab hooks and spears of poachers.

Brookdale Hatchery.

Brookdale Hatchery was operated during the seasons of 1915 and 1916 under a lease procured from Santa Cruz County. The eggs were collected at Swanton from Scott Creek. Under the conditions of the lease the county of Santa Cruz receives annually 500,000 steelhead trout fry to be distributed entirely in the public waters and the remainder of the eggs and fry are disposed of at the pleasure of the commission. The last two seasons' operations were productive of good results. In the season of 1915, there were 1,070,000 fry reared and distributed from Brookdale Hatchery and 2,287,000 eyed eggs were shipped to other stations to be reared and distributed in other sections of the state. There were 678,000 eyed eggs shipped from Brookdale Hatchery to Sisson Hatchery, and 877,000 fry distributed in the waters of Santa Clara, Santa Cruz and Monterey counties during the season of 1916. The distribution of fry from Brookdale Hatchery during the season of 1915 will be found in the statistical table of this report (see appendix).

Ukiah Hatchery.

Ukiah Hatchery was run as usual during the seasons of 1915 and 1916. Steelhead eggs were shipped to this station from the Snow Mountain egg collecting station. The fry were given a wide distribution in Sonoma and Mendocino counties. During the season of 1916, while removing the Price Creek Hatchery to its new location on Fort Seward Creek, 1,000,000 quinnat salmon eggs were hatched at Ukiah Hatchery for distribution in Mad and Eel rivers.

Fort Seward Hatchery.

Owing to the undesirable location of the Price Creek Hatchery, it was decided to remove it to a more favorable site. Price Creek Hatchery was located on Price Creek, one-half mile from its junction with Eel River. The creek has its source in the hills near the mouth of Eel River. The country through which it flows is a loose, friable and disorganized formation that is constantly sliding and washing away. During the winter months the creek was so full of sediment that it was only with the greatest skill and care that fish could be reared at all. In the spring the water dried up rapidly and became very warm so that it was impossible to hold the fry later than June. The commission decided to remove the hatchery to a more favorable location. The Department of Fish-culture was instructed to select a suitable site and to move the station. After a careful survey of the streams on the line of the Northwestern Pacific Railroad we selected Fort Seward Creek, a cold, clear stream flowing into Eel River about four and one-half miles above old Fort Seward, Humboldt County. The commission purchased forty acres of land near the mouth of the creek and selected a site for the hatchery about one-quarter of a mile from the Northwestern Pacific Railroad.

Fig. 47. New hatchery at Fort Seward, Humboldt County. Photograph by Silas Campbell.

Early in 1916, the work of moving the building, tanks, flumes, etc., from Price Creek to the new site on Fort Seward Creek was begun, and in due time it was completed and ready for the spring hatch of trout eggs (see Fig. 47). W. O. Fassett, who has been superintendent of the Price Creek Hatchery for a number of years past, was placed in charge of the new station and he has successfully carried on the work as in former years. A cottage for the superintendent and a cabin for the men was erected and finished in a rough way until more comfortable quarters could be arranged.

The building and troughs were ready for the steelhead eggs collected at the Snow Mountain egg collecting station during the spring. One million steelhead eggs were shipped to the station and the resulting fry are to be distributed in the streams of Mendocino and Humboldt counties. Besides the steelhead eggs, 100,000 rainbow trout eggs from the Lake Almanor station and 140,000 black-spotted trout eggs from the Tahoe hatcheries were shipped to the new station for distribution in the tributaries of Mad River and Eel River.

This hatchery can be used for salmon culture as well as for trout work. Plans are being made to construct a rack across Eel River for the purpose of collecting salmon eggs for the hatchery at Fort Seward Creek. This will enable us to stock Eel River, Mad River, Elk River and several large streams on the Humboldt County coast with salmon fry. Formerly the salmon eggs for this section were shipped from the Sacramento River stations. If we are successful with this undertaking, an ample supply of eggs can be collected from Eel River without taking any from other hatcheries. Fort Seward Hatchery promises to be one of the most important stations of the commission.

Snow Mountain Station.

Early in the season of 1915, the commission secured a lease on the Cape Horn Dam from the Snow Mountain Water and Power Company for one year with the option of an additional five years. This lease gives the commission the use of the grounds and buildings as well as the privilege of constructing tanks, traps, etc., on the land described in the lease. Snow Mountain Station is one of the best steelhead egg collecting stations on the coast. The dam that makes it possible to collect the fish is located on the south fork of Eel River about twenty-five miles from Ukiah, Mendocino County. All the steelhead trout that ascend this branch of Eel River are easily trapped in the fishway over the dam. Last spring a series of tanks were arranged to hold the fish near the hatchery building. This tank system was arranged under the supervision of F. A. Shebley, a skilled fishculturist, who has made the work of holding large fish a specialty. The tanks and traps are so arranged that a portion of the mature steelhead trout are allowed to ascend the river above the dam to deposit their spawn and thus keep up the supply of fish in the extreme upper reaches of the streams tributary to this branch of Eel River.

Considerable complaint has been made by local residents regarding our operations at Snow Mountain Station. The claim has been made that not enough fish were allowed to pass the dam to keep the upper reaches of the river stocked. A hearing was held at Upper Lake, Lake County, on April 2d, by representatives of the commission. The meeting was well attended, about sixty persons being present. It was decided, after the hearing, to arrange a flume from a point near the tank house, where all the fish not needed for spawning purposes could be separated from the ripe fish and allowed to pass above the trap so they could ascend the river to the spawning grounds on the upper reaches of the river. This will be of considerable benefit if the fish are allowed to ascend the stream unmolested. There are a great many of these fish taken by the local residents before they arrive at the spawning grounds, in spite of the vigilance of the deputies. The idea prevails among some of these people that these large trout are salmon and that they will die as soon as they spawn. The steelhead is a true trout and not a salmon and will spawn several times if not taken or killed. A sufficient number of these fish will be allowed to ascend the river above the dam each season to keep the upper part of the river stocked by natural spawning.

Wawona Hatchery.

Wawona Hatchery has not been operated for the last two seasons, and fish were shipped from Sisson to supply the region covered by this hatchery. The station was operated during the season of 1914, and the distribution of black-spotted and large lake trout fry in the counties of Mariposa and Madera will be found in the statistical report (see appendix). This region will be supplied from the Inyo Hatchery next season, and we would, therefore, recommend that the Wawona Hatchery be abandoned.

Bear Valley Hatchery.

During the fall of 1914, San Bernardino County established a small hatchery on one of the tributary streams flowing into Bear Valley Lake. The object of this hatchery was to propagate rainbow trout from the fish in Bear Valley Lake. Bear Valley Lake, locally known as Big Bear Lake, is a body of water seven miles long and one and a half miles wide at its widest part. It is an artificial storage lake lying in the heart of the San Bernardino mountains about thirty miles from San Bernardino at an elevation of about 7000 feet.

This lake was stocked a number of years ago with rainbow fry from Sisson Hatchery and these fish have thrived remarkably well. The commission operated this hatchery during the seasons of 1915 and 1916. The first operations resulted in an output of 413,000 fry, all of which were planted in Big Bear Lake and in the streams of San Bernardino County.

Our crew of spawn-takers arrived at Big Bear Lake on March 16, 1916, prepared to exceed last season's take of eggs. Torrential rains during the winter had caused the mouths of the creeks to be filled with debris, which caused the fish to be delayed in entering the streams and the female trout became overripe before the first fish were spawned. Consequently the percentage of fertilization was not as good as expected. The rising surface of the lake, caused by the dam being raised, made a change in the shore line and the mouths of the creeks being closed in the beginning of the season by detritus carried down by the winter storms, embarrassed the operations to a considerable extent. Our men had to remove the sand bars and other debris that had been deposited at the mouths of the creeks, before the fish could enter. The fish being retarded, the eggs were affected by over-retention, and a high percentage of fertilization could not be obtained. The eggs that were fertilized hatched well and produced a lot of strong, healthy fry. The result of the season's operations was 750,000 fry, which are being distributed in Big Bear Lake and the streams of San Bernardino County. The county game warden, Mr. Malone, will assist in the work of distribution. In the table of distribution will be found the list of waters stocked with trout fry from this station during the season of 1915.

It is planned to get everything in readiness this coming fall so that there will not be any delay this coming season in collecting the eggs from Big Bear Lake. This will prove to be a valuable egg collecting station, as it will supply the streams of San Bernardino County that are situated far from the railroad in the heart of the San Bernardino mountain range.

Almanor Hatchery.

In an effort to increase the take of rainbow trout eggs during 1916, plans were made to establish an egg collecting station at Lake Almanor, Plumas County. The take of rainbow eggs at the Bogus and Camp Creek stations, on the Klamath River, was light, as this proved to be an off season on the Klamath. The run of fish in the tributaries of the Klamath River is very irregular, as our records for twenty-five years past will show. Whenever weather conditions are not propitious the fish do not run regularly and straggle along for months. Consequently the take of eggs is always light during such seasons. Early in 1916 we were satisfied that the take of eggs at these stations would be light, so we planned accordingly to make an effort to collect eggs elsewhere. Having heard that there was a considerable number of rainbow trout each spring in the North Fork of the Feather River at the outlet to Lake Almanor, Mr. Hunt, our Field Agent, was instructed to investigate and report on the chances of collecting eggs at this place. He reported the condition was favorable for a good take of eggs.

We secured permission from the Great Western Power Company to operate on their property at the Lake Almanor Dam. The company also kindly gave us the use of their buildings in which to establish a temporary hatchery. The crew worked under difficulties. The snow was deep and it was difficult to get the supplies and equipment to the station; but in spite of the difficulties, we collected 1,635,000 eggs and successfully held them until they were ready for shipment. Fort Seward Hatchery received 100,000 eggs, 240,000 were shipped to Tahoe Hatchery, 840,000 to Sisson Hatchery, 100,000 to the Nevada State Fish Commission, and the remainder were hatched and distributed in the local streams and in Lake Almanor.

Reports were received that a good run of rainbow trout ascended Rice Creek, a tributary of the North Fork of the Feather River above Lake Almanor. After making an examination of the stream and gathering data from the local residents we have decided to establish an egg station there this fall, so as to have it ready for next spring's work.

We have located a site for a small hatchery and egg station at Domingo Springs. Domingo Springs is on the main road leading from Chester to Red Bluff, and is one-half mile from Rice Creek Falls, where we have selected a site for a trap and retaining tanks for our egg collecting station. The water from Domingo Springs gushes from the lava rocks at the foot of a cliff near the road. There is about 300 inches of water in the springs, an ample supply for a fair-sized hatchery, should it ever be necessary to operate one in that section on a large scale. We have a permit from the United States Forestry Department for the hatchery site at Domingo Springs, as well as for the trap and tank site on Rice Creek.

Next season we will operate a trap in Rice Creek to determine the number of eggs that can be collected and if our efforts are successful we will make this a permanent egg collecting station and establish a small hatchery at Domingo Springs to supply the district west and north from Lake Almanor, as well as to keep up the supply of trout in the lake.

Burney Creek Station.

In the spring of 1915 we secured a lease on a piece of land at the mouth of Burney Creek, a tributary of Pit River, Shasta County, for the purpose of collecting rainbow trout eggs. A rack was placed across the stream and the necessary live cars and pens were made to hold the fish that we expected would enter the creek. A tent and a few troughs under it, with our hatching equipment, was set up and operations were begun with the intention of collecting and eyeing eggs preparatory to shipment to Sisson.

It was originally planned to eye the eggs and hatch them in the old Hat Creek Hatchery, seven miles from Burney Creek, if a sufficient number were taken; but early in May an eruption of Mount Lassen sent a tremendous flood of mud, water and sand down the Hat Creek Valley, destroying all the fish in the stream from its source to its confluence with the Pit River. This was one of the most serious destructions of fish life in recent years in California. Hat Creek rises in the southeastern part of Shasta County in a lake at the foot of Mount Lassen, at an altitude of 7300 feet above sea level. It flows northerly into the Pit River, two miles northwest of Carbon, where the old Hat Creek Hatchery was located. It is thirty-eight miles in length. Its principal tributary is Rising River, a short stream arising from large springs in the lava. It is only two miles in length, but has an average flow of 380 second feet of water. Hat Creek, before its confluence with Rising River at the town of Cassell, has an average flow of about 100 second feet during the summer months. Hat Creek and its tributary, Rising River, were noted for the excellence of their rainbow trout. After the flood of mud and sand from Mount Lassen, the only survivors in the valley were those that were in Rising River. The water was muddy all during the season of 1915 and during the last year continued so muddy that it was not considered practical to restock the stream. It will probably be several years before fish will again thrive in Hat Creek, as the shifting sand deposited by the volcano destroys all the insect life in the stream, as well as making it uninhabitable for trout.

The fish enter Burney Creek late in the summer, but the run is a protracted one, lasting from April to August. The fish are late in developing and if the fry were reared in a higher altitude and the progeny spawned later each season, a fall spawning rainbow trout could be developed. This would probably have some advantages over a spring spawning fish, as such trout would be in fine condition for the anglers when the fishing season opens in the spring.

The eggs collected during the season were eyed at Burney Creek Station, and 200,000 were shipped to Sisson Hatchery, from which station they were distributed to different sections of the state. Owing to heavy operations at other stations, Burney Creek was not operated during the season of 1916.

A Southern California Hatchery.

During the summer of 1915 the commission again took up the matter of constructing a hatchery for southern California. A hatchery for southern California has been advocated for several years, but to find a location where the water, climatic conditions and transportation facilities were suitable for a hatchery large enough to supply the region south of the Tehachapi and the country lying to the east of the San Joaquin Valley, was not easy. The hatchery department had made investigations and gathered data on the best streams in the country south of the Tehachapi, but none of them was found to meet all the requirements necessary for the proposed hatchery. Some of the sites were inaccessible, others too far from railroad transportation, but the great majority of them, although located where the water was pure and in sufficient quantity, were undesirable because the water was used for domestic purposes. In October, 1915, Commissioner M. J. Connell notified the Department of Hatcheries that he had found an ideal stream of water on which to locate a hatchery such as the board had been looking for. He called our attention to Oak Creek, Inyo County, and ordered the Superintendent of Hatcheries to make a report on the stream.

Oak Creek was found to be the largest and most important stream that enters the Owens River Valley in the region of Independence. The reason for selecting the region near Independence was to enable the commission to secure an ample supply of eggs near the hatchery. Mr. Connell had found that a series of lakes, situated in the high Sierra region west of Independence, were teeming with rainbow trout of an excellent quality and from which millions of eggs could be procured. These lakes are in a glacial basin and are known as the Rae Lakes.

Oak Creek enters the valley about five miles north of the town of Independence. It has an abundance of pure, cold water. The maximum flow (which is in June) varies from 20 second-feet to 200 second-feet, depending on the depth of the snow that falls on the upper reaches of the stream, and the rapidity with which it melts during the first warm spell in the early summer. The average minimum flow for the last six years was 8 second-feet, and this late in the fall. This stream will supply a hatchery station with a capacity of from 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 fry. As the largest number of fish are handled during the maximum flow, this creek supplies almost an unlimited flow of water for hatchery purposes. The source of Oak Creek is in the precipitous range of mountains on the west side of the valley at an altitude of about 10,000 feet. Its descent is very rapid until it reaches the floor of the valley. From its source on Diamond Peak and Black Mountain, the main stream, or the North Fork, is 8 miles long to its junction with the South Fork, which rises on the southeastern slope of Black Mountain and is also about 8 miles in length. The South Fork falls from its highest source to its junction with the North Fork 7100 feet in a distance of 8 miles. The North Fork falls 8700 feet in its course from the source to its junction. The confluence of the two forks of Oak Creek is about $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles from the base of the range in the Owens River Valley. The land slopes gently toward the plain on a gradient of about 4 per cent.

About one-quarter of a mile below the junction of the two forks of the stream, the commission secured forty acres of land on which to establish a hatchery. On this site a large hatchery is now being erected. The building now under construction is $192\frac{1}{2}$ by 45 feet, constructed of natural stone, gabro and granite, found on the floor of the valley (see Fig. 31). The building will contain offices, storerooms and a laboratory on the lower floor and living quarters for the help in the upper story of the structure. It will be equipped with up-to-date plumbing. All the troughs will have a separate water supply. The aerating system will be on the latest and most modern lines. The waste pipes, catch basins and drains will all be of cement. The arrangement of the whole system when completed is expected to be the latest and most improved in fishcultural work.

The supply of eggs will be procured from the Rae Lakes—a system of lakes lying in the heart of the Sierras at an elevation of 10,500 feet above sea level (see Figs. 48 and 49). These lakes were stocked by a party of enterprising citizens from Owens River Valley, under the leadership of Geo. W. Naylor of Independence, former sheriff of Inyo County and now a member of the board of supervisors. The fish were taken from Charlotte Lake and transplanted to the waters of Rae Lakes sixteen years ago. The original stock came from Kings River and were transplanted into Charlotte Lake. A recommendation will be made to the next legislature to set aside the Rae Lakes as a fish preserve for the purpose of protecting the brood fish for their eggs. This is necessary to supply the large new hatchery with an ample supply of eggs.

Distribution from the hatchery now being constructed on Oak Creek can be made to all points in southern California as far north as Merced and from there to the Yosemite Valley, easier and better than from any other point where hatcheries can be operated. It will take fourteen hours from Owenyo, the point on the railroad where the fish cars will be loaded, to Los Angeles, and about seventeen hours to Merced. This will allow of the planting of the fry in the shortest possible time from any of the large hatcheries in California. This site can not be excelled for many reasons: first, there is a great amount of pure water in Oak Creek; second, the climatic conditions and altitude for the rearing of fry are ideal; third, a large number of spawn fish can be taken from the Rae Lakes and transferred to the hatchery; fourth, the hatchery is centrally located, where all southern California and the mountain district adjacent to the San Joaquin Valley, including the Yosemite National Park, as well as the region north to Mono and Alpine counties, and the hundreds of barren lakes in the southern high Sierras, can be kept stocked with less expense than under any other system of hatchery work.

Acknowledgments.

The commission acknowledges its appreciation and gratitude to the following railway and transportation companies:

The Southern Pacific Railroad Company, Western Pacific Railway Company, Northwestern Pacific Railroad Company, Santa Fe Railway Company, Nevada-California-Oregon Railroad Company, Lake Tahoe Railway and Transportation Company, Ocean Shore Railroad Company, Sierra Railway Company, California Western Railroad and Navigation Company, Amador Central Railroad, McCloud River Railroad Company, Yreka Railroad Company, Oakland, Antioch and Eastern Railway Company, Northern Electric Railway Company, San Joaquin and Eastern Railroad, Visalia Electric Railroad, Yosemite Valley Railroad and Virginia and Truckee Railroad, for the free transportation of the employees of the hatchery department in care of the eggs and fish, and for the free transportation of our distribution cars. Without their assistance our work would be restricted very materially.

Recommendations.

The most important recommendation that we desire to make is one in regard to dams in rivers inhabited by migratory fish, particularly salmon. We would recommend that a law be passed the same as the proposed federal law for the territory of Alaska. A law should be passed providing that any person or corporation desiring to construct a dam or obstruction in any stream in which migratory fish exist to a height that will make a fishway thereover impracticable, in the opinion of the Fish and Game Commission of the state of California, shall secure a site and erect thereon a hatchery, dwellings for the help, traps for taking the fish and all equipment necessary to operate a hatchery station according to the plans furnished by the Fish and Game Commission, and to convey the same to the commission when completed. If a site is not available or the water not suitable at or near the dam, the owners or occupants of such dam shall erect a hatchery and equip the same at any point below the dam that the Fish and Game Commission may select for the purpose of propagating the eggs from the fish that are obstructed in their ascent of the river by the dam or obstruction.

This concludes our report. A great many other recommendations could be made regarding the changes in the fishway law, trout seasons, salmon laws, etc., but we will make these recommendations in a separate report on that subject.

We wish to express our appreciation and thanks to your honorable board for the support that you have given us and those associated with us in this work. The earnest support of our superiors and the efforts of our assistants have made the last two seasons work the most successful of any in the history of the commission.

Respectfully submitted.

REPORT OF DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCIAL FISHERIES.

The Honorable Board of Fish and Game Commissioners.

GENTLEMEN: The recent rapid growth of our fisheries has made it necessary to obtain more detailed and accurate knowledge of our fishery resources than has yet been attempted, if they are to be intelligently conserved. The development of the tuna, sardine and kelp industries has done much to awaken public interest, and there is a demand that some study be made of the albacore (tuna) and that the effect of cutting the kelp for potash be investigated. In order to more efficiently handle the problems arising and to meet the necessity of obtaining a better knowledge of our fisheries, the Department of Commercial Fisheries was formed early in the year 1915.

Before this department was permanently formed the fishing methods employed in the different fisheries and the methods of canning and curing were studied. The more important fisheries were rather hurriedly investigated during the year preceding the last legislative session that the commission might be better able to aid in the enactment of laws governing the fisheries. Some very good and important legislation was the direct result of this study, chief of which was: a redivision of the state into fish and game districts to fit the need of the commercial fisheries; a closed season and regulations for salmon and steelhead fishing on Eel River that would do much to conserve both the salmon and steelhead and at the same time fairly well satisfy the two opposing factions, the sportsmen and commercial fishermen; a better season for Mad and Smith rivers; a closing of the Sacramento River to nets above Vina and the protection of the summer run and part of the spring run of salmon in the district from Colusa to Vina; the closure of many streams and sloughs that were not capable of sustaining net fishing; the abolition of the paranzella net in southern California, a net which nearly ruined the southern halibut supply; the reestablishment of the trammel net in southern California that it might take the place of the paranzella net without destroying the young fish as did the paranzella; the establishment of a uniform and just minimum mesh for salmon and striped bass on San Francisco Bay and the rivers; a uniform catfish law for the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers; and a law requiring fish handlers and dealers to report the quantities and kinds of fish handled each month.

Since the formation of this department we have considered it of first importance to gather accurate and detailed information concerning the present commercial fisheries of the state, with the ultimate object of building up these industries and at the same time conserving the marine species upon which these industries depend, and to investigate and aid in the development of our latent and undeveloped fishery resources.

We are recording the results of our work in the form of permanent notes, which are filed in such form that they will become the property of the state and can be referred to readily and be used by anyone who may wish to continue the work. Much valuable information has been lost in the past because it was not filed. We plan, as soon as we have sufficient data on any one fishery, to put the information in the form of reports accompanied by illustrations, so that it can be published. We have published reports on the tuna, shad and paranzella fisheries and are prepared to publish reports on the salmon, sardine, striped bass, rock cod, crab, catfish and abalone fisheries.

Fig. 51. Rock cod fishermen at Fishermen's Wharf, San Francisco. Photographs by A. M. Fairfield.

A law enacted by the last legislature requires dealers and handlers of fish to make an accurate monthly statement of the quantity and varieties of fish handled and where they were caught. We have considered it of the greatest importance that this law be enforced and that the reports be complete and accurate. To that end a list of all the dealers of the state required to make this report was compiled and printed blanks issued to each. The law went into effect in August, 1915, and we have been able to get a very complete and accurate record of the fish handled since the 1st of October, 1915. This record, if kept up, will show the decline or rise of any fishery and the season of each variety of fish. This, supplemented by the number of boats, men, nets and the intensity of the fishing, which we are obtaining, will give us the basis upon which all conservation measures must rest. We are publishing the statistics as we gather them in the quarterly bulletin, CALIFORNIA FISH AND GAME, along with other contributions on subjects of interest concerning the fisheries.

We have investigated, as far as we could, the fish marketing problems; the sanitary or unsanitary handling of fish by fishermen, by markets and in shipment; the cold storing of salmon, the utilization of fish waste for fertilizer or for chicken feed. We have, since the first of the year 1916, been gathering data regarding the prices paid the fishermen and the prices paid by the retailer and consumer for the different varieties of fish in representative towns in the state. Since the appointment of the State Market Director we have given him the results of our work and have cooperated with and aided him in every possible way. Practically all of the recent data on California fisheries which are available are the result of the work of this department of the Fish and Game Commission. Now that he has taken up the fish marketing problem, we will be relieved of much of that part of the work, as it more properly belongs to him. We will probably continue, at his request, to aid in certain lines where our facilities for obtaining information are better than his.

We have been appointed a member of the Northern California Fish Exchange Committee as organized by the State Market Director. This exchange consists of five members, the fishermen, the wholesalers, the retailers, the State Market Commission and the Fish and Game Commission each being represented by a member on the committee. The last two named members are to represent the people of the state. The object is to unite the producer, the dealer and the people for their mutual benefit and fix each day the maximum price the consumer shall pay. Under the arrangement a certain per cent will be collected from the business for advertising, by which means it is expected to induce the people to use fish every day of the week and thus increase consumption, lessen the cost to the consumer and help develop our fisheries.

Fig. 52. Sole and sand-dab steam trawlers working out of San Francisco and a Santa Cruz gasoline trawler hauling in catch. Photographs by H. B. Nidever.

The working rules of the Fish Exchange Committee provide for the adjustment of differences or disputes between the fisherman, wholesaler, retailer or the public. They provide the first good opportunity the fishermen have had of presenting their side of the case and decisions reached by the committee should have great weight with the legislature. It will be the particular duty of the representative of the Fish and Game Commission to represent the fish themselves; in other words, to see that our fishery resources are conserved.

A survey of the economically important shellfish of the state, begun several years ago, has been taken up and completed under the direction of Dr. Harold Heath of Leland Stanford Junior University. A full report is in preparation. In connection with this work, Pismo clams were transplanted to several suitable beaches in San Luis Obispo County and an extensive plant of eastern softshell clams made in Morro Bay, which appears to be especially well suited to them. A report of this work was published at the time in CALIFORNIA FISH AND GAME.

In 1911 and 1912, under the direction of Dr. C. H. Gilbert of Leland Stanford Junior University, the Fish and Game Commission liberated large numbers of marked quinnat salmon fry in the Sacramento River, Scott's Creek and San Lorenzo River. This was the most comprehensive fish marking experiment ever undertaken. More than 200,000 marked salmon fry were liberated and it was expected that many important facts regarding the life of the salmon would be learned from these experiments. The fish resulting from the first fry liberated were in their fourth year in 1914, at which time they were expected to appear in Monterey Bay and in the streams where they were liberated. In order that we might recover as many as possible of these fish we distributed circulars to all handlers of fish on Monterey Bay and to all handlers of fish from San Francisco Bay and rivers. These circulars contained a diagram of a salmon to illustrate the different marks and full directions as to how to take samples of scales and make a record of each fish. The commission's deputies at Monterey, Santa Cruz, San Francisco, Sacramento and on the bay and river patrol boats assisted in the recovering of these fish. The fish dealers were much interested and gave every assistance. We personally visited nearly every one of these people to explain the importance of recovering these fish. We had envelopes printed and distributed which could contain a sample of scales from each and the record of each as to size, sex, kind of mark, etc. The number recovered was disappointing.

In the year 1915, partly because we were better prepared to carry on the work, the number recovered was considerably larger. By placing a rack across the San Lorenzo River we were able to get a good record of the marked fish entering that stream. A few fish were taken in Monterey Bay in 1916, but not many were expected as they are now in their sixth year. As yet the material and records obtained have not been studied further than to determine that the method employed in ascertaining the age of salmon from the scales is accurate. While the total number of fish recovered was disappointing the material and data collected is very valuable, and when properly studied and reported upon, will be a most valuable contribution to our knowledge of the quinnat salmon.

DEVELOPMENT OF CALIFORNIA FISHERIES.

In the following we give the important developments in our fisheries:

The Long-finned Tuna or Albacore.

Since our report on this industry in the last biennial report of the Fish and Game Commission the fishery has continued to grow until it now more than doubles in value and importance either the salmon or sardine industry.

In 1914 the tuna pack was 325,000 cases of one-pound and half-pound cans. The pack for 1915 was 360,286 cases, of which there were 136,046 cases of one-pound cans, 172,263 cases of half-pound cans, and 51,977 cases of quarter-pound cans, with 48 cans to the case. For this pack there was required 23,500,000 pounds of round fish, and the wholesale value of the pack was $2,300,000. Besides the tuna that were canned more than two million pounds were dried, smoked, salted and used fresh.

During 1915 twelve tuna canneries were in operation in southern California and in 1916 the number has been increased to sixteen, which during the season give employment to 1800 people. The amount invested in buildings and equipment is $910,000. About 400 fishing boats valued at $1,000,000 are employed, and the number of tuna fishermen is 1200.

The remarkable feature of the season of 1915 was the large take of tuna in November. The demand for canned tuna is now so great that it exceeds the supply and the prices obtained are high. Most of the canneries have been enlarged in anticipation of a larger catch, but unless a good catch is made late in the year, as happened last season, the pack is likely to be less for 1916. The tuna packers are anxious to have the migration and life history of the albacore investigated. They would like to know how much fishing the albacore will stand and what measures, if any, will be needed to conserve the industry. We have no conservation measures to propose, for the albacore that appear in our waters are mostly mature and are here in search of food. Any important conservation measures that may be needed would have to be applied in Mexican waters, for it is there they spawn and it is there the young are found. The industry in this state will adjust itself to the number of fish that come this far north, but the tuna packers would naturally like to know beforehand how much the fish will stand, that they may regulate their industry accordingly. So far no serious attempt has been made to can the albacore in Lower California. It is believed that albacore may be taken throughout the year near Cape San Lucas, Lower California. If this is true and a large canning industry should be built up at that point, it would probably seriously affect the supply of fish in this state.

The difficulty of securing live sardines and anchovies for bait is still the serious problem that it was when we last reported. Attempts have been made to use large purse nets to capture the albacore and thus get along without bait, but the expense of operating the nets has been so great and the catch so small that the method has been abandoned. Large circle nets have been successfully used in Japan for these fish, but it is doubtful if they will ever be a success here as our fish seldom appear in compact schools.

Salmon.

Only two species of salmon are taken commercially in California, the quinnat or chinook and the silver or coho. A few individual dog and humpback salmon are occasionally found entering our small streams. The silver salmon enters nearly every stream of any size from Monterey Bay north, with the exception of the Sacramento River, but is not taken in any quantities except in the Eel, Klamath and Smith rivers. The quinnat or chinook is the principal salmon of Monterey Bay and the Sacramento, Eel, Mad, Klamath and Smith rivers.

SALMON CATCH FOR THE YEAR 1915.

Monterey Bay (chinook).....	3,045,446 pounds.
San Francisco Bay and lower rivers.....	4,374,932 pounds.
Sacramento River above Colusa.....	172,389 pounds.
Total	7,592,767 pounds.

This amount was utilized as follows:

450,000 pounds canned.
 2,742,400 pounds mild cured.
 750,000 pounds hard salted.
 3,650,367 pounds used fresh.

At Fort Bragg, Mendocino County, 56,247 pounds of chinook salmon were taken by trolling in the open sea and shipped to San Francisco. The combined catch on the Eel, Mad, Klamath and Smith rivers was: 1,649,189 pounds chinook and 286,719 pounds silver salmon. Of this amount, 1,063,189 pounds were canned, 840,908 pounds were used fresh and 32,000 pounds were mild cured.

The total catch for the state was 9,298,203 pounds chinook and 286,719 pounds of silver salmon. In addition to this there were taken in Eel and Mad rivers, 33,204 pounds of steelhead, which were marketed fresh.

The 1916 salmon catch for the six months ending June 30th was:

Monterey and Santa Cruz.....	3,848,073 pounds.
San Francisco Bay and lower rivers.....	983,979 pounds.
Sacramento River above Colusa.....	149,080 pounds.

Fig. 55. Loading 150 boxes of fish, principally salmon, at Monterey. Photograph by A. M. Fairfield.

The salmon of the Sacramento River are apparently holding their own, if we include the salmon taken in Monterey Bay and outside the Golden Gate, as it is proper to do. While our figures for the catch of Sacramento salmon for 1915-1916 are not up to the estimates of former years, they are undoubtedly nearer the actual average yearly catch, as figures in the past have been principally estimates with the usual tendency to avoid underestimating the catch. The fall run on the Sacramento has been less than the average for the past few years on account of the greatly increased catch outside and in Monterey Bay.

A few years ago a half-million pounds was a good catch on Monterey Bay. In 1914 the catch was two and one-half million pounds. In 1915 it jumped to three million pounds and up to June 30, 1916, the catch for Monterey Bay and outside "The Heads" exceeded four million pounds. In 1916 the greatest catches in Monterey Bay were made in May. About 400 boats were engaged in trolling and the record day's catch for all boats was 85 tons. This year the run was followed up the coast by the fishermen. Early in August the boats were making good catches near Davenport, above Santa Cruz, and in a few days they were just south of the Golden Gate. For nearly three weeks the salmon remained outside, part of the time north and part of the time south of the entrance. Nearly one hundred boats trolled for the fish while they were off the Golden Gate. On one day over 50 tons were taken. Many small salmon were taken during this run outside San Francisco Bay, a large number being less than five pounds in weight. Such a run of small fish was never observed here before.

The spring run of salmon on the Sacramento River has been poor for the past seven or eight years. Several reasons have been advanced for this: That no protection of a closed season is given the spring run as is given the fall run; that the seines in the upper river have taken the spring fish principally and have allowed very few to pass to the spawning beds; and that little attention is given to the artificial propagation of the spring run. These theories are all based on the supposition that the two runs are practically distinct and that spring run salmon make spring run salmon and fall run salmon make fall run salmon. As a matter of fact, the actual relationship of the two runs has never been demonstrated. It is the belief of fishculturists, however, that the fish resulting from the eggs laid down by either the spring or fall fish are more apt to return as fall fish. Theoretically the progeny of the spring run fish have a better opportunity to survive and pass out of the river to the sea as good sized fry than have the progeny of the fall run fish.

For the purpose of giving the spring fish a better chance to reach the spawning grounds in the upper waters of the river, a law was passed at the last session of the legislature which prohibits netting in the river above Vina and provides a closed season for the district from Vina to Colusa from May 15th to the end of the year. It was hoped that as a result of this measure, the one hatchery that operates on the spring run—the federal hatchery on the McCloud River—would be able to take a large number of eggs, but unfortunately they failed to operate the hatchery this spring; nor did they operate last year for the spring run. We are informed by our deputies that a much larger number of salmon ascended McCloud River this summer than last year, which indicates that this upper river salmon protective measure has had the desired result and that the natural hatch will be increased thereby even if the artificial hatch is not.

Shad.

Only a few years ago the shad was so plentiful as to be almost a nuisance, but now it is being overfished and protective measures will be necessary to prevent serious injury to the supply. The Chinese shrimp fishermen, when they were compelled to discontinue shrimp fishing in 1911, prepared to salt shad for the markets of China. They began operations in the spring of 1912. The next year saw some of our larger fish handlers in the business. Figures are lacking for the first years, but in 1915, 2,400,000 pounds were dry salted; besides this, 100,000 pounds of fresh shad roe were used locally and shipped East and 606,048 pounds were canned in half-pound cans. About 350,000 pounds of the fish were used fresh within the state and 360,000 pounds of round fish were canned, making a total of 3,816,048 pounds for the year. On account of the increased water freight rates no shad were dry salted for the Chinese trade this year, but the increased demand for canned shad and for our fresh shad in the eastern United States resulted in a larger catch. Thirty-three carloads of the fresh fish were shipped East, as well as twenty casks of mild cured shad, for which there is an Eastern demand developing. There were used in the fresh markets of the state up to June 30, 1916, 405,992 pounds out of a total of 4,413,675 pounds taken. A great many more were canned than in 1915.

In spite of the fact that the catch is rapidly increasing from year to year, the supply of fish is decreasing. It is estimated that the number of shad entering the river in 1915 was 40 per cent short of the year before and that the run of 1916 was 60 per cent short of the 1915 run. In fishing for shad, gill nets with a $6\frac{1}{2}$ -inch stretched mesh are used. This size mesh catches the roe shad only and allows the undesirable buck shad to pass through. The fishing which was formerly almost entirely in the river is now mostly in the lower bays, San Pablo Bay especially. The nets used on the flats of San Pablo Bay have, in addition to shad, been catching large numbers of striped bass which come in preparatory to ascending the river to spawn.

In 1915 accurate account was kept of the proportion of male to female shad on the upper San Joaquin River. The males outnumbered the females 20 to 1. This year the proportion is stated to be near 40 to 1 and the total number of shad appearing in the upper river is decreasing very rapidly. This difference in number between the sexes shows the intensity of the fishing. The sexes normally are about even and if the males exceed the females 40 to 1 in the upper river it means the $6\frac{1}{2}$ -inch mesh gill nets have captured $97\frac{1}{2}$ per cent of the roe shad. As the corresponding $97\frac{1}{2}$ per cent of males is useless as far as the propagation of the race is concerned, it is evident that only $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent of the run is left to continue the species, when 50 per cent would be nearer the right number. We will have one more year of this overfishing before any protective measure can take effect, and in the meantime, the shad run is likely to be nearly ruined. We very much need a law similar to that of other states which gives to the fish and game commission and to the governor of the state the authority to make regulations in cases of emergency of this sort.

Halibut.

The California halibut (Paralichthys californicus) has become one of our most important food fishes and the annual catch by California fishermen exceeds 5,000,000 pounds. It is found from San Francisco south, being most numerous south of Point Concepcion and in the Mexican waters of Lower California. Unlike the northern halibut, which it resembles in appearance, it inhabits the shallow water along shore and the majority of the fish marketed do not exceed 20 pounds in weight, although individuals weighing from 50 to 60 pounds are occasionally taken.

The principal methods of capture have been by trammel or three meshed nets set on the bottom and by the drag nets known also as paranzellas or trawls. The drag nets, used as they are, near shore, have proved themselves to be very destructive to the young halibut. For one ton of marketable halibut caught by this method, three tons of the young halibut too small to market were destroyed, for very few of them could be returned to the water alive. When the loss is figured in numbers instead of weight we find that more than 50 young were destroyed in capturing one of marketable size. To remedy this condition the use or possession of paranzella or trawl nets was prohibited in southern California at the last session of the legislature, and the use of the trammel net restored which, until that time, through some mistaken notion, was prohibited within one mile of shore—the only territory where they could be used. In addition to abolishing the drag net, our present law prescribes an 8-inch minimum mesh limit for trammel nets and a four pound minimum sale limit for halibut, so that this fishery is much better protected than it has ever been. It is doubtful, however, if it has protection enough, for the halibut grows slowly and has not reproduced at the minimum weight of four pounds as set by law. The intensity of the fishing for this species is bound to increase and if at any time our fishermen are excluded from Mexican waters, overfishing in our waters will be sure to take place. It may be necessary, if we are to conserve this fishery, to protect a portion of the fish of reproductive size by increasing the minimum mesh limit of the nets or by closing small areas to fishing. The halibut is another of our fishes that needs to be thoroughly investigated.

The amount of halibut taken by California fishermen between October 1, 1915, and June 30, 1916, was 3,951,690 pounds. Of this amount 1,668,814 pounds were taken in Mexican waters.

Crabs.

Crabs taken at San Francisco during the open season 1914-1915 (November 15th to July 30th) amounted to 49,716 dozens; for the corresponding season of 1915-1916, 40,370 dozens. Crabs taken in Monterey Bay during season 1915-1916 amounted to 15,037 dozens and those taken in Del Norte and Humboldt counties during the same season, 5,114 dozens.

Crabs, we believe, are adequately protected by the present law, under which the marketing or possession of female crabs or the marketing or possession of any male crab under seven inches in width is prohibited and a closed season is provided from July 31st to November 14th. With this protection there can be no serious depletion of the crabs, for a sufficient amount of breeding stock is preserved and the fishing, no matter how intense, can not go beyond the limit of the natural annual increase of these crustaceans. The San Francisco fishery seems to have reached this limit and toward the end of the season the fishermen are not able to find enough legal crabs to supply the market. During the closed season that follows, the crabs cast their shells and increase their size about one-fourth, so that on the opening of the season on November 15th the legal sized male crabs are plentiful again.

The crab fishery in Monterey Bay has had a remarkable development. Only two or three years ago there were so few crabs in that bay that it did not pay to fish for them. During the last open season, as will be seen from the figures above, over 15,000 dozens were taken. In contrast to this is the crab fishery of Humboldt County which produced less than one-third this amount. The reason for this is not the scarcity of crabs, but the fact that there is a county ordinance prohibiting the shipment of crabs out of Humboldt County. As already stated, our present state laws adequately protect the crabs, and to prohibit shipment from the county gives the crabs more protection than they need and prevents the development of a valuable industry. Under this restriction the crabs are extremely abundant and of large size, one-fourth of those caught running over eight inches in width. The fishermen instead of getting $2.00 per dozen, as do the San Francisco fishermen, get less than $1.00 per dozen. It is estimated that this fishery could supply annually at least 30,000 dozen crabs, for which the fishermen would receive $60,000, if they were given access to outside markets, instead of less than $5,000 as at present.

Shrimp.

Shrimp fishing by means of Chinese nets was resumed in 1915 in District No. 13, set off for the shrimp fishermen in the south end of San Francisco Bay. The use of Chinese shrimp nets was prohibited by law in 1911 at which time the annual catch of shrimp was near ten million pounds. Of this amount a little less than one million pounds was used in the markets of the state, the remaining 90 per cent being dried and shipped to China. In the four years following the enactment of this law no other successful method of catching shrimp was devised and most of the time shrimps were not to be found in the markets. In redividing the state into fish and game districts it was possible to set aside the south end of San Francisco Bay for the use of the Chinese nets, where it had been shown that the number of young edible fish destroyed by them was not large in comparison with the former destruction in other parts of the bay. Since the Chinese began operating last fall three or four boats have fished intermittently and the total catch is running about 350,000 pounds per year, which is but little over a third of what the markets took before fishing was stopped in 1911. The boats fish now only when the tides are most favorable and when the shrimps are plentiful. It does not pay them, they say, to fish when the catches are small. Formerly the profit was principally in the dried shrimps and the larger ones were screened out and sold fresh as a side issue. The price obtained now for the fresh shrimps is the same as then—6 and 7 cents per pound—although the operating cost is much greater on account of drying operations being cut off.

Kelp.

The cutting of kelp along our coast for the potash contained therein is a new and very large industry which has sprung up within the last two years. The immense beds or groves of kelp are all within three miles of the shore and come under the jurisdiction of the state. At the 1914-1915 session of the legislature the State Fish and Game Commission was given the same supervision over the kelp and other marine plants that it has over the fish and game, so that it will be the duty of the Fish and Game Commission to enforce any state laws that may be passed for the regulation or conservation of the kelp industry.

It has long been known that the kelp along the Pacific coast contained a high percentage of potash. Considerable experimenting has been done to find methods of gathering the kelp and extracting the potash and other by-products that are commercially profitable.

Fig. 58. A fish reduction plant for the manufacture of fertilizer, and a kelp reduction plant, at Long Beach. Photographs by H. B. Nidever.

The main source of our potash supply has been Germany, where deposits in what were ancient lakes or seas are found. The United States Department of Agriculture, realizing the importance of having a source of supply of our own and wishing to encourage the greater use of potash as a fertilizer to increase our crops, started an investigation of our kelp beds and conducted experiments in extracting the potash. The results of these investigations are to be found in Report No. 100 of the United States Department of Agriculture.

The beds of kelp which can be profitably harvested in California are all of them along the southern coast of the state, mostly south of Point Concepcion. Immense beds are also found along the peninsula of Lower California in Mexican waters.

The kelp is very largely composed of water and to profitably extract the potash large quantities will have to be handled. It requires a great outlay of capital for a company to embark in the enterprise. The high price of potash caused by the war has been such an inducement that several large companies have built plants at Long Beach and San Diego and are now beginning to harvest the kelp, confident that there is a sufficient supply, even though many may engage in the same industry.

At the present time there are four companies operating at San Diego, five at Long Beach and one near Wilmington. There are also several other factories being constructed at San Diego and Long Beach. Already three million dollars has been invested in the plants in southern California. Sixteen large reapers are employed, which have an average capacity of 200 tons each per day. The larger of the companies now operating are: The Hercules Powder Company, at National City; Swift Packing Company, San Diego; American Products Company, Long Beach; and The Diamond Match Company, at Wilmington.

There has been considerable uneasiness as to what effect the cutting of kelp will have on the fisheries of the state. Many fear that the cutting will destroy the beds and thus the protection which the kelp affords the beaches will be removed and that the clams which inhabit the beaches and the spiny lobsters which live more or less within the protection of the kelp will be greatly injured. Also that the young fish, especially the young barracuda, which are in the habit of seeking a refuge in the kelp, will be deprived of this refuge and will leave that part of the coast. It is also believed by many that the kelp beds are extensively used as spawning places for many of our commercial fish; that they attach their eggs to the kelp and that if the kelp is removed these eggs will be destroyed.

These beliefs are almost entirely groundless. Members of the Scripps Institution for Biological Research at La Jolla, employed by the government in its kelp investigations, are still engaged in watching the effect of cutting by the several large companies located there. It is their opinion that these companies are not likely, at least within the next several years, to devise kelp cutters or reapers which will cut the kelp more than six feet below the surface of the water. It has been observed that after one of these reapers has passed over a bed cutting the kelp to a depth of six feet that the kelp floats to the surface and it is difficult to even tell where the cutter has been. At the worst, there will be much of the kelp, especially along the edges of the beds, that will not be touched and which will afford protection to the beaches. It has been pointed out that where great masses of kelp grow in beds a violent storm detaches the plants from their holdfasts and the whole mass is carried away, thus leaving the beach unprotected. It is believed that where beds have been subjected to cutting that they will not be washed out by storms and will be a better protection to the beaches. Further, the kelp will still be a refuge for fish, even if it is cut six feet below the surface. It will also be a refuge for crawfish. Few or none of our commercial fishes spawn in the kelp beds.

The species of kelp which is being harvested in California is the Macrocystis pyrifera, which grows in long strands, from one to three hundred feet in length, and is held to the rocky bottom by means of a holdfast. The leaves float out on the surface of the water and are held suspended by floats specially designed for the purpose. The plants reproduce by spores, which lodge at the bottom, and start new plants, and also by stooling or sending off branches from the stock near the holdfast. If the top end of a plant is cut off, the rest of that particular stalk ceases to grow, but the shorter branches, which are continually arising from the base, soon grow up and take its place. Experiments are now being conducted at La Jolla for the purpose of determining the rate of growth of these plants and it is believed that the cutting of the kelp near the surface will tend to make them stool so that the growth will be increased by the cutting.

The companies engaged in the cutting of kelp are all large companies of proved business integrity and it is to their advantage not to destroy the kelp beds, but to conserve them and cut them only as fast as they will reproduce themselves.

It is the desire of the federal government that the state enact laws under which kelp beds may be leased or apportioned to operating companies and under such regulations that the beds will furnish continuous crops.

It was believed by those who investigated the California beds under the direction of the United States Department of Agriculture that there was enough kelp from Point Concepcion to the Mexican line to supply annually, without injury to the beds, all the potash used in the United States. The amount used annually before the great war cut off the supply from Germany was 300,000 tons, which, at antewar prices, was worth $15,000,000. The cutting has now progressed until a few of the beds have been cut over once and it has been determined that they are not producing the quantity estimated in the survey. This shortage may be as much as 50 per cent. It is believed that one reason of this is that since the survey was made storms have reduced the beds and they have not yet had time to reestablish themselves. The kelp harvesters or reapers that so far have been devised fail to pick up much of the kelp that is cut. This fault is overcome to a certain extent where one reaper follows the other and picks up what is left. There has been a good deal of complaint that the reapers cause large quantities of kelp to drift onto the beaches, where it smells badly and causes flies to accumulate. In most cases where an investigation was made, the kelp on the beaches was made up of the whole plants which had been torn from the bottom by the high tides and rough water. However, the whole kelp problem needs to be thoroughly investigated and in the meantime such regulatory laws as are obviously necessary should be passed.

OUR UNDEVELOPED FISHERY RESOURCES.

With few exceptions our sea fisheries have not been developed to their full capacity. By proper conservation they can be greatly extended. The fisheries can be more readily developed by educating the public in the use of fish and by improving the methods of handling, especially in inland towns. This work properly belongs to the State Commission Market, but we expect to assist by getting out educational bulletins containing descriptions of the different varieties of fish, how and where they are caught and when they are in season, with recipes for cooking. In other words, to develop the fisheries and reduce the cost of fish by creating a greater demand. This has been done in a few instances by private parties, as in the case of the California sardine and the albacore.

Fig. 59. Unloading and sorting abalones at Monterey. Photographs by H. B. Nidever.

There was no demand for either of these fish until they were placed before the public in a clean and appetizing form and the public educated to their use by advertising. Within a period of five years these two fish sprang from unimportance to a position of the highest rank. The albacore has assumed first place among our fisheries and the sardine is crowding the salmon for second place. What has been done with these two fish by private parties can in a measure be done with others with encouragement and assistance from the state. It is more properly the duty of the state to investigate and develop its fisheries than it is to investigate and develop its agricultural resources, for the fish are peculiarly the property of the people. We have several species of good food fish in almost unlimited numbers which are little used. A few of the important ones are the herring, anchovy, hake, shark and squid.

Our shell fisheries are neglected and if properly conserved may be greatly extended. We have many extensive sand beaches where the Pismo and razor clams will flourish if they be but planted there. The soft-shell mud clam, originally introduced from the Atlantic coast, is suited to many bays and mud flats where it has not yet been introduced. On the Atlantic coast great advances have been made in "farming" the soft-shell clams and they are being raised on beds where they do not naturally establish themselves, by removing the young "spat" from beds where a good "set" has been made and sowing them like grain on these barren beds. The production of clams can be increased by this method almost without limit. As there is a most excellent market for these clams such an increase in production would be very desirable. In order to raise clams, or oysters for that matter, it is necessary to protect the beds from the depredations of the sting-rays with stake fences. No advance can be made in the cultivation of clams unless individual fishermen can control their own beds. The law on the subject should be thoroughly investigated to see if it is not possible under the Fish and Game Districting Act, or otherwise, to apportion beds to fishermen.

Recent great advances in oyster culture in the state of Washington make it certain that similar progress can be made here. Our production of oysters should be on the increase instead of remaining at a standstill. Our oyster and clam resources need to be thoroughly investigated by an expert and the ways and means pointed out for developing this neglected industry. Over 25 years ago C. H. Townsend made a report on the oyster resources of California for the United States Bureau of Fisheries. This report may be found in the 1893 report of the United States Commissioner of Fisheries. It was the result of a preliminary scientific survey of our oyster resources and the author was decidedly of the opinion that our oyster production could be greatly increased, and, even at that early time, complained of the antiquated methods pursued in the industry. Since that time we have made little improvement and no oyster expert has since visited our oyster beds, although the Bureau of Fisheries has several such who have been of invaluable assistance to oyster growers on the Atlantic coast. This has not been a case of neglect, for the truth is we have not asked them to come, as the industry has not been awake to the importance of oyster investigation work.

We have a sea mussel that abounds along nearly our entire 1000 miles of coast, clinging to the rocks in compact masses. In many places it is extremely abundant. These mussels have a food value equal to that of oysters. They are most excellent when canned or pickled. They grow more rapidly than oysters and the weight of the shell compared with the meat is much less than in oysters. All that is lacking is an inclination on the part of the public to eat them. They are eaten extensively in Europe, where in many places they are cultivated on barriers set up for the purpose.

On our Atlantic coast there is a mussel almost identical to ours, for which the United States Bureau of Fisheries is at the present time endeavoring to create a demand. There is some difficulty on the Atlantic coast in inducing the public to eat the sea mussel, for the Indians for some reason shunned it, preferring the mud clam, of which there was plenty. On our coast there can not be this prejudice, for the Indians along our entire coast subsisted mainly on them. There is an almost unlimited supply of these mussels and if it becomes necessary the production can be increased. We have, besides the large sea mussel, two species of smaller mussels that are found in the quieter waters of the bays and in estuaries at the mouths of streams. These species are occasionally found in the markets. We expect to start an educational campaign to induce the people to make use of these valuable shellfish.

Recommendations.

We recommend that our system of taxing the fisheries be revised. Under the present system the revenue is derived from market fishermen's licenses, wholesale fish dealers' licenses and from fines imposed. The annual revenue from these licenses is about $40,000, which is not nearly adequate to cover the present expense of commercial fisheries patrol, propagation of commercial fishes and investigation work. A market fisherman now pays ten dollars a year and a wholesale fish dealer pays five dollars per year. Under this system the poorest clam digger pays double the license paid by the largest wholesale dealer or canner. The tax on dealers is ridiculously small, while ten dollars is too much for many of the fishermen. California is behind the other states and other countries in the matter of taxing its commercial fisheries and the main reason our fisheries have not advanced more rapidly is that the state has not had sufficient money for its commercial fisheries work. The system employed in Oregon, Washington and Alaska, as well as in most of the Atlantic states, is to tax the fishermen according to the apparatus they use and the canners, packers and wholesale dealers according to the amount of fish they handle, and where oyster and clam beds are controlled by individuals the beds are taxed according to their yield. This system is more just and equitable and will yield a larger revenue. With an increased revenue we could do much that at the present time we are not able to do. In southern California, which now leads in the importance of its commercial fisheries, we need at least two good seaworthy boats for patrol and investigation work. These boats should be equipped with hoists for the use of dredges, trawls and pelagic nets and each should have a man in its crew who has had sufficient scientific training to enable him to carry on investigation work under the direction of a competent central head. We need to complete the investigations begun on the spiny lobster and edible crab and to conduct experiments on propagating these two species as well as to propagate certain forms of marine fishes, the artificial propagation of which has been carried beyond this experimental stage in other places. We need to investigate and learn all we can of the habits and life history of the albacore and other commercial fishes, for we know little about any of them. Furthermore, we should have a thorough investigation of the kelp industry and of the effect of cutting the kelp beds. We need also a biological survey of our coast and of our streams and lakes. All of the above could be done and our commercial fisheries thereby be greatly benefited.

Respectfully submitted.

REPORT OF BUREAU OF EDUCATION, PUBLICITY AND RESEARCH.

The Honorable Board of Fish and Game Commissioners of the State of California.

GENTLEMEN: We have the honor to submit herewith the first biennial report of the Bureau of Education, Publicity and Research, covering the period from the institution of the bureau in September, 1914, to the end of the fiscal year 1915-16.

Organization.

At a called meeting held in San Francisco on July 5, 1914, your honorable board unanimously passed a resolution embodying the institution of educational and publicity work to be carried on by a suitable assistant who should be given the title of Game Expert and placed under civil service. In September, 1914, the present director assumed temporary charge of the new bureau and later qualified under civil service. A definite scheme of operation was immediately worked out and the bureau has followed in a general way the original plans laid down. The work accomplished has naturally been limited, owing to the fact that the duties fell upon one individual. An office was established at the Museum of Vertebrate Zoology at the University of California, where opportunities for undisturbed work and library and museum facilities were of the best. With the permission of your board the head of the bureau continued to hold a position with the University of California as Economic Ornithologist.

As the name of the bureau signifies, the work is of three kinds: education, publicity, and research. This report therefore will fall under these three headings.

Education.

Salisbury Wild Life Pictures. During the fall of 1914 the Fish and Game Commission cooperated in displaying throughout the state the Salisbury Wild Life Pictures. These films were obtained by E. A. Salisbury, director of the Educational Film Company of Los Angeles, in southern Oregon and northeastern California. In that the pictures illustrate the life histories of some of the common game birds and mammals of the state of California and vividly portrayed some of the fundamental aspects of wild life conservation, the commission felt justified in giving them support. For several weeks in the fall of 1914 the Director of the Bureau of Education, Publicity, and Research, traveled about the state giving lectures with these pictures and emphasizing wild life conservation. On a single trip alone in the San Joaquin Valley, over 10,000 people saw the pictures and heard the lectures.

The success of these films in eastern states and the comments upon them received from conservationists, have fully justified the effort made by the commission to place them before the people of this state.

Lectures. More than one hundred illustrated lectures have been given by this bureau in various parts of the state. These have advertised the wild life resources of California and have carried the message of conservation to farmers' organizations, women's clubs, Audubon societies, high schools, grammar schools, and boy scouts.

Fig. 61. Young mountain lions. From Salisbury's wild life pictures. (Courtesy Mr. E. A. Salisbury.)

A series of lectures was given during the spring semester of 1915 and again in 1916 in a course in advanced vertebrate zoology in the University of California, the students of which are prospective teachers. Several lectures were also given in a zoology course based largely upon the animal life of Berkeley and the Bay region. Through the cooperation of the forestry department of the University of California, a series of six lectures on game and game conservation was given during the spring semester of 1915 in a course on forest protection. These lectures reached many outsiders in addition to the fifty students registered in the course, for the series was open to the public. During the spring semester of 1916, a similar series of nine lectures was given before the 350 registered students in a course on general forestry and the many outsiders attracted by the publicity given the lectures. It is peculiarly fitting that forestry students in California should have a fundamental knowledge of wild life, for many of those entering forest service work in this state will become game wardens by virtue of their positions. The success of these series of lectures is in a measure due to Professor Walter Mulford, head of the Department of Forestry, who encouraged the institution of cooperative work, and to Dr. J. Grinnell, N. B. Scofield and T. I. Storer, each of whom assisted by giving one or more of the lectures. The results attained show that the subject of fish and game is of such general interest that a full course on fish and game given in the state university under the direction of the bureau would be productive of valuable results. With the incentive that such a course would give, many forestry students might become sufficiently interested to take up work as game wardens, and many university students would receive sufficient knowledge of game and game conditions to make of them valuable allies of game conservation.

Fig. 62. White pelican feeding young at Clear Lake, Modoc County. From Salisbury's wild life pictures. (Courtesy Mr. E. A. Salisbury.)

In helping to make the students of our state university more familiar with our fish and game resources, we believe that we are carrying on fundamental work which will show abundant results in the future. University students have the opportunity to leaven the public sentiment of this state as regards wild life conservation, as no other group of citizens.

Recognizing that the understanding and sympathy of the child is fundamental to the successful attainment of the conservation measures of the future, effort has been directed toward the stimulation of nature study in the public schools. It has been found that, although nature study is a compulsory subject in our public schools, there are few places in the state where any pretense of adequately teaching this subject is made. In order to demonstrate the possibilities involved in work of this kind, the Director of the Bureau of Education, Publicity, and Research, addressed a meeting of teachers, and conducted several field trips in Sacramento. Classes of fifth graders were taken to the city parks and to the outskirts of the city, and were taught the names and habits of the different forms of life encountered. Partly as a result of this endeavor, nature study and trips afield have been permanently established in the public schools of Sacramento. It is hoped that other cities will soon recognize the value of teaching children to "read a roadside as they read a book," and will institute similar work. The ultimate goal, of course, is to have nature study supervisors in every city in the state, each with planned courses of study which shall include field trips where children may learn to study wild life at first hand. To this end proper training of prospective teachers is fundamental. When teachers are asked to take up nature study they either complain that they have not had the training to fit them for the work, or that no material is available. The attempt therefore is being made to stimulate interest in this phase of education in our normal schools, universities, and colleges, and to furnish, in the form of leaflets and bulletins, material which will be useful to such teachers.

Outlines for courses of study in game resources and conservation methods have been prepared for women's clubs, boys' agricultural clubs and boy scout organizations. These will soon be available for distribution.

Boy scout cooperation—Believing that the boy scout is in a position to aid materially in the enforcement of fish and game laws and in the care and conservation of wild life, a cooperative arrangement has been instituted which will be of value to both the scouts and the commission. By cooperating with the commission the scout not only becomes a better citizen but prepares himself for the merit badge in conservation, requirements Nos. 2, 4 and 6 of the manual particularly specifying this kind of work.

Credit will be given boy scouts for the following types of work:

1. The dissemination of knowledge on the fish and game laws, the work of the California Fish and Game Commission, and on wild life conservation. (It would be of great aid to the commission if boy scouts would always take the opportunity to inform campers, hunters, and others with whom they come in contact, of the fish and game laws, warn them of their liability for violation of these laws, and report all violations to the nearest game warden.)

2. The finding and reporting of wild game which has been injured or destroyed in numbers either through natural or artificial means.

3. The systematic feeding of game during severe winters, or the encouragement of wild birds through feeding, the planting of cover, or the building of nest boxes.

4. The taking of a census of any one game species in a restricted area.

5. The destruction of predaceous animals injurious to wild life or the destruction of that worst of bird pests, the European house sparrow, usually called English sparrow.

In return for cooperation, the commission will award a prize (or prizes if necessary) of a pair of golden pheasants to the boy scout who does the most cooperative work. Scouts wishing to qualify for the above prizes are to report regularly on the work accomplished. If sufficient interest is shown in fish and game cooperative work a merit badge will be offered later by the commission.

To stimulate interest in this cooperative work and to interest scouts in game conservation a series of illustrated lectures and a series of field trips for the boy scouts in the Bay region is being planned.

Publications. The series of teachers' bulletins prepared by Miss Gretchen Libby while Educational Assistant of the Fish and Game Commission, have been in great demand, as has also her bulletin entitled "Bird study in the public schools," our supply of which is now exhausted. To augment the supply of printed matter for teachers, several articles have been published in CALIFORNIA FISH AND GAME designed mainly for their use, and teachers' bulletins No. 6, entitled, "Bats as Desirable Citizens," by J. Grinnell, and No. 7, entitled "The Control of the House Sparrow in California," by H. C. Bryant, have been added to the bulletin series for the use of teachers. The Bird and Arbor Day Manual for 1916, issued by the Superintendent of Public Instruction, contained several articles furnished by this bureau dealing with the wild life resources of the state, and with suggestions as to how these resources may be presented to pupils in the schools.

In order that those contributing to, and interested in, the conservation of wild life in California might receive direct information from the commission administering the wild life resources, the publication of a quarterly illustrated magazine entitled CALIFORNIA FISH AND GAME was begun. The motto chosen for the publication was "Conservation through education." The first number appeared in October, 1914. The October number, 1915, completed volume 1, a volume containing 261 pages and 58 illustrations. The departments regularly appearing were general articles, editorials, hatchery and fishery notes, conservation in other states, life history notes, wild life in relation to agriculture, and reports. The editor has taken pains to select only authentic contributions for publication and has eliminated as far as possible the imaginative and hearsay tales which so often appear in like periodicals. Such sentiments as the following have been editorially expressed in the magazine: the effectiveness of game preservation is governed by the interest of the people, and the spirit of those who hunt and fish; the recognition of scientific truths combined with a practical knowledge of the working of correct laws are essential things in the working of game administration; accurate statistical information is the one essential foundation upon which protective legislation must rest; nothing can be of more value to the cause of game protection at the present time than a systematic campaign of education conducted officially by the game department in every state in the Union. The second volume of CALIFORNIA FISH AND GAME, two numbers of which have already appeared, will surpass the first volume in the character of the illustrations and in the articles published. The periodical is sent to citizens of the state who make application, and to game departments and interested parties in other states. The demand for this publication has proved to be so great that the first editions numbering five thousand became inadequate, and later editions had to be materially increased. Nor does the information contained in CALIFORNIA FISH AND GAME reach only those to whom the magazine is sent; for newspapers regularly copy articles printed therein. More than seventy-five newspapers copied articles from the October, 1915, number.

Several public hearings have been held under the auspices of this bureau. Through meetings of this kind the commission is able to obtain an expression of public sentiment exceedingly valuable in the administration of game laws. Free discussion of the points at issue has in each instance resulted in a better understanding between the hunter and fisherman, and the commission (see Fig. 64).

Fig. 64. Interested listeners at a hearing on salmon and trout, held at Santa Rosa, February 9, 1916. Photograph by H. C. Bryant.

Publicity.

The bureau has relied largely on CALIFORNIA FISH AND GAME as a medium of publicity, but further efforts to gain publicity for the state's game resources and the work of the commission have been made. A series of twenty articles on "California Game Resources" was furnished the San Francisco Call and Post. This series dealt with various game fishes, birds, and mammals of California and the distribution, recognition marks, habits, status, and value of each for food and sport, was given. This series of articles was simultaneously published in the Los Angeles Herald and subsequently in about twenty other newspapers. The bureau stands ready to furnish any other newspaper with a similar series of articles. The bureau has also kept in touch with such central news agencies as the Associated Press and United Press, and numerous mimeographed news letters have been sent to all of the newspapers of the state. Evidence of the effectiveness of the news-letter plan of publicity is evident from the results of the campaign against the English sparrow. A news-letter giving details of the contemplated control of the sparrow sent to each newspaper resulted in the appearance of the item in more than 180 different newspapers. A follow-up news-letter on the same subject was also widely used. In many instances photographs and cuts have been loaned to newspapers and magazines.

This plan of conducting newspaper publicity by gathering and sending out news items from a central office is undoubtedly the most effective and desirable method of gaining publicity, and should be more largely followed in the future. Its advantages are that it allows of a wider circulation of the publicity item and of a closer and wiser censorship than is otherwise possible.

Research.

Careful attention has been given to the gathering and filing for reference of data on the game birds and mammals of the state. Many letters asking for information have been sent out and the district offices have cooperated by sending in useful information. The most detailed reports so obtained have been on the mourning dove, ring-necked pheasant, and beaver. A collection of photographs is also being accumulated. As a result, the bureau in time will have in its possession an invaluable photographic record of the present status of game and of the work of the Fish and Game Commission.

An attempt to increase interest in the fur-bearing mammals of the state has been made in the study of the fur trade in California, published under the title, "California's Fur-bearing Mammals." An historical survey demonstrated the decreasing worth of a once valuable resource, and the great need for legislation which will give complete protection to certain species and protection to all fur-bearers during the time when their fur is of no value. If the state of California wishes to conserve her fur resources, make them a source of income, and a heritage to pass on to future generations, she must fall in line with other states and better protect fur-bearing mammals.

A tabulation of the number of deer killed in the open seasons of 1914 and 1915 has been made. The reports of deputies and of forest officers showed that a total of 8,699 deer were known to have been killed during 1914, and a total of 8,343 in 1915. The fact that many deer killed are not reported by deputies and forest officers leads to the conclusion that at least 12,000 deer were killed during the open season of each of these years.

An attempt to obtain information in regard to hunting accidents in the open season of 1915 showed eight men to have been killed because they were mistaken for game, nine men to have been severely wounded, and seven to have been killed by the accidental discharge of a gun while hunting. The reports of accidents were necessarily incomplete, but they were sufficient to vividly show the criminal carelessness exhibited during each hunting season. It is important that the hunting fraternity understand that there is nothing accidental in the results attained when an object, the identity of which is in doubt, is fired upon.

In furtherance of the investigation of the food habits of nongame birds instituted in 1911, a study of the food of the roadrunner has been completed and a full report is in press. Eighty-three stomachs were examined and the contents identified. The results of the investigation have not sustained the oft-repeated accusation that the roadrunner is a destroyer of the eggs and young of valley quail. Although young birds are occasionally taken as food, there is no evidence that quail are preyed upon to the exclusion of other small song-birds. (See Fig. 66.) The bulk of the food of the roadrunner is made up of insects, especially beetles, grasshoppers, crickets and caterpillars. Lizards and snakes and mice comprise the larger part of the vertebrate food taken, but small birds are sometimes eaten (see Fig. 66). One outstanding feature of the diet of the birds examined was the preponderance of one kind of vegetable food—the fruit and seeds of the sourberry, Rhus integrifolia. Large numbers of cicadas and several scorpions had been eaten by the birds. The roadrunner's relationship to the cuckoos is emphasized by its fondness for hairy caterpillars, many of which had been eaten. The lack of evidence as to the roadrunner's attacks on valley quail, plus the benefits conferred by it in the destruction of insect and rodent pests, plus its esthetic value, leave a balance distinctly in favor of the bird and make it a beneficial rather than an injurious species.

Fig. 65. A Blainville horned toad taken from the stomach of a roadrunner. Photograph by H. C. Bryant.

A study is being made of the food of ducks in this state, with a view to the increase of the available food supply by artificial plantings and the furnishing of a means of attracting waterfowl. A large number of duck stomachs is at hand and many of these have already been examined and the contents of each recorded.

A study is also being made of attempts to acclimatize foreign game birds in California, with a view of discovering the reasons for success and failure, and of what may be expected from future trials. After a review of the history of the introduction of exotic species, it is quite evident that the results have not been proportionate to the money and energy expended. Two of the principal causes of failure appear to be the lack of careful investigation of the inherent factors limiting acclimatization and of the method of liberation. The successful establishment of a species has been found to be possible under favorable conditions, and ultimate success in acclimatizing foreign species therefore lies in careful experimentation. But though acclimatizing game birds is a possibility, it is an open question whether it is desirable to supplant native species with foreign ones. The native fauna is usually the most desirable, and the result of our finding seems to show that California should take a stand with other states in protecting her native game rather than attempting the introduction of foreign species. The valley quail is a better game bird than the pheasant or any other foreign species. Concentration on methods of conserving this bird is, therefore, more important than futile attempts at acclimatization. In the increasing stocking experiments carried on by individuals great encouragement may be found. Many people now successfully propagate quail in captivity and liberate the increase.

The present status of the beaver in California, according to data gathered in this office, is precarious. Colonies of this valuable fur-bearer are few at the present time, and give promise of becoming even more scarce. The Hudson Bay Company, when operating in California, beginning in 1828, secured thousands of beaver skins each year, and thereafter considerable numbers were taken each year by trappers. Since 1911, however, it has been necessary to give total protection to this animal, but even thus protected beavers do not seem to have increased to any considerable extent. The few scattered localities in which colonies are now to be found are shown on the accompanying map (Fig. 67). In the San Joaquin and Sacramento river basins, where beaver are most abundant, reclamation projects are fast driving them to starvation, or to more limited quarters. The total extirpation of the beaver in California is not far distant unless further measures are taken for its protection. The bureau plans to show the present status of many other game birds and mammals by means of distribution maps similar to that giving the distribution of beaver.

Considerable complaint that blackbirds damage rice has been received by the commission. Investigations show that the complaints are well founded. Some sort of control measures should be instituted and further investigations leading to the discovery of some practical method of meeting the situation are planned.

The chief forest deputies of the national forests of this state report annually to the commission the game conditions in their districts. These reports afford much valuable information on the life history and status of the various species of game birds and mammals. Such items as demanded immediate attention have been investigated, and much of the information contained in the reports has been utilized.

A book on the game birds of California, in preparation under the auspices of the University of California Museum of Vertebrate Zoology, under the joint authorship of Dr. Joseph Grinnell, the director of this bureau, and Mr. T. I. Storer, is almost ready for the press. Although the routine work of the bureau has precluded continuous participation in the preparation of the manuscript during the past two years, all available spare time has been given to a furtherance of the project.

In addition to introductory chapters dealing with problems allied to the game birds of the state, full discussion of the distribution, life history and habits of every species of game bird found in California will be given, and the whole will be profusely illustrated. Whether the book is published by the Fish and Game Commission, or under other auspices, it should meet a long-felt need in that it will be serviceable to both the technical and nontechnical student, and will be useful as a sportsman's handbook.

In addition to the above researches, there have been a number of field investigations. The condition of the duck breeding grounds in the vicinity of Los Banos, Merced County, and Alvarado, Alameda County, were studied in 1915, with a view to determine the productive capacity of a given area of swamp land. A nesting colony of egrets near Crows Landing, Stanislaus County, was visited, as were also beaver colonies at Mendota, Fresno County.

The above have been some of the outstanding features of the many activities of this new bureau. In conclusion, we believe that the Bureau of Education, Publicity and Research, has justified its existence by its accumulation and output of accurate information regarding the wild life resources of California, and that a further expansion of the work would promote the interests of wild life and of the commission concerned with its conservation.

Respectively submitted.

REPORT OF THE LEGAL DEPARTMENT.

To the Honorable Board of Fish and Game Commissioners

GENTLEMEN: I herewith submit to you a report of the work of the legal department of the commission for two years, ending June 30, 1916.

During this biennial period there have been many interesting legal matters which have come up in the work of the Fish and Game Commission. The period has been marked by the greatest number of cases ever made by the deputies of the Fish and Game Commission in any similar period of time. There has been more active help and cooperation from citizens than at any time in the past. In former years, it was practically certain that when a violator demanded a jury trial he would be acquitted, but at present in most parts of the state the chances are not greatly in his favor. In many instances jury trials have been won where the evidence was far from conclusive.

In July, 1914, in the District Court of Appeals in Los Angeles County, the case of People vs. Mascola came up on appeal. The attorney for Mascola contended that the Districting Act, which had been passed by the legislature in conformity with the constitutional amendment of 1902, was unconstitutional in that it prohibited the people of certain sections from doing that which was allowed in other sections. In the decisions handed down by the court the contention of the appellant was overruled but the title of the Districting Act of 1913 was declared faulty, and the act was set aside. In the decision it was also noted that laws must apply uniformly over each district and that it was not constitutional to except certain sections within the district. On account of this decision it was necessary to revise the Districting Act and to change many of the laws on the statutes. This was done at the 1915 session of the legislature.

One of the most difficult problems, and also one of the most important, that comes before the Fish and Game Commission is compelling canal owners to maintain fish screens in irrigating ditches and to construct and maintain fish ladders over dams. In many instances long and bitter litigation has been carried out.

Before fish screens that would operate under all conditions had been perfected, it was practically impossible to compel the installation and maintenance of screens. At the present time, however, screens have been developed that will operate under any and all conditions and there is not a canal in the state in which it would be impossible to maintain a proper screen.

During November, 1915, the canal companies owned or controlled by the Fresno Canal and Irrigation Company were notified that they would be required to screen their ditches in such a way that all fish life would be prevented from passing into the canals. After notice was given the companies through their attorneys, they demanded a hearing, as provided by the statute passed by the legislature in 1915. Hearings were held in Fresno during January of this year. The testimony showed that great numbers of fish found their way through the canals and were destroyed. Upon the evidence introduced at this hearing, the commission ordered the companies to install screens in the Fresno ditch, Riverdale ditch, Kings River ditch, the Fresno Canal Company's ditch, Consolidated Canal Company's ditch and the Fresno Canal and Irrigation Company's canal. The companies failed to conform with this order and complaints were sworn to in the Justice's Court of Fresno County, and are now pending.

Numerous hearings have been held under the provisions of the sections of the code relating to screens and fish ladders. In the majority of instances entirely satisfactory conclusions have been reached without it being necessary to resort to the courts.

In March, 1915, John C. Robbins, of Tehama County, an unsalaried deputy of the Fish and Game Commission, was arrested by Forest Ranger Harvey Abbey for killing deer during the closed season. Robbins demanded a jury trial, but was convicted and fined $150 by Justice Lennon of Red Bluff. The District Court of Appeals was asked for a writ of habeas corpus questioning the validity of the judgment of the Justice. The writ was denied and the judgment of the Justice's Court affirmed.

In April, 1915, Fred W. Robins, another unsalaried deputy, living in Santa Clara County, was arrested for angling without a license. He demanded a jury trial before Justice Simpson of Almaden; was convicted and sentenced to a fine of $50 and to serve ten days in jail. He appealed to the Superior Court, but this higher court affirmed the judgment of the lower court.

From time to time in the past it has been reported to the Fish and Game Commission that considerable numbers of striped bass were being shipped to various points outside of the state, in violation of the state law prohibiting the export of striped bass. In March, 1916, very reliable information was received and one of the deputies of the Fish and Game Commission was sent to Salt Lake to make an investigation. As a result of his investigations, A. Paladini was arrested on a number of charges and was convicted in the Police Courts of San Francisco, being fined $100. An appeal was taken and the case is still pending. At the same time a number of other charges were filed against Paladini. These are being held subject to the appeal in the case mentioned.

In November, 1914, Deputy George J. Rodolph, while engaged in patrol duties in the vicinity of Los Banos, attempted to arrest Len Cisco and Earl Farnsworth for violation of section 626*n*. Cisco and Farnsworth resisted arrest and Rodolph was shot in the back after Farnsworth had been wounded by him. Rodolph died almost instantly. Both Cisco and Farnsworth were charged with murder. Cisco was discharged at the preliminary examination and Farnsworth held for the murder. He was tried in Merced in June and was acquitted by a jury. In our judgment the verdict was a gross miscarriage of justice. Rodolph sacrificed his life in the service of the state and should be enrolled among those to whom the state owes all honor.

During the early summer of 1915, the H. N. Welch Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the state of Utah, made several shipments of trout from Salt Lake City, Utah, to Los Angeles, that were not in accordance with the laws of the state of California. These shipments were seized by deputies of the commission. The Utah Company brought suit against the Fish and Game Commission in the United States District Court at Los Angeles and asked for an injunction restraining the commission from interfering in any way with shipments of trout, contending that the act was unconstitutional, citing numerous authorities in support of their contention. In June their motion for a temporary injunction was argued and denied. Later in the same month the whole action was dismissed. It was said that the Welch company would appeal to the Supreme Court, but this was never done.

This case was one of the most important that has come up in the history of the commission. If the complainants had been upheld in their contention, it would have been the most severe blow that could have been given to the game interests of the state, as it would have been necessary for the Fish and Game Commission to prove in every instance that the game or fish possessed unlawfully was not brought from without the state.

A number of prosecutions have been begun against oil and gas companies for polluting the public waters of the state and in almost all instances the evil has been remedied by the companies. In cooperating with the commission, companies have installed the latest devices to prevent future pollution.

This department has given many decisions interpreting the fish and game laws of the state, and has written hundreds of letters answering inquiries regarding the construction of the fish and game laws.

During the two fiscal years just ended, the number of arrests was 2,087 and the number of convictions 1,747, or $83\frac{7}{10}$ per cent convictions. The per centage of convictions for fish and game violations is higher than any other class of cases of like degree. In all instances of criminal violations of a particular class the imposition of punishment is measured by the sentiment of the people toward the enforcement of that particular class of laws. The large percentage of convictions in fish and game violations indicates most strongly the growing sentiment of the people toward conservation of the fish and game of this state and their strong desire for the strict enforcement of the laws pertaining thereto.

In a large percentage of cases fines are imposed and in some instances jail sentences without any alternative are inflicted on violators, which shows the increased cooperation between the commission and the justices of the peace in the enforcement of the fish and game laws.

Respectfully submitted.

Attorney for the Board.

REPORT OF FIELD AGENT.

The Honorable Board of Fish and Game Commissioners of the State of California.

SIRS: With the closing of the fourth administrative district office, March 1, 1916, your honorable board established the former head of the Fresno Division in the position of Field Agent. The prescribed duties of the Field Agent were to represent the commission throughout the state, to correctly inform the commission of conditions affecting the fish and game interests in every portion of the state, and to supervise, in an advisory capacity, the activities of the deputies. It was believed that a Field Agent in circulating among the deputies would be of much assistance to them in solving their individual problems, in explaining the various rules and regulations of the board, and in bringing about a universal standard of efficiency throughout every section of the state.

The idea has been welcomed by the field force. Many deputies stationed in territory far removed from district offices have had small opportunity for receiving training and instruction as to how to satisfactorily comply with the rules and regulations regarding operations of field deputies. Very naturally, many problems arise in the daily life of the deputies which they find hard to solve according to the ideals of the commission, and to be able to confer on the ground with some official who can speak authoritatively, appeals to the deputies as a valuable privilege.

The general public too, apparently enjoys presenting its ideas to some one who can inform them of the commission's attitude and who, in turn, will directly carry the views of the public to the commissioners.

Among the investigations carried on have been the following: A market fisherman at Redding had been using a set-line for several years and had successfully defied the efforts of the commission to suppress his operations. A warrant was secured from the district attorney and the violator is now under bond. Oil pollution of the Sacramento River near Dunsmuir was investigated. Certain license matters have been adjusted with county clerks. Many forest service headquarters have been visited and the friendship existing between the Forest Service and the Fish and Game Commission cemented and better cooperative working conditions promoted. The commission has been officially represented at the meeting of the County Supervisors Convention, held at Redding, the Fresno Commercial Club and at several other conventions. Assistance has been given the Fresno Playgrounds Commission in the attempt to secure from the Forest Service permission to secure a playground site at Huntington Lake in the mountains of Fresno County. The initial plans of the Playgrounds Commission involve the taking of 5000 children into the high mountains annually. Furthermore, the Fish and Game Commission has been invited to instruct the children at the camp regarding wild life conservation.

A large section of the state has been covered, people met, complaints heard and information given regarding the activities of the commission.

The activities of the commission have been given publicity through a weekly column which has been edited in the San Francisco Bulletin.

The best work we have done, so far as we can judge, has been among the outside deputies. Their various problems have been solved or at least explained so that they can work independently. Each deputy with whom we have come in contact has been studied and an effort made to make him more useful to the state. The men all seem to be well pleased at the new order of things and they have gladly laid all their problems before us and have received our instructions with every evidence of appreciation.

It is the almost universal rule that the field deputies of this commission are very anxious to get results and to live up to the standards which the commission has set for them. The average deputy finds it hard to comply with various orders sent out by the head office in the manner expected by the commission. In justice to the deputies, account should be taken of the fact that the average patrolman who is in the field all day and has his mind upon his next day's work during his waking hours, is not in a position to do good work in the way of making reports and complying accurately with some of the orders sent to him. As a matter of fact, he often has small time to seriously study some orders which are to him a little unusual. We have been of material assistance to the fieldmen in showing them how to comply with such instructions.

Very naturally, the scope and importance of the work of the Field Agent will be enlarged and the value of the results accomplished can be judged to better advantage after the work has been under way a longer period of time.

Respectfully submitted.

(Signed) A. D. FERGUSON,
Field Agent.

REPORT OF SUPERINTENDENT OF STATE GAME FARM.

The Honorable Board of Fish and Game Commissioners.

GENTLEMEN: For the past two years the commission has been on the verge of abandoning the Game Farm. Difficulties with the owner of the land upon which the Game Farm is located, the fact that the commission feels that sufficient attempts to stock the state with pheasants have been made, and the general unfitness of the location for the work, each have contributed to this situation.

Fig. 68. Exhibit of State Game Farm at Children's Pets Exhibition, held at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, 1915. Photograph by Cardinell-Vincent Company.

Being unable to satisfactorily terminate the lease in 1915, your board decided to maintain the farm as an experimental station, devoting energy to the rearing of game indigenous to the state, such as valley quail, ducks and deer. Working under the above handicap, we have been unable to attain results which could have been attained under more favorable circumstances. Beginning with the fiscal year 1916, the surplus stock will be offered to breeders. Thus it is intended to make the Game Farm in a measure self-supporting.

Pheasants.

During the season of 1915, we had poor success with pheasants. Whereas a few broods did well and matured into fine birds, others were weaklings, more than half of which died during the first ten days. We can advance no reason for this, as the birds were hatched from the same parent stock. For example, we brooded two lots of chicks side by side on a grass plot, each brood being hatched twelve days apart from eggs laid by the same birds. Each lot was given the same attention, like food, and brooded in identical outfits. Out of one lot of 192 we reared 157; out of the other of 265 we lost over 200. As the birds were forced to lay so many more eggs during an extended period in captivity than they do in the wild state, there may be times when the germ becomes weak. In view of the fact that this is one of the very few states, possibly the only one, that uses artificial brooders exclusively, we can not ascertain whether or not this result is due to the (artificial) methods used. However, from results obtained during former seasons when domestic hens were used for brooding, we feel safe in stating that, while there is room for improvement in our method, it will be more generally adopted as pheasant breeding progresses.

Feed.

During the 1915 season we devoted several hours each day to the preparation and grinding of food for the young birds, using green-stuff, such as lettuce, kale and beets, all of which was grown on the farm, together with cracked wheat, stale bread, hard-boiled eggs and cooked chopped meat. While the birds apparently relished this food, the results did not justify the time and energy expended.

During the 1916 season the birds were brooded on a lawn, thus affording them plenty of greens. Plain dry feed consisting of cracked wheat, cut oats with a sprinkling each of charcoal, ground green bone and oyster shell, which required practically no time to mix, was fed them. The birds appeared to do just as well on this dry mixture, which is more preferable, as it does not become stale and sour.

Exhibitions.

The commission has exhibited the birds from the Game Farm at various poultry shows and county fairs. This has been done for the purpose of advertising the activities of the commission in the propagation of game and to educate people regarding opportunities in the breeding of pheasants, ducks and other game birds, both for stocking and for food purposes. Much interest was developed by these exhibitions, especially by those which were held at the State Fair and the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. At the Exposition there were displayed several varieties of quail, pheasants and ducks, the exhibit occupying a floor space of 12 by 100 feet. From the keen interest displayed at this exhibit, there appears to be a wide field for work of this nature. It gives those interested in hunting an opportunity to realize the beauty and variety of wild life, at the same time creating a more generally intelligent understanding of the work of the commission.

Fig. 71. Ducklings and their foster-parents at State Game Farm. The ducklings were hatched from eggs collected in nearby marshes and from those deposited by captive ducks. Photograph by W. N. Dirks.

Breeding Stock.

The breeding stock at the Game Farm on July 1, 1916, was as follows:

Valley quail, including young stock-----	350
Mountain quail -----	15
Bobwhite quail -----	20
Golden pheasants, including young stock-----	17
Silver pheasants, including young stock-----	14
Ring-necked pheasants, including young stock-----	140
Ducks (13 species, including fulvous tree-ducks)-----	575
Geese (4 species)-----	9
Coots -----	10
Great blue heron-----	1
Total birds -----	1,151
Black-tailed deer -----	2
Mexican white-tailed deer-----	1
Total mammals -----	3

Time will show whether or not the efforts of the commission respecting the planting of pheasants has been worth while. That they are firmly established in some localities appears certain. In the Santa Clara Valley, for instance, it is not an uncommon sight to see two or three pheasants foraging in the fields along well-traveled roads. On April 4, 1916, Deputy I. L. Koppel and myself put up a total of 15 pheasants at different points between Coyote and Milpitas. Although parts of the Santa Clara Valley seem to meet the requirements of the birds, certain factors will probably prevent them from ever becoming overabundant. Being very partial to moist ground, pheasants choose alfalfa fields in which to nest. As nesting occurs at a time when the hay is being harvested, a great many nests are destroyed. Through the efforts of Deputy Koppel, the Game Farm obtained a number of eggs from destroyed nests. Thirteen eggs taken from a nest of seventeen on April 22, 1914, hatched on the 24th. Eleven birds were reared to maturity, although these eggs were five hours on the trip. During the season of 1916 a total of seventy eggs taken from nests destroyed while mowing hay were received at the Game Farm. This justifies the adoption of some feasible plan whereby more of the eggs from destroyed nests could be utilized.

Quail.

Quail are brooded and fed exactly the same as the pheasants, but there is no resort to bantams for incubating the eggs. While we have had very poor success in artificially incubating the pheasant eggs for the entire period, the result is quite the contrary with quail, 90 per cent of the fertile eggs often being hatched. As the quail chicks are very tiny, it is a problem to obtain a brooder that will afford them sufficient heat, especially during the night. All brooders are planned and made to meet the requirements of young chickens. As the quail are many times smaller, it follows that they are much farther away from the heat-giving device. With a coal oil brooder the flame can not, with safety, be carried high enough to supply sufficient heat to the quail three inches below the bulb of the thermometer, which is set to register the temperature suitable to the chicken. To partly offset this condition we have raised the floor with burlap padding, bringing the birds closer to the heater. Quail themselves can best care for the chicks, but they must be penned up in individual cages made of small mesh wire and not be disturbed in order to have them successfully raise their own broods. Since this method is expensive and but few birds can be reared, it is probable that rearing quail for the market will never become a paying proposition. The only feasible plan that presents itself to conserve this bird is to locate a game farm in natural quail territory, absolutely protect the birds, and when the increase warrants it, trap and ship them to depleted localities. The future existence of this very desirable bird demands that steps be taken toward this end in the near future.

Ducks.

From the modest number of three ducks, we have gradually accumulated, through trapping, taking eggs in the marshes and through the increase of our own stock, several hundred ducks. Fourteen varieties are represented which, with four varieties of geese and a number of coots, make an excellent collection of waterfowl. During the season of 1915 several mallard hens nested and successfully reared broods, taking the young ducks on the pond as soon as they were sufficiently dry. Our one cinnamon teal hen also nested and hatched nine young, but did not rear a single bird. During the present season, out of a total of twenty-six mallards nesting, the average of eggs was only five.

After several hens had lost their entire broods within a period of a few days, all of the eggs in the pens were gathered regularly and set in incubators. The ducklings were given to domestic hens to rear. If we had expected to operate this season necessary preparations would have been made for the proper handling of these birds. As it was, too many were confined together. One of the very peculiar features of these birds was brought out this past season when one shoveler out of a total of twenty hens that we have had for three years nested and hatched for the first time. None of the other species of ducks have nested. We have successfully retained several fulvous tree-ducks on the farm for the past two years. These birds have attracted a great deal of interest.

Deer.

Several black-tailed deer which were on the farm for a number of years were disposed of in the fall of 1912. Since that time two deer of the same species have been secured and have found a home on the farm. One of these, a spotted fawn, has been successfully reared on a bottle. A Mexican white-tailed deer fawn has been the only other addition to our stock of game mammals.

Respectfully submitted.

REPORT ON POLLUTION OF WATERS.

The Honorable Board of Fish and Game Commissioners.

GENTLEMEN: The importance of keeping our streams and bays free from substances injurious to fish is conceded by all. Fish have a sufficiently hard struggle for existence without man contributing additional difficulties in the form of injurious waste products. Furthermore, fish which might not suffer from contact with, or absorption of, such substances, may face starvation because the plankton upon which they feed has been destroyed by pollution. It can, therefore, be considered a signal victory that section 635 of the Penal Code was so amended at the last legislature that it now includes practically all sources of water pollution.

The most common sources of water pollution with which California has to contend are: refuse from wineries, wash-water containing leaves, rootlets, etc., from the beet sugar factories, lampblack and tar from gas plants, and fuel oils and sludge from steam vessels, refineries, and other industries which use oil as a fuel. The refuse from the wineries and beet sugar mills decomposes and ferments very rapidly after it is deposited in the water, forming carbonic acid gas which is deadly to fish life.

Particular attention has been paid to pollution by oil and lampblack. The problem confronts the gas companies of devising a rapid and continuous filtering system which will retain all of the lampblack and thus allow the water to return to the bay or stream perfectly clean. The magnitude of this undertaking will be better realized when it is understood that an average of twenty-two pounds of lampblack is produced to each thousand cubic feet of gas, and that San Francisco alone, during the month of January, 1916, manufactured 613,947,000 cubic feet of gas, and about 4000 tons of lampblack.

Fig. 76. Detail view of baffles of the Standard Oil Company plant at Richmond. The oil collects behind the baffles and is skimmed and pumped back into the separator. Photograph by A. M. Fairfield.

To meet this situation the Pacific Gas and Electric Company has, in the bay counties alone, spent not less than $100,000 during the last two years. The old system of settling pits, which required a large area to operate successfully, has been finally and definitely abandoned, and attention turned to newer devices. All known filters have been tried with more or less success. Straw filters were found to work very satisfactorily where the lampblack production does not exceed 5000 pounds per day, and a model filter of this type was installed in the Vallejo plant. In the larger plants this filter is too slow and expensive. A straw filter similar to the one at Vallejo, but of less capacity, is under construction at Napa.

The three best known types of mechanical filters for handling lampblack are the Oliver, the Kelley, and the Butters. All of these originally were devised for use in mining operations, but with some changes and improvements have been adapted for use with lampblack.

The Oliver filter, the most expensive and complicated, has proved the least satisfactory. One of this type is in operation at the Metropolitan plant of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company in San Francisco, and in Los Angeles, but it is unlikely that any future installations will be made.

Fig. 77. Superior type of straw filter of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company at Vallejo. Photograph by A. M. Fairfield.

The Kelley filter has passed the experimental trial successfully and a battery of three of the largest size has been ordered for use at Station "B" in Oakland. The cost will be $29,100.

The Butters filter has so far proved the most effective and economical device. Its low first cost, the economy of its maintenance, and its ability to discharge water absolutely free from lampblack, added to the fact that it can be made in any size from a unit of one or two leaves up to any number needed to handle the maximum lampblack output of any plant, makes it by far the most effective and popular installation.

Fig. 79. Kelley filter-press of Pacific Gas and Electric Company at Oakland. Butters filter at San Jose. Butters filter, Potrero plant of Pacific Gas and Electric Company at San Francisco. Butters filter at Oakland. Photographs by A. M. Fairfield.

This type was experimented upon, some changes and improvements effected, and the perfected and model installation made by the engineers of the Oakland plant of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company. Butters filters are now in use in Oakland, San Jose, San Francisco (Potrero plant), and Santa Rosa. The Pacific Gas and Electric Company plans to install this system also at San Rafael and Vallejo, and will in time use it in all plants making 200,000 cubic feet or more of gas per day. Butters "leaves" are also being used in the dewatering box of the Oliver filter at the Metropolitan plant of the same company in San Francisco. The Western States Gas and Electric Company has been advised that an adequate filter must be installed at its Stockton plant. They will, undoubtedly, choose the Butters filter, as being the most efficient and economical.

The leakage of oil into our waters is a serious source of danger to fish, and the efforts to avoid this danger entail the expenditure of large sums annually. Oil is most frequently discharged in the waters of California because of accident, due to the breaking of pipe line, or the bursting of a hose of a tank vessel being loaded or discharged. Such accidents are deplorable and often cause great damage. When the Standard Oil Tanker Bradford went aground on the San Francisco bar it was necessary to jettison 2000 barrels of oil in order to float the ship.

The Standard Oil Company at Richmond has spent over $105,000 in the construction of separators and canals to trap waste oils and sludge. Of this amount $50,000 has been expended during the last two years. The main separator is built of concrete, is 240 feet in length, 70 feet in width, and 22 feet in depth, handling 20,000,000 gallons of water and oil daily. Fifteen men are required to attend to the separators to skim oil and handle tidal gates. The monthly pay roll of these men is $1,500. In addition to the concrete trap there are about one and one-half miles of ditches, averaging thirty feet in width, equipped with baffles to catch any oil which might not otherwise be trapped. These ditches also handle the 10,000,000 gallons of water which pass through the asphalt plant daily. All valves on oil lines on the wharf are supplied with tubs to catch the drip, and loading hoses are drained into drums. The accumulation is then pumped back into the refinery.

The Union Oil Company has expended several thousand dollars in construction and repair work at the Oleum refinery, and contemplates further expenditures of some $25,000. The company plans to continue its work until satisfactory conditions are obtained.

The Shell Oil Company has built adequate oil traps at the new refinery at Martinez and no trouble from the disposal of waste oil is expected.

The Associated Oil Company has ample settling area for waste oils on its property at Avon and has experienced no difficulty in keeping such waste out of state waters. This company, as well as others, has agreed to notify the Fish and Game Commission immediately by telephone when accidents occur which result in the depositing of oil upon any waters, thus giving the commission an opportunity to make immediate investigation of the cause of such accident, and to estimate the probable damage.

The Southern Pacific Company has installed concrete traps 10 by 15 by 60 feet at San Luis Obispo, Watsonville Junction, San Jose, and San Francisco, and these are in successful operation. The San Francisco installation cost about $4,000, but we have been unable to ascertain the cost of the others. The Western Division has built two new traps in the West Oakland yards during the year past, at a cost of about $1,500, which they propose to enlarge to about four times the present area. The monthly pay roll of the trap tenders at present is $110.67.

Fig. 82. Pump for waste oil recovery in oil trap of the Southern Pacific at West Oakland.
Photograph by A. M. Fairfield.

Numerous analyses have been made of the discharges from the various chemical plants and the larger tanneries to determine whether or not they contain substances injurious to fish or plankton. This work has not been completed and we are not prepared, therefore, to submit a statement or opinion. Beginning July 1, 1916, the work of investigation and prevention of water pollution will be under the supervision of W. H. Shebley, Superintendent of Hatcheries, and will be handled under his direction throughout the state and without reference to districts.

Respectfully submitted.

REPORT OF SAN FRANCISCO DISTRICT OFFICE.

The Honorable Board of Fish and Game Commissioners:

GENTLEMEN: During the past two years fines totaling $23,785 were imposed upon 1169 violators arrested by the assistants working in the San Francisco Division. This excellent record shows well the support received from the magistrates before whom fish and game cases are tried.

For the most part, it can be said that throughout the entire division the assistants are receiving more help from people who believe in game conservation than ever before. This is because every one is beginning to realize that it is part of his duty to see that the laws made for game perpetuation are enforced and that it is up to him to assist the officers sworn to enforce the fish and game laws.

It is frequently asked why it is necessary for the commission to maintain a force of deputies in San Francisco, where there is no game. Although there is no hunting in San Francisco the results of the many violations occurring in the surrounding country are taken to San Francisco. During the past two years there were seized by the deputies in San Francisco, 4027 crabs, 6753 pounds of fish, 137 pounds of deer meat, 911 pounds of dried shrimp, and 6483 wild ducks and geese. All of this mass of fish and game had been taken or was held in violation of the law. During the same time, there were tried in the San Francisco police courts 132 game and fish cases. From this statement it will be seen by the reader that although there may be no living game in San Francisco there is a vast amount of illegal game held there during a year's time.

Game Conditions.

From the sportsman's point of view the coast region of California is particularly fortunate in having an extensive area of rough brush-covered land unsuited for agricultural purposes. On these lands the many varieties of native game have excellent cover and with the proper laws to protect and proper enforcement of these laws there will be an abundance of game for a long time to come.

There is no city of the size of San Francisco in the United States, or possibly in the world, that offers the same opportunities to the sportsman as does San Francisco. Within seventy-five miles of the thickly-settled bay region there are killed each year hundreds of deer and thousands of quail, doves, ducks and other small game. The best part of this, and the most encouraging, is the fact that under our present laws, with some slight changes, nearly all species will hold their own, if not increase.

Deer. There have never been game laws based upon more sound principles than the present acts relating to deer. The season in the coast region was changed at the last session of the legislature so that for the most part the killing of deer when the horns are in the soft velvet is prohibited.

With scarcely an exception the law giving protection to spiked bucks has been conceded by sportsmen to be one of the best that has ever been passed by our legislature. Young male deer are practically always found with the females. On account of this fact, and on account of the impossibility of telling the sexes apart, even at a short distance, it is essential that the hunter be most certain as to what he is shooting. There are, unfortunately, many careless hunters who shoot at the first sign of moving brush, with the result that frequently some other hunter is killed or dangerously wounded. This law compels the deer hunter to be certain of the character of the deer he is shooting and will, without doubt, save the lives of many of his fellow sportsmen. Reports show that the present year has been an excellent breeding season, as does with two fawns are the rule.

During the winter of 1915-1916 many deer were found dead in the northern coast counties. Investigations carried on by the commission did not reveal any new light on the cause of the deaths, but did confirm the belief that an abnormal number of internal parasites are probably largely responsible. It is possible that the deer are weakened on account of the severe winter weather and are unable to throw off the parasites. It is interesting to note that in no other part of the state has there ever been any epidemic of even minor importance among the deer. It is the intention of the commission to study these occasional epidemics and to endeavor to save the hundreds of deer that are lost each winter.

Quail. Quail have had an excellent summer. Young broods of both mountain and valley quail are seen commonly in the haunts frequented by these birds. Making the seasons during which both species can be taken the same has been of great benefit in this district. Very little complaint has been received on account of the later opening of the mountain quail season, for it is uniformly realized that the breeding season is the same and it is not right to kill the young birds before they are fully grown. Although there is a great difference in the plumage of the two species, there has been considerable confusion among hunters as to which species they were shooting. In certain instances, unintentional violations have occurred.

Waterfowl and Shore Birds. Duck shooting in the bay region was very poor during last year although there were many more ducks bred on the eastern side of the bay than usual. Shooting in all sections was below normal. Even in the San Joaquin Valley birds were not as abundant as in former years. The state law was changed at the last session of the legislature to conform with the Federal Migratory Bird Law, thus prohibiting shooting during the month of February. This, without doubt, has greatly increased the number of locally nesting ducks and will probably, during the coming fall, make good shooting in the early part of the season before the so-called "northern" birds arrive.

In the spring of 1916 there was a remarkable flight of jacksnipe in the Livermore Valley, Alameda County. Thousands of birds appeared and bag limits were the rule. In other sections this excellent game bird appeared in fair numbers. On account of the Federal Migratory Bird Law giving protection to all of the shore birds except the black-breasted and golden plover, greater and lesser yellowlegs and jacksnipe, and on account of the difficulty the average hunter has in identifying the different shore birds, it was recommended to the Department of Agriculture that all shore birds except the jacksnipe be included in the protected list. This has been done so that at present the only shore bird upon which there is an open season in California is the jacksnipe. Their open season is the same as that for ducks and geese.

Doves and Pigeons. There has been considerable increase in the number of doves on account of the delaying of the open season until September 1st. By that date most of the birds are through nesting and the young birds have reached a sufficient size so that they are able to look after themselves if the parents should be killed. It will take a number of years to bring the doves back to their former numbers, but if the present law is continued this will surely be accomplished.

Band-tailed pigeons have been reported in increasing numbers in many parts of the district and have been found nesting in sections where they were formerly not supposed to breed. The delayed protection given this species has, without doubt, added greatly to the number of birds and will mean their perpetuation as a game bird.

Introduced Game. Several years ago a small plant of wild turkeys was made in the western part of Sonoma County. It is claimed by parties living in that region that there are now several hundred birds thoroughly wild. Another plant, made in Humboldt County, is reported to have been almost as successful. If the birds in these sections continue to increase, all of the money expended by the commission in turkey experiments will have been well spent and by drawing on these regions turkeys can be secured for stocking other sections adapted to them.

Respectfully submitted.

REPORT OF SACRAMENTO DISTRICT OFFICE.

Administration.

The Honorable Board of Fish and Game Commissioners.

GENTLEMEN: In submitting a summary of the work of the Northern, or Sacramento District for the past two years, it may be pertinent to state that the district consists of twenty-three counties, as follows: Alpine, Amador, Butte, Calaveras, Colusa, El Dorado, Glenn, Lassen, Modoc, Nevada, Placer, Plumas, Sacramento, San Joaquin, Shasta, Sierra, Siskiyou, Sutter, Tehama, Trinity, Yolo, Yuba and a portion of Solano. Approximately 45,000 square miles of diversified territory are included, an area almost equal to that of the state of New York. The division office at Sacramento is under the able control of F. M. Newbert, for five years president of the Board of Fish and Game Commissioners. An office force of four is maintained and twenty-two deputies are under the direct supervision of this office. The location at the state capital increases the importance of the work of this district.

The district has approximately 14,500 miles of streams and about 400,000 acres of lakes, thus making it particularly rich in fishery resources. Practically all these bodies of water contain, or are capable of sustaining, edible fish life of many species. All of the large valley streams contain such choice fish as salmon, shad, black and striped bass, perch, sunfish, crappie and catfish, together with many other species, while the snow-fed mountain streams and lakes contain nearly all the known species of trout, both native and foreign. All the northern counties of the district contain game birds in abundance and possibly more waterfowl are to be found in this district than in all the rest of the state combined.

Development of Public Sentiment Favorable to Game Protection.

So successfully has public sentiment been developed that many of our people do not realize or see the necessity of a greater measure of conservation. Increased interest in the protection of fish and game has been very marked in the past few years. Residents and visitors are now beginning to realize what a great asset fish and game are to the community. In years past few arrests were made and it was almost impossible to secure a conviction by jury even in the face of strong and conclusive evidence. How different today! The commission now fearlessly submits the equity of the game laws to a judge or jury. Due to the steadily-growing belief of our best citizens that the fish and game laws are of equal value with other laws on our statute books, the commission and its officers receive the hearty cooperation of the county prosecutors and justices.

Game Refuges and Preserves.

The recently added area of a portion of the Trinity National Forest in Trinity County to the game refuges of our state is giving needed protection to many quail, grouse and other game birds and animals. Refuges are in reality natural game farms and are much better adapted to the propagation of game than all the artificial game farms taken together, for the reason that game artificially propagated and hand-fed is prone to become too confiding and when liberated falls an easy prey to both man and predatory animals. An ideal refuge for waterfowl could be established in central California, in Butte, Colusa, Sutter or Yuba counties. Such a refuge would pay 1000 per cent on the investment and insure the perpetuation of California's supply of ducks and geese and probably also the supply of many neighboring states. Unless something of this nature is done, and done soon, there will be an end to the once wonderful flight of geese and ducks through central California, for the increase of reclamation of swamp lands is destroying their breeding grounds. Very large percentages of several species of ducks nest and rear their young in the counties above named, because conditions of feed, water and safety make it to their liking. The banding together of a large number of northern California sportsmen to hold from reclamation 16,209 acres of land in Sutter, Butte and Colusa counties, is therefore to be commended. The withholding of these swamp lands also means much to the fishing industry, as the duck grounds adjacent to the Sacramento and Feather rivers are huge natural hatcheries for black and striped bass, catfish, and perch. The reclamation of these lands would mean to the ducks and shore birds what the reclamation of such lands has meant to the fish. The steady decline in the supply of many of our choicest food fishes can be laid to the reclamation of the huge inland region.

Fish Planting From Overflowed Areas.

As neither catfish, perch, black bass, crappie nor any of the sunfishes are propagated in our state hatchery at present, much of the replanting of these fish has been and must be made by saving them from overflowed areas in these districts.

In 1904 and 1905 the writer, assisted by the commission and the late Deputy Cross, stocked 318 streams and lakes with 1483 cans, or approximately 14,830 adult black bass, besides numerous other food fishes, with fish saved from overflowed areas in Sacramento, Yolo and Sutter counties. The majority of these fish were planted south of San Francisco. Further work of this character will be necessary this coming fall and winter (1916), owing to the high stage of water last season, which distributed these fish into the lowlands which later dry up.

Winter Feeding of Game.

According to statements of old residents, the winter of 1915-16 was perhaps the most severe ever experienced in the northern counties and consequently very destructive to bird and animal life, especially to mountain quail. While undoubtedly a large number of deer and mountain quail died from exposure or became the prey of predatory animals, the number reported was no doubt exaggerated. In Trinity, Modoc, Shasta, Plumas, El Dorado, Tehama, in fact, in all the mountain region, these birds were fed and cared for during the heavy snowfall last winter.

As soon as this district office was notified prompt action was taken by President Newbert to remedy the condition. Quantities of grain and hay were purchased by our deputies in the different districts. These men, being adepts in the use of snowshoes and skis, saved thousands of birds and animals by their prompt action. The small sum of $134.32 was spent by this office in the purchase of feed, but this sum does not represent the entire amount expended for this purpose. The game protective organizations in various counties acted quickly and in many instances relieved the situation before arrangements could be made by our deputies to purchase feed or reach the locality where game was in distress.

Deputy Ray O'Connor of Nevada County fed eleven bunches of quail and many deer. Deputy Cady of Susanville fed several hundred mountain quail and deer. He also killed over forty sharp-shinned hawks which were preying on the snow-bound quail. Deputy White of Castella used a novel method of feeding quail along the Sacramento River and railroad track by making use of a hand car. He also scattered feed along the road from the rear of a railroad train. Many hundreds of quail had taken refuge along the track and on the banks of the Sacramento River. Many deer were observed swimming down the Sacramento to lower altitudes, and were later cared for by Deputy White. Deputy Warren of Plumas County, assisted by a number of residents, fed and saved a large number of quail and deer. Deputies Streuber and Harris of Siskiyou County, Laws of Trinity and Scroggs of Placer County, all reported having saved large numbers of deer, quail and other birds from starvation.

Thanks are due a large number of residents who, without stinting, fed large quantities of hay and grain to starving game birds and animals and without charge to the state. A. C. Sprout of Copco, on the Klamath, is reported to have fed 300 deer that came to feed with his cattle. Judge Dockery of Hayfork fed forty deer. A. G. Guthrie of Pittville fed seventy mountain quail. L. Albey fed 400 quail near Etna. Edgar Thomas of Yreka cared for a large covey of quail almost in the heart of the city. Dr. Edgecomb of Knob fed several bands of quail. Dr. Tinsman of Adin was very energetic in rendering assistance, together with J. W. Jamison of Dutch Flat. This display of cooperation is gratifying to the commission and to everyone interested in our wild life resources.

Late reports from our deputies advise us that deer, in the northern counties of this district, are plentiful.

A line of game perpetuation endeavor which annually is increasing in scope is the heavy planting of trout fry in the numerous streams and lakes of this district, thereby not only taking cognizance of the demands of the sportsmen of the state, but also of the public demand for edible fish.

Northern California is now the mecca of sportsmen from all over the United States. These sportsmen are as keen, if not keener, in their appreciation of the scenic, climatic and outdoor life attributes of this section of the state than even the residents themselves. Through constant and consistent endeavor on the part of the Game Commission the old evils which confronted the sportsman and game lover are being eradicated rapidly and an appreciation of what game conservation and law observance means is restoring the depleted streams and game covers.

Respectfully submitted.

Assistant in charge Sacramento District Office.

REPORT OF THE LOS ANGELES DISTRICT OFFICE.

The Honorable Board of Fish and Game Commissioners of the State of California.

GENTLEMEN: Fish and game work bore better fruit in southern California during the last two years than in all previous experience of the organized efforts whose prime object has been to provide better sport for the licensees whose dollars finance the commission charged with this great public service.

"Nothing succeeds like success"; and sentiment today stands just as squarely behind conservation in southern California as it does in the eastern centers of radicalism, where some have weaned themselves away from the practical aspects of the problem to chase the chimera of sentiment. In this state, the close relation between their Fish and Game Commission and the sportsmen has made the work one of providing more fish to catch and more game to shoot. The most valuable sentiment revolves around sporting rather than around the ultra-aesthetic, the end and aim of which is to set the gun in its rack and the rod in its corner for all time. Too vast an "allied industry" has developed about California fish and game to suffer such a loss, not to mention the plain and direct attraction value it has demonstrated in encouraging men of means to make this commonwealth their home.

The sportsmen of southern California under the present administration of their affairs have seen their fish and game grow with the increases of the field-patrol force. In 1915, they enjoyed the best fishing and the most diversified sport with the rod that has ever been their good fortune. Rainbow trout of large size had grown from Fish and Game Commission plantings in the artificially created mountain reservoir lakes until an entirely new sport had been developed. So likewise with the gamy and toothsome importation from the East, the black bass. Meanwhile, every native form of fishing showed marked improvement. Stream fishing was phenomenally good when the increased number of angling licensees is considered. Hunters enjoyed the best quail shooting in a decade during the extended season wherein the commission vindicated its promise to recommend a longer shooting period as soon as quail increased sufficiently to permit it. Duck-shooting on the clubs was good all through the winter; doves gave excellent sport in September, and the deer crop in some of the counties was the heaviest in several years, Santa Barbara notably reporting a killing double that of the year before.

All these good things came in conjunction with the most business-like and vigorous campaign in behalf of fish and game conservation that it ever has been financially possible to make in southern California, Commissioner Connell having announced that the income of the work seemed to have attained sound enough foundation to warrant establishment of a big hatchery to anticipate demands of the future, and broadening of the field-patrol activities by appointment of deputies in every county. The effect of these changes of policy was so immediate and so palpable that credit was freely given to conservation for the results attained. So today, sportsmen in the south stand squarely behind the plan, and violators find themselves arrayed against a quiet but determined public sentiment which shows in numerous prosecutions and stiff fines to chronic violators. Favorable breeding seasons played a strong part in bringing about better game conditions; but no breeding season is favorable unless the gun be kept from the fields. It may now be said that a breeding stock of game has been developed which, with the care it is sure to receive, can weather any demands likely to be made upon it under the law even by the expected increase in the army of hunting licensees taking advantage of it each year. The supply is here; regulating the annual drain to the annual increase is now the problem.

Fish propagation work in the south has been more a matter of distribution than of rearing, but Bear Valley Hatchery has had two good years, albeit expensive in unit cost per thousand of product as judged by the state standard for fishcultural efforts. The May first trout-opening was one of the wisest laws ever passed to benefit fishing in the south. It already has justified the delay on Bear Lake alone. The value of protecting "spawners" through April is no longer questioned even by those who at first fought it bitterly there.

In the game fields, aided by the delayed opening of the rabbit season, the potential presence of deputies has resulted in the best two summers the breeding birds have ever enjoyed. The rabbit law was not so much intended to protect rabbits, which are a pest, as it was to deprive the violator of any legal color of right to be afield with a gun in the nesting season. That it has done, and to it in great measure may the present heavy head of quail and doves be credited. Considerable of the opposition to the rabbit protective measures has died out among large ranchers who undeniably do suffer sorely from the depredations of these animals, entirely because these men of broad vision have themselves seen the benefits of excluding the fire-starting, fence-cutting type of violator from their lands by removing from him the chance to cover his depredation by the excuse of benefiting them through decreasing their rabbits. Many a ranch owner wishes to give the true sportsman every opportunity to enjoy his game; and some are learning that between the sportsman and the summer violator lies a gulf like the sea. For he who respects not the law of the state will not respect the rights of his fellowman, and he it is who usually is careless with all other of the relations of life. Possibly nowhere in the state has the value of the absolute closure of all shooting in summer been so plainly demonstrated as in southern California. Now the man who shoots announces himself as violating the law—a “poacher upon the public”—and blazes the trail to justice.

The rabbit law, like the late trout-opening, has put in the hands of the patrol force a practical power of enforcement equal to trebling its numbers, and is therefore a state asset of at least triple the present pay roll every month. What its incidental benefits in building up a more attractive game supply may be, only the future growth of the state through these most potent inducements can tell. Experience has proved that the love of the rod and gun lies deep in most normal men; and that, other things approximately equal, the majority will cast their lot where they may cast their line with alluring chance of success; will risk getting their gains where they stand chance of getting their game with it. This is not theory, but the most practical reasoning in the world.

Few realize the value of good shooting and fishing as an inducement to tourists and home seekers to come this way; but in the South, world-famed as the playground of men of means, whatever adds to the joy of life by luring to the outdoors must be even more important than elsewhere. Nor is the value solely that of an attraction. In these days of preparedness, who can say how essential may prove these rugged sports which make men of boys by taking the youth of the land away from saloons, pool-rooms and low city company to healthful hills, building strength, self-reliance, character that may one day stand between the nation and its fate?

Realizing the attraction power of the deer interest, the Southern Division under Commissioner Connell's orders, set about making of 1916 a grand “clean-up” of chronic violators whose proclivities for more or less systematic stealing of sport from the law-abiding by “soonering” ahead of the legal opening date, have been under espionage for some time. Backed by repeated information from staunch friends of law and order, the commission was able to accumulate the necessary evidence to run to earth and convict no less than ten confirmed offenders of this class to the great delight of those whose sport in years past had suffered from such marauders. Late in July, Deputy Becker, after a hard chase through the most inaccessible portions of the rugged, craggy Malibu range, known as the “Happy Hunting Ground” of the moderate-circumstanced, short-timed Los Angeles deer seeker, brought to justice Charles Decker and his followers, who were fined. Decker admitted upon the stand the killing of hundreds of deer at all seasons. A few days later, Deputy Barnett succeeded in catching and convicting two hardened offenders; one of them, Byron Secor, had made a business of violating by shipping and selling venison illegally killed. Earlier, Becker uncovered the evidence upon which he convicted Tony Ferriera of killing a deer many months previous, in a forest reserve. All told, 1916 was a bad year for the deer crooks, and did more to put the protection of deer upon a solid footing in the south than all past time combined.

Arrests and convictions for infractions of the quail and dove laws have been weekly occurrences, mostly small matters wherein a motorist had knocked over a quail or two along the road, or "potted" a few doves from posts or wires, unable to withstand the temptation, which is always safely met by leaving the gun at home. The day when men will set forth to make a bag in the closed season is past in southern California. It has become not only an expensive but also a most unpopular practice.

At the opening of the trout season, Commissioner Connell made use of the emergency appointment provisions of civil service to extend the patrol force to such proportions that three dozen competent wardens were keeping an eye open along streams and lakes, camps being established at centers of angling interest such as Bear Valley and Little Bear, under the direction of veteran patrol officers, and the fish were given every possible opportunity to cast their spawn in peace during April. Already the effects are being seen along streams as well as in the lakes. The torrential storms of January washed so severely many of the gorge streams that only extraordinary measures could have built up a breeding stock from the remnant left; but there is reason to believe that when supplemented with the outcome of last fall's plantings, this task has been accomplished.

Although commercial fisheries conservation is public service work of the very broadest character, and there is some moral question as to the right of the Fish and Game Commission to divert the moneys collected from hunters and fishermen to this service, the commercial fishermen have themselves contributed in excess of $10,000 in license fees this year, not to mention quite a sum collected in fines from convicted offenders, and in this way have built up a fund which will finance considerable work in the public behalf. Owing to poor advice, some of the ignorant aliens refused to take license, and it became necessary for the sea-patrol under Deputies Pritchard, Nidever and Barnett to make a grand "clean-up" during June which resulted in no less than forty-six arrests and nearly as many convictions. The licensees found that fishing privileges come cheaper from the commission than from justices of the peace. The Japanese gave no trouble whatever, taking license en masse through the secretary of their association, and to their credit may it be said that they respect the laws even better than the American citizens, once the laws are grasped and understood by their head men.

Acting upon complaints from the Tuna Club regarding violations of the closed "District No. 20" comprising the state waters surrounding Santa Catalina Island, the sea-patrol has maintained surveillance thereupon at every opportunity, and a special arrangement was entered into whereby a resident deputy was commissioned to expedite enforcement of the laws designed to protect the sporting fishing thereabouts, which has been a peculiar and unique asset of southern California, with its opportunity to catch the great tuna, the gamier swordfish of both species, the heavier black sea bass, and numerous smaller kinds.

Laws passed to protect the angling along the seashore by prohibiting the netting or sale of the characteristic game fishes of the littoral have been enforced against several professional seiners whose gear was confiscated and sold, justice being tempered with mercy in all cases but those wherein wilful and repeated violation was proved. The patrol work incidental to enforcing these laws has been financed by the collection of angling licenses from surf fishermen, who are numerous and ever-growing in southern California and who show a sportsmanlike disposition to pay a fair proportion of the expense necessary to protect their favorite varieties.

Beside the immediate features of enforcement work, numerous investigations have been carried forward by experts in the employ of the commission. The activities of kelp harvesters, prospect of successful acclimatization of striped bass in the lagoons of the south, angling and life conditions in Bear Lake, and shellfish are a few of the matters covered. The tuna packing industry, which has become the largest individual feature of the fish trade in California, surpassing even the salmon industry in whose development a lifetime and enormous sums have been spent, has had the benefit of the commission's fisheries experts who studied the habits and wanderings of the albacore, commonly canned as tuna. Ten years ago a waste product, this "chicken of the sea" is now familiar to nearly every family, and its development into a state resource has cost California not a penny other than the penalty of years of profit lost through not knowing its sterling value earlier.

Fish and game may now be said to stand upon a substantial footing in the south, financially, physically and morally. With the most up-to-date hatchery in the world nearing completion on the eastern slope of the Sierras ready to begin work on next spring's eggs, there is reason to believe all freshwater fish conditions will steadily improve. The steady growth in license income took a sudden and most noteworthy spring this summer, until it would be a bold man indeed who would attempt to predict its total ten years hence; but so long as every unit-increase in the demand brings with it another dollar to defray the cost of additional sport demanded, just so long will that increase be denied any terrors for those whose hope and best wish is ever "more fish to catch, more game to shoot" for all Californians.

Respectfully submitted.

Assistant.

REPORT OF FRESNO DISTRICT OFFICE.

The Honorable Board of Fish and Game Commissioners.

GENTLEMEN: The year 1915 witnessed little change in general conditions with regard to fish and game in the Fresno Division. The policy of the office continued to be along the same lines as in previous years. The office was a central point from which the activities of the deputies were directed and at the same time it was recognized by the public as a friendly cooperative agency alike for the diffusion of information regarding fish and game laws and the aims and ideals of the Fish and Game Commission as well as a receiving point for information from the public on all subjects pertaining to the betterment of conditions with regard to fish and game law enforcement. The active cooperation and confidence of the public throughout the nine counties of the Fresno Division has been the best justification for the establishment of the Fresno office in the first instance.

In the winter months of 1914-15 a determined effort was made to correct conditions existing around the westerly and southerly boundaries of Yosemite National Park. Many deer in previous years have been slaughtered at the time when the snows drive the deer from the protected area of this National Park. By hard and patient work the Fresno office had finally reduced to a minimum, offenses against the deer law in the counties of Kern, Tulare, Fresno and Madera. In former years, large numbers of deer were slaughtered when in a comparatively helpless state in the foothill and lower mountain region. Naturally, the most important feature of protective work for the deer was in securing the cooperation of the mountain people. Although at first antagonistic because the mountaineers had always made a practice of killing deer for the meat, when needed, a condition was brought about gradually whereby in the mountains mentioned the Fish and Game Commission had the almost unanimous support of all the mountain people. The only remaining section of the Fresno Division where the enforcement of the deer law and the sentiment therefor was not general, was that section of the mountains lying as described, just outside of Yosemite National Park. Three picked deputies were sent into the region and remained there throughout the winter months. From all evidence that can be gathered there were practically no deer killed in that section during the past winter. However, the work of the deputies must be followed up for several successive seasons in order to make these improved conditions effective and enduring.

The fish planting operations in the Sierra Nevada Mountains of the Fresno Division have been consistently carried forward and in 1914 the pack horse distribution work reached its climax of magnitude. This work of stocking the barren streams of a vast region with desirable varieties of trout has been of great value and of universal popularity with the public. It should be noted that some experiments of much scientific value have been undertaken which give promise of interesting results. Waters uninhabited by fish have been available for such experiments. Conditions have been favorable for testing the development of steelhead trout fry when planted in waters where the fish can not readily run to the ocean. Other experiments along similar lines to observe what changes, if any, take place in the apparent characteristics of golden trout have been undertaken and these experiments, as well as the steelhead experiment, have been the subject of previous biennial reports from the Fresno office. The time to draw conclusions from these experiments should be ripe in the summer seasons of 1916 and 1917.

The following copies of reports cover the fish planting enterprises of the Fresno office during the seasons 1914 and 1915.

Report Trout Planting 1914.

By reason of the magnitude of the operations, the distances over which the fish were transported and the fact that golden trout alone were used in the transplanting operations, the fish planting by the Fresno office in the summer months of 1914, was the most important undertaking ever inaugurated by that office.

On July 1, 1914, Deputy Ellis left Fresno with a finely equipped pack train of twenty mules, of which fourteen carried fish cans and six carried provisions and horse feed. The fish planting crew consisted of Deputies Ellis, Brownlow, Bullard and Smalley. Later Messrs. Walter Williams, Ray C. Ellis and Tom P. Ferguson were engaged as assistants in connection with the expedition. Mr. D. A. Williams, a well known business man of Fresno, fell in with the expedition at

Fig. 87. Golden trout operations. Sorting the fish at Long Meadows preparatory to a pack-horse trip. Photograph by A. D. Ferguson.

Whitney Meadows and donated his volunteer services to assist in taking up fish and in the fish planting operations.

The pack train proceeded to Whitney Meadows and there took up some 2000 adult golden trout. The fish planters then proceeded by trail to Lone Pine, which consumed two days, and thence to Bishop and North Lake, which took four days. While encountering many difficulties, they succeeded in landing the major portion of the fish at a comparatively high altitude at North Lake; where the danger of losses was over. At North Lake the expedition was joined by Paul G. Reddington, forest supervisor of the Sierra National Forest, and A. D. Ferguson, in charge Fresno Division. From North Lake the fourteen mule loads of golden trout were taken across the summit via Piute Pass, crossing on 60 feet of snow, and on to the headwaters of the south fork of the San Joaquin River.

This consignment of fish was planted in the following waters:

Desolation Lake, two unnamed lakes on the south side of Piute Creek, French Canyon Creek, and Piute Creek. Distant two days pack from these localities, plants were made in Heart Lake and Marie Lake, tributary to the south fork of the San Joaquin, and in the headwaters of Bear Creek which is an important tributary of the south fork of the San Joaquin.

Immediately after delivering the golden trout on the headwaters of Piute Creek, Deputy Ellis, accompanied by Ray Ellis and Tom Ferguson, returned with half the pack train to Whitney Meadows for a new supply of golden trout for transplanting, while Deputies Bullard and Brownlow, after stocking Bear Creek and lake waters, took the remaining half of the pack train, by trail, to Mammoth where they awaited a consignment of golden trout which Deputy Ellis was in the meantime gathering at Whitney Meadows. About August 2d, Deputy Ellis and his assistants carried seven mule loads (14 cans) of adult golden trout down to Lone Pine and thence by auto truck to Mammoth, where they were delivered to Deputies Bullard and Brownlow, the former deputies returning at once to Whitney Meadows to secure a further supply. This consignment of fish was planted by Deputies Bullard and Brownlow in the creek at Agnew Meadows, in Shadow Creek, Garnet Lake and Shadow Lake. It had been previously arranged between the Fresno office and the superintendent of Yosemite National Park, that five mule loads of this consignment of golden trout were to be delivered to the park authorities at Thousand Island Lake. Upon arriving at Thousand Island Lake, the deputies of the Fish and Game Commission found evidence that the park pack train had been there but had returned to the park. Accordingly, all of the fish were distributed in waters immediately south of the park line.

By the foregoing operations the range of the golden trout has been extended more than 150 miles along the summit waters of the Sierras from Volcano Creek, the original habitat.

On August 10, 1914, Commissioner Carl Westerfeld and A. D. Ferguson, in charge of the Fresno office, accompanied by Robert Duke, attorney for the commission, joined the pack train at Lone Pine and were with the crew throughout the remainder of the time the expedition was in the field. Deputy Smalley was, because of severe illness, compelled to return home from Bishop, leaving the pack-train crew while on its first trip. From Whitney Meadows as a base of supply, seven plants of golden trout were made in new waters tributary to the upper Big Kern and in small lakes in the vicinity of Mount Genoa and Crag Errieson. An additional plant also was made to the former plant in Lake South American. Commissioner Westerfeld assisted throughout this and subsequent operations not only in taking up the golden trout but in distributing them.

Deputies Bullard and Brownlow having now returned with their string of pack stock to Whitney Meadows, a full pack-train load of golden trout were taken up and the expedition proceeded via Kern River Canyon, Farewell Gap, Mineral King, Timber Gap, Elizabeth Pass, Roaring River, Kings River Canyon and on to the northern slope of the divide between Middle and South Forks of Kings River. En route plants were made in Cliff Creek, tributary to the Kaweah River and Lone Pine Meadow and Tamarack Lake (renamed Lake Westerfeld) on the headwaters of the middle fork of the Kaweah. The party divided at Roaring River. Deputy Bullard, assisted by Walter Williams, with four mule loads of golden trout, completed the season's operations by planting Horse Corral Creek, Lewis Creek and Wildman Creek, tributaries of the south fork of Kings River, and Kennedy Creek with its tributary lakes, and a lake at the head of Lost Canyon, tributary to middle fork of Kings River, situated on the north side of the Monarch Divide which separates the middle and south forks of the river. The expedition was disbanded at Big Meadows in northern Tulare County.

About 5000 adult golden trout were transplanted, all taken with (fly) hook and line. All of the plants were made in ideal barren waters which are located conveniently for further distribution work in still other barren waters as soon as the fish shall have become established. Because of these and previous similar operations in transplanting golden trout, the fear once common that this peerless species might become extinct, is forever allayed.

Late in September a carload of rainbow, eastern brook and Loch Leven trout fry were planted at Huntington Lake.

Report Trout Planting 1915.

The fish planting operations of the Fresno office during the 1915 season were confined to extending to new waters in the same general locality the plants formerly made in an important part of eastern Fresno County.

In the month of August, with a ten-mule pack train, Deputies A. D. Ferguson, in charge of Fresno Division, S. L. N. Ellis and F. A. Bullard proceeded to Dinkey Lake to complete some transplanting work first undertaken in that vicinity several years ago. The expedition was accompanied by Hon. L. B. Cary, chairman of the House Committee on Fish and Game in the legislature of 1915. Mr. Cary was given an opportunity to observe the methods of the Fish and Game Commission in establishing trout in available waters which had been theretofore barren. With rainbow trout and black-spotted trout secured from Psalter Creek, plants were made as follows: In the creek which heads on the divide west of "Mining Town," the streams which feed from various directions, Dinkey Creek, the upper main Dinkey Creek, the stream which comes from Cutts Meadow and the streams which are crossed by the trail from Cutts Meadow to Mining Town; all being tributary to Dinkey Creek.

Thereafter, with eastern brook trout secured at Dinkey Meadows, where they were planted by Deputy Kenneth Hughes in 1910, the upper waters of the main fork of Dinkey Creek were well stocked.

After finishing the stocking of all the main tributaries of Dinkey Creek, the fish planting operations were transferred to the north fork of Kings River. At upper Maxon's Meadow a plentiful supply of rainbow trout were found, being the result of a plant made in 1910. Drawing on this supply and using fish from 8 to 14 inches in length, the following barren waters were stocked: The lake known as The Devil's Punch Bowl, the south fork of Fleming Creek and two small lakes tributary to said creek, Fall Creek and Baird Creek. Plants were later made in the extreme head of the north fork of Kings River.

After completing these operations the activities of the fish planters were transferred to the vicinity of Helm Creek, stocked in 1910 with eastern brook trout. The creek was found to be alive with these trout. Here adult fish were taken to stock various lakes in that vicinity. That some idea may be gained of the results which follow fish planting in barren waters in the Sierra Nevada Mountains, attention is called to the fact that Deputy Bullard, fishing with "flies," took 110 eastern brook trout from Helm Creek within thirty minutes. These fish were afterwards planted, uninjured, in new waters in that vicinity. Nelson Lake and five other barren lakes tributary to Helm Creek, were also stocked with adult eastern brook trout, this completing the transplanting operations with adult fish.

In September, 26,000 rainbow fry from the Sisson Hatchery were planted by deputies of the Fresno office in the north fork of the San Joaquin River. These fish were taken to the terminus of the wagon road at Bass Lake and thence by pack train to the waters to be stocked.

A carload (100 cans) of rainbow and Loch Leven fry from the Sisson Hatchery, were distributed late in September in Huntington Lake and various streams tributary to Huntington Lake and to Shaver Lake, all being in the mountains of eastern Fresno County.

The Fresno office of the Fish and Game Commission was closed March 1, 1916.

Respectfully submitted.

(Signed) A. D. FERGUSON,
Assistant in Charge Fresno District Office.

REPORT OF THE COMMISSION ON LAND COLONIZATION AND RURAL CREDITS

INTRODUCTION

The legislature of California, in 1915, passed a law providing for a commission to "Investigate and consider the question of land colonization, and the various forms of land banks, cooperative credit unions, and other rural credit systems adopted or proposed in this country or elsewhere, with especial view to the needs of the rural communities of this state." In accordance with this measure the following report has been prepared.

Within the last five years questions of land tenure and land settlement have assumed a hitherto unthought of importance in the United States. The causes for this are the disappearance of free, fertile public land; the rising prices of privately-owned farm lands; the increase in tenant farming and a clearer recognition of its dangers; and the increasing attractions of city life which threaten the social impairment of rural communities by causing young people to leave the farms.

Some of the most enlightened nations of the world have gone far toward solving the problems created by such undesirable conditions by the adoption of new attitudes on the part of the government towards land ownership and land settlement. In such countries the state has taken an active part in subdividing large estates and in creating conditions which will enable farm laborers and farmers of small capital to own their homes. They have adopted this policy because experience has shown that nonresident ownership and tenant farming are politically dangerous and socially undesirable; that ignorant and nomadic farm labor is bad; and that the balance between the growth of city and country can be maintained only through creating rural conditions which will make the farm as attractive as the office or factory for men and women of character and intelligence.

The state of California has had no state land settlement policy. The subdivision of land for settlers, the character of settlers sought, and the kind of agriculture created, as well as the conditions of purchase, have all been left to unregulated private enterprise. There has been no public control over the selection of colonists to insure that they would be effective agents in rural development. There has been no public scrutiny of soil and conditions of purchase to render it certain that colonists would find an opportunity here rather than a temptation.

The task of this commission has been to study the methods and the results of private colonization in California in recent years, and to

Purpose: study compare these with what is being accomplished in methods and countries where land settlement is being carried out results of private under state aid and direction. In gathering data colonization regarding local development, the endeavor has been to get as much first-hand information as possible. Statements have been taken from a great many settlers in nearly all the sections of the state where colonization has been active in recent years. Conferences have been held with men active in colonization matters, and with commercial bodies interested in the results of settlement. It is believed that the information gathered is sufficiently authentic and extensive to enable us and the public to reach definite conclusions.

In this report the results of the investigations have been arranged under five heads.

- (1) Conditions in California.
- (2) The methods of land settlement enterprises and the conditions of settlers in colonies recently established.
- (3) The problems of tenantry and farm labor.
- (4) Methods and policies of other countries.
- (5) Conclusions and recommendations.

PART I

CONDITIONS IN CALIFORNIA

ARRESTED RURAL DEVELOPMENT

The state has an immense area of fertile and unpeopled land. Only eleven million acres out of the twenty-eight million acres of farm land are being cultivated. However, comparatively few settlers are coming here, and many who came in recent years have left. Costly advertising and still more costly personal solicitations have not served to attract colonists. The result is that progress in the country is not keeping pace with progress in the city. During five years, from 1910 to 1915, the gain in the population of California cities and towns was three times the gain of the country.

The principal causes for this arrested development seem to be high prices of land, high interest rates, and short terms of payment given in colonization contracts. These make it practically impossible to earn the money required to pay for a farm out of the soil in the time usually given. Many complain, moreover, that opportunities have been so exaggerated and the expenses of developing a farm so minimized as to induce settlers to undertake what on trial has proved to be impossible.

It is to the interest of the whole state that its fertile lands should be cultivated and that active colonization should be promoted. The state now buys a large part of its meat and many other farm products abroad. Increased production would lessen the cost of living and keep at home money now sent to other sections to pay for food products. Moreover, great properties, owned by non-residents, are being cultivated by tenants or by nomadic and unsatisfactory hired labor. These great properties ought to be subdivided and cultivated by residents. From statistics furnished by C. L. Seavey, tax commissioner, it appears that 310 landed proprietors own over four million acres of land suited to intensive cultivation and capable of supporting a dense population. This would make 100,000 forty-acre farms. One firm owns nearly one million acres; one railroad owns 500,000 acres. In Kern County four companies own over 1,000,000 acres, or more than half the land in private ownership. The Kern County Land Company alone owns 356,000 acres. In Merced County Miller & Lux own 245,000 acres. The evils of such ownership are every year becoming more apparent. We have at one end of the social scale a few rich men who as a rule do not live on their estates, and at the other end either a body of shifting farm laborers or a farm tenantry made up largely of aliens, who take small interest in the progress of the community. Political stability, the best results in agriculture, and satisfactory social conditions require that this inheritance from a Mexican land system and former land laws of the United States be abolished.

PUBLIC HEARINGS OF THE COMMISSION

The Commission on Land Colonization began its investigations in 1915 with a series of public hearings at Sacramento, Willows, Stockton, San Francisco, Fresno, Los Angeles, and El Centro. At these hearings much attention was given to the need for a better system of rural credits as the Federal Farm Loan Act had not then been enacted.

The meetings were well attended. Valuable first-hand knowledge, based on personal experience, was furnished by landowners, settlers, public officials, bankers, and representatives of commercial organizations. There was a general agreement that settlers were finding it difficult to meet their payments on land and that colonization would be easier and safer if longer periods of time for payments and lower rates of interest could be secured. The testimony showed that the cost of preparing land for cultivation, especially in the irrigated districts, is more than has been recognized, and that, because of this, it is impossible for settlers to borrow money to equip farms properly for intensive cultivation.

THE FEDERAL FARM LOAN ACT

While this investigation was in progress, congress passed the "Federal Farm Loan Act," which will give farmers who own land as favorable conditions for borrowing money as could be expected under a state law. A board which has been appointed to administer the federal act is arranging to begin business in the near future. Since nothing could be gained either in time, conditions of payment, or in rates of interest by the enactment of a state law, it seemed desirable that our future investigations should deal mainly with methods and policies of land settlement.

The benefits of the Federal Farm Loan Act are, however, restricted to farmers who can give first mortgage security on land worth double the amount of the loan. It is generally conceded that in order to enable tenant farmers to become farm owners, or in order to give adequate assistance to colonists of small capital, a separate credit system based in some measure on the character of the borrower must be provided. A federal measure known as the Crosser Bill, designed to finance settlers on public land, is now pending in congress. But this will not help to colonize private land in California. On the contrary, it will be an obstacle to colonization here, through creating more favorable opportunities elsewhere. It seemed necessary, therefore, that this investigation give considerable attention to the amount of money needed by settlers; the time required to earn that money by farming; the terms and conditions under which land is sold to settlers here; and the terms and conditions under which land is sold in countries in which a state system of land settlement has been in operation long enough for the benefits to be manifest.

PART II

METHODS OF LAND SETTLEMENT ENTERPRISES AND EXPERIENCES OF SETTLERS

STUDY OF TYPICAL COLONIES

The public hearings of the commission were followed by a study of conditions in what were regarded as typical colonies. Settlers in the colonies these were seen on their farms. Data were procured studied from land selling agencies and commercial bodies, and a number of special investigators visited the following colonies or sections and studied conditions in them:

Colony or project	County
Atascadero.....	San Luis Obispo
Carmichael.....	Sacramento
Chowchilla.....	Madera

In its studies the commission has had the valuable cooperation and aid of the Commonwealth Club of California. Recognizing the economic significance of land settlement, the club set aside $1,000 to help meet the expenses of these studies. A special section of the club has given much attention to the subject. Three members, Messrs. Frank Adams, D. N. Morgan and Elwood Mead, were made a special committee to direct the investigation on behalf of the Commonwealth Club; and Messrs. A. L. Cowell, Edwin E. Cox, R. L. Adams and M. S. Wildman have carried on special inquiries and submitted reports, which are referred to later.

Fifteen students of the University of California, either graduates or members of the senior class, have aided in field studies. Many of these young men had been raised on California farms and nearly all had had farming experience. They were well equipped, therefore, to aid in gathering information and in interpreting its significance.

It has been the practice, followed in nearly all instances, to have the settlers' statements supplemented by a study of conditions in the colonies, either by a member of the commission or by some one else having experience and maturity of judgment to prevent the publication of anything misleading or incorrect. One or two of the special reports made for the commission have been incorporated with ours, because of the side lights they throw on some of the special problems of colonization and rural development.

The colonies or sections included are believed to be fairly typical. The settlers' experiences represent on an average the methods and the results of recent colonization.

In order to secure uniformity in statements and to be able to compare results in different sections, the commission prepared a form of inquiry concerning the essential facts of the settlers' operation during the developing period. A copy of one of these statements is inserted to show their character.

STATEMENT OF SETTLER.

Remarks: (Here please add any additional data regarded as important, including what you may have to say about your present outlook for success not covered in report)

The land was sold at too high a price. It is worth about $150 to $200 an acre. Mr. ————— is treating the settlers fairly and has been of great help to them. I bought from the ————— Company and am contented and expect to succeed. To irrigate this country requires a large amount of water. In my case from 3 to 3 1/2 acre feet per acre.

STATISTICS OF COLONIZATION IN CALIFORNIA

Table I is a financial summary of the settlers' statements in colonies investigated. Table II shows the estimated outlay of settlers, furnished the commission by commercial organizations. Table III gives a summary of the terms on which land may be bought in countries which have a state land settlement policy and the average of terms in the colonies studied here. Table IV indicates the ages of settlers and the value of crops grown the first year after settlement. Table V indicates land prices.

NOTE.—Table V gives the prices of land in other sections of the United States as compiled by the United States Department of Agriculture in 1916, and the prices paid for farm land in other countries of the world as compiled by the state or semi-public authorities engaged in colonization. In Germany, Ireland, England, and Denmark, much of the land purchased is highly improved, with costly residences and farm buildings. The land in Australia is cleared and fenced; it is in about the same state of improvement as the large wheat ranches of California.

Summarized, these tables show: That the purchase price of unimproved land is higher in California than in other parts of the United States or in those countries which have a state system of land settlement. This does not reflect on the desirability of California land because the climate makes land here more valuable than in any other part of this country.

What it does show is: That we have reached a period in our development when settlers here need all the assistance that is given them in Settlers need countries which have adopted state aid in land settlement assistance as a public policy.

That the rate of interest in California is also higher; and that the settlers in countries with state systems have from four to ten times Interest too high; as long to pay for their land as have the settlers time too short under private colonization contracts in California.

But the tables do not tell the whole story. In Ireland, England, Denmark, Germany, Italy, Australia, and South Africa the settler Value of expert assistance in other countries is given expert direction and competent financial advice in making his initial improvements. This enables a settler to bring his farm into full production at a lower cost and in a shorter time than is possible where each individual must make his initial improvements without such direction or advice. Organization in the development of a colony and preliminary training or direction of settlers are as valuable as is the preliminary training of workmen in their duties in a great industrial undertaking.

CONDITIONS OF LAND SELLING CONTRACTS IN CALIFORNIA SHOULD BE MORE LIBERAL

The comparison of land prices and conditions of payment here and in other countries raises the question, "How it is possible for settlers Settlers of limited capital are not purchasing land in California in California to pay for farms in periods of from three to ten years, while in other countries periods of from thirty to seventy-five years have been found necessary." The answer is that in California the settler who has not had a large cash capital or some outside income has not been able to purchase a farm. We have not found a single settler who, bringing with him only the limited capital accepted by state systems in other countries, has been able to pay for his land in the time agreed upon in his contract.

The experience of practically every colonization company, no matter what degree of success it has attained, shows that it would have been Colonies show that longer terms for payment would be better better for both the settler and the company if the original enterprise had been organized on a financial basis which would have given the settler more money for improvements and a longer time in which to pay for his farm.

INFORMATION ABOUT SPECIFIC COLONIES

The information about the colonies listed below has been obtained from the managers and confirmed by the settlers:

Los Molinos. This colony is now a success. A majority of the settlers have overcome the obstacles which at first threatened to overwhelm them. But there was a time when it seemed as though the enterprise would fail. The settlers had bargained to pay a high price for unimproved land in the short period of seven years. In addition to meeting land payments they had to provide the money for improvements and equipment, which on small irrigated farms are very heavy. The operating expenses included taxes of about $3.00 an acre, water charges of $2.00 an acre, and interest on land which cost from $75 to $300 an acre. The amount of money required to meet the payment of interest, principal, and taxes was somewhere between $35 and $40 an acre. At the outset the land did not produce anything approaching this sum.

Fortunately, the company which founded the colony had financial resources which enabled it to assist the settlers by buying cows, which cost $60,000, and allowing the settlers to pay for them by giving to the company one-half of each cream check. Each settler paid 8 per cent interest on the loan.

The following figures show to what extent the anticipated payments of settlers have not been made. The 375 contracts outstanding at this time represent:

$48,763 arrears of interest,
$651,001 arrears of principal,
$15,689 ledger account, and $13,446 unpaid balance on purchase of cows.

It would have been better for this company, and certainly better for the settlers, if the original contracts had given the settlers time to earn out of the land enough money for their payments.

Orland. Few settlers of limited means have been able to meet their land payments and some have had to borrow money to meet their water charges. Many of the notes given to banks for money advanced to pay for cows are overdue. Settlers have asked for the creation of a federal farm loan association in order to obtain thirty years time with a lower rate of interest. Orland is another colony which is going to succeed. But progress would have been more rapid and settlers would have been relieved from a heavy burden of anxiety, if the time of payment had been in accord with the profits of agriculture.

Willows, S. V. I. Co. The testimony taken at Willows showed that fully 90 per cent of the settlers in this colony are behind with their payments. The reorganized company (Superior California Farm Lands Company) has this year, voluntarily and generously, given all resident colonists new contracts. In them credit is given for all payments made and all arrears of interest are written off. That is, many settlers have had their land rent free for several years. Many others who were unable to wait for a revision of the contracts have, however, had to leave the colony, losing all they paid.

Carmichael. This has been mainly planted to orchards, which are not yet producing. Few settlers have a living income from the land; a considerable number earn this by working for wages. If strict compliance with contracts had been insisted upon, very few resident colonists would be left. Many who have made no payments since the first have been given more time; and some have borrowed back the first payments to carry on the cultivation of their orchards.

Wiltqn. The settlers in this colony lacked both capital and experience. Many have had to leave because they lacked capital to complete improvements and to meet deferred payments on land. Even if they had had sufficient capital, success would not have been possible without irrigation. No facilities for irrigation were provided.

Patterson. In the Patterson Colony the earlier settlers and later ones with ample capital have done well, but the capital of many settlers was absorbed in making the first payment. They were, therefore, unable to buy stock or equip their farms. A large number have given up. Some have succeeded because they rented, at a nominal rate, the farms of nonresident owners. But many are able to remain only because the owners of the colony lands are not insisting on payments in accordance with their contracts.

The Oakdale District Colonies. There are twenty-seven colonies in the Oakdale irrigation district. Some of these are prospering. In some only two or three colonists remain. In the successful colonies land was sold at a reasonable price and settlers who needed it were given more time. The colonies established by Rodden Brothers, local landowners and bankers, are successful. The Avery and Leitch colonies have failed. Inexperienced settlers, poor soil, inflated land prices, and lack of either financial help or practical advice for beginners have compelled many settlers to leave.

Winton. At Winton the price of land was $142 an acre, and the colonists agreed to pay this within four years. In addition the land had to be leveled, ditched, fenced, and planted before a crop could be grown. There are plenty of attractive homes at Winton, but the owners have not paid for them in contract time. If the company had not been able to give better than contract terms, these settlers would have had to leave.

Kerman. The Kerman colony has two very different classes of soil. Adjacent to the river and running south for two or three miles the soil is good; and the settlers on the good soil have prospered. But from there to the southern boundary of the company's land much of the soil is poor and affected by hardpan and alkali. The settlers who bought this poor land and agreed to pay for it in five years undertook an impossible task. A considerable part of this colony was bought by non-residents. Among the settlers, who lacked experience and adequate capital, there have been many failures. Some old people lost in this colony the savings of years.

The Fairmead Colonies. Interviews with the officers of the colonization company and with the settlers, and personal observations of members of the commission seem to justify the following conclusions:

Settlers with ample capital or outside incomes have generally succeeded, but a large percentage have abandoned their farms on account of discouragement, due to lack of capital. Many settlers in arrears are being carried by the company, which is endeavoring to assist them in securing loans from outside sources.

Laguna de Tache. This colony started ten years ago, the land selling at $50 an acre. Settlers who bought land at this price have usually succeeded. Colonization today presents a harder problem, because the price of land has been raised to $110 an acre. Whether settlers of small capital can pay this higher price within the time limit given has yet to be determined.

A leasing system has recently been inaugurated by the company. The lessee rents the land at $3.00 an acre the first year, $4.00 the second, and $5.00 the third. At the end of the third year the lessee must have the land in alfalfa, vines, or some specified crop. In addition to the rental money, if the lessee decides to purchase, he must pay an advance of 5 per cent in the price for each year the option runs. Thus land which sells at $110 an acre will cost $115.50 the first year, $121 the second year, and $126.50 the third year. The system gives an opportunity for young men of small capital to make a start, but even these payments seem larger than the profits of agriculture generally warrant.

Chowchilla. The time given to pay for the land in the different Chowchilla subdivisions varies from five to ten years. Only a part of the payment period has elapsed since settlement began; but this has been enough to make it clear that the settlers will not earn any considerable part of the payment money out of the land within the contract period. The land requires irrigation, and the settler has to provide his own water supply by pumping from wells. This requires a large initial outlay and a considerable annual expense per acre for irrigation.

Wasco and Shafter. In these two colonies the price of land varies from $70 to $90 an acre, and the contract time of payment averages four and one-half years. The actual time, under the present management, is whatever the settler needs. Some of the Wasco settlers bought their farms for $32 an acre. But all settlers who are in debt would feel more secure and be in better position to plan for the future if the time of payment were made 20 years instead of less than one-fourth that time.

Fontana. Fontana is an orchard colony, mainly devoted to citrus fruits. Much of the land is sold with a water right and already planted. The average price of planted land is $354 per acre and the average time of payment four and one-half years. This payment period is only possible for settlers who have large capital, as there can be no income from the orchards during the first four years. The company is now offering to lend money to settlers to enable them to become poultry raisers and so secure an immediate income. The average capital of the settlers interviewed at Fontana, however, is great enough to enable them to pay for the land in cash. Thus there is no question of terms.

Van Nuys. Van Nuys can not be considered as either an agricultural or a horticultural colony. It is so near Los Angeles and so well provided with transportation facilities that the land has a large prospective residence value entirely independent of what can be grown on it. The greater number of the settlers here are persons of independent means. Much of the land has been bought by people who believe that the growth of Los Angeles will enhance its residence value. Considered on a productive basis, the average price of $540 an acre, to be paid in less than four years, is prohibitive. This has been proved by the experience of settlers who bought, expecting to complete the payments for their land by returns from crops. They were unable to do so. If members of the colonization company had not been able to lend $60,000 to buy poultry and equip poultry farms, many would have failed. The company is now assisting settlers in other ways. It builds houses and sells them to settlers on time payments; it has advanced large sums of money to establish local markets; it has organized a cooperative cannery; and it has otherwise helped finance beginners.

READJUSTMENT IN LAND SELLING METHODS INEVITABLE

The inability of settlers to meet their payments in these different colonies does not necessarily mean that the land is not valuable for agriculture or horticulture or that, in most cases, it is not worth the price asked for it. What it does mean is that we have been carrying Colonization on colonization enterprises on an impossible financial plans financially plan. If the settlers in these colonies where the soil impossible is good and the water supply satisfactory, had been given the time, the interest rate, and the assistance in other directions given settlers in Denmark, Ireland, Germany, or Australia, the percentage of successes here would have been as large as in those countries.

Many with whom this commission has talked do not think that any changes are needed in colonization methods. They say, "In the past men paid for land in five years. Why can they not do it today?" They seek to explain the large percentage of failures by the settlers' lack of industry and frugality. They tend naturally but unwisely to Greater cost continue along old lines, even if they have to be con- of farm land tent with settlers of low ideals and a debased standard of living. The fact is that today men can not pay for land in five years from the profits from the soil.

That the task of paying for a farm out of its products has become much harder in the last ten years is shown by the following statistics:

When colonization began at Orland, land was selling for from $10 to $40 an acre. The same land with no improvements now sells for $75 to $150 an acre, with a water right costing $40 an acre still to be added.

The lands of the Sacramento Valley Irrigation Company were bought at an average price of $37 an acre. The settlers interviewed paid an average price of $130 an acre, part of which represented expenditures on the irrigation works, but settlers are still confronted with additional expenses for completing the works and meeting the interest on the bonds of an irrigation district.

The Haggin Grant, on which part of the Carmichael Colony is located, sold before subdivision for less than $50 an acre. The same land after subdivision sold for $200 an acre.

The early settlers in Modesto and the Oakdale districts bought land for less than $50 an acre. The same kind of land in these districts now sells for $100 and $150 an acre—in some cases for $250 and $300 an acre.

The early settlers at Wasco paid $32 an acre, while present settlers are paying an average of $91.

The Mexican Grant on which the Van Nuys colony is located was sold a few years ago for about $50 an acre. The present re-sale prices of the same land, after sharing the costs of subdivision, roads, and other improvements, is $540 an acre.

The first settlers at Patterson paid about half the price paid by later settlers.

The first settlers at Laguna de Tache paid less than half the price now asked.

Throughout the area where land is being colonized, land prices have been multiplied by from two to ten, while the profits of farming have increased but little if at all. Hence some years ago men who bought land at $50 an acre could pay high interest rates and get out of debt; while those who have bought recently are struggling to meet interest payments alone.

These higher prices for land have made intensive cultivation a necessity; and that in turn requires costlier improvements and higher-priced equipment. The investigations of the United States Greater cost of farm improvements census showed that while the area of the farm had diminished between 1900 and 1910, the average capital invested in it had increased 86 per cent.

The acreage cost of improvement and equipment also increases as the size of the farm diminishes. The cost of a house and a stable on a twenty-acre farm may be today no greater than was formerly the cost on a farm of 160 acres; but the acreage cost is about eight times as great.

The estimates made by the commercial organizations show the ultimate cost of improvements on the small intensively cultivated farms in some of the older settled districts. The average in Table II is $180 an acre. In Orland, where the colony is six years old, the average cost of improvements already made is about $100 an acre. The cost of all improvements needed will be about $125 an acre.

Recently some of the colonization companies have been studying the feasibility of providing ready-made farms for settlers. In doing this they have made estimates of what it would cost to of ready-made prepare farms for cultivation. Three of these estimates are given. The first was prepared by Balfour, Guthrie & Company of San Francisco, the second by the San Joaquin Valley Farm Lands Company, and the third by Kendrick & Company of the Chowchilla Ranch.

Surplus-----	$2,930 00
Percentage of surplus to investment, 14.65.

The above surplus would not provide for the expenses of the settler's family, the paying of interest, and the paying of installments large enough to cover the principal in five years. However, there seems little doubt that buying one of these ready-made farms would be a safe undertaking on a payment plan extending over twenty years, and giving the privilege of paying off at an earlier date, providing a market for fresh milk could be assured. If product were to be disposed of as butter fat, margin of profit would be greatly reduced.

The selling plan proposed is as follows:

Total purchase price-----	$13,600 00
First payment on purchase-----	1,600 00
	<hr/>

Total indebtedness-----	$12,000 00
-------------------------	-------------

From the 20 cows there should be a monthly return of $6.00 per head, or $120, of which $96 is to be paid to the company to meet interest charges, and reduce principal indebtedness; this is at the rate of $8.00 per month per $1,000 of indebtedness; and this payment, continued through a period of 197 months, or 16 years, 5 months, will wipe out the entire indebtedness, if the interest rate is 6 per cent.

Subsequent to furnishing this estimate the manager of the enterprise has decided that it would be safer both for the settler and for the company to provide for smaller payments during the first three years and make the payment period twenty years instead of sixteen and a half years. On this basis, the plan seems to be a safe undertaking for settler and colonization company.

		Surplus -----	$1,817 30

NOTE.—No account is taken from income on chickens, as these are expected to help carry running expenses. It is, of course, presumed that during the first and second years, surplus will be used to wipe out floating indebtedness, and for the next three years to provide more comforts and better improvements.

The above estimate does not include any provision for wages, nor for payments on cows, nor repaying local dealers or others who advanced No provision money for improvements and equipment. To care for for wages, etc. 30 cows and cultivate 40 acres of land intensively, as must be done to grow feed enough for over 50 head of livestock, would require the labor of two or three men; so that wages and living expenses alone could easily absorb the first year's surplus.

Unless a considerable part of the land were leveled and prepared for irrigation, 30 cows could not be supported the first year.

These estimates are published mainly to show one significant fact, that to buy and equip a farm so as to pay for it in ten years requires an almost immediate investment of over $100 an acre in addition to the cost of the land.

Professor R. L. Adams prepared for the commission a valuable report on the equipment required on an intensively cultivated farm. In this he gives the total cost of equipping a 30-cow dairy farm at $6,500. Assuming this farm to have an area of 40 acres, the cost would be $160 an acre. He estimates the cost of equipping a 40-acre general farm at about $4,500, or a little over $100 an acre.

The Fresno Suburban Homes Company, which has recently made a thorough study of the cost of developing a fig orchard, has fixed the cost of preparing and cultivating the land for the first five years at $127 an acre. If to this is added the cost of a house and other accessory buildings, the cost on a 20-acre orchard at the end of five years would be over $200 an acre.

The estimate of Professor Adams does not include water rights or a number of other expenditures which can not be avoided on an irrigated farm. The first two estimates include in the price of the land some of the expenditures on its improvement. All the estimates agree, therefore, that the cost of preparing a 40-acre irrigated farm in California so that it will be habitable and in condition to be fully productive will be from $100 to $200 an acre.

On pages 30 and 31 is given the cost of bringing an orange orchard into full production. The total is between $400 and $600 an acre.

Some credit system more liberal than that of the Federal Farm Loan Act or that provided by colonization enterprises is therefore indispensable if we are to attract and retain many homeseekers who have all the elements of experience and character essential to success but who, lacking capital, must depend on their frugality and industry to earn the money to pay for their homes.

THE RETURNS FROM THE INTENSIVELY CULTIVATED FARM

The short time given to pay for land in most colonization contracts implies a profit from cultivation of between 20 per cent and 25 per cent

Implied profit:	of the cost of land and equipment. Such profits
20 to 25 per cent;	are occasionally made, but they are not the rule.
actual profit:	Investigations of the United States Department of 5 per cent	Agriculture show that the fully improved farm rarely pays more than 5 per cent on the investment, if a reasonable allowance is made for the wages of the farmer and his family.

The United States Reclamation Service has kept a careful census of the yield and the value of crops on the federal projects since their inception. In the thirteenth annual report the Value of crops on federal projects average values of crops are as follows:

1910	-----	$31 00 per acre
1911	-----	27 00 per acre
1912	-----	26 60 per acre
1913	-----	24 50 per acre

The following table gives a more detailed report for 1914. The reductions in acreage value of crops were mainly due to the declining prices of products. For the last two years prices have been higher.

In all districts exceptional single farms and single acres brought far more than average returns. For example, single acres of citrus fruits Payment plans at Orland have brought a return of $249 each; and must be based single acres of small fruits have brought a return of on averages $252 each. Single acres devoted to truck farming in California colonies have brought returns of over $100 each. The payment plans for colony farms should not, of course, be based on the returns of the exceptional acre or the exceptional farm, but on averages.

The gross value of crops grown on irrigated land in California given in the United States census as $43.50 an acre is higher than can be Census estimates expected by beginners, because it includes the highly too high improved orchards and vineyards in full bearing. But even at this rate, a 20-acre farm would give little more than a living income for the settler's family if there were no expenses for taxes, water, and repairs. Furthermore, the census figures quoted include the acreage devoted to tropical and semitropical fruits, with an average gross value of $154.32 an acre, and to orchards of other fruits with an average value of $77.18 an acre. Alfalfa, which is the beginner's main dependence, had an average acreage value of only $22.94.

CITRUS FRUITS: COST OF PRODUCTION AND INCOME

Even in industries like the growing of citrus fruits, which require a large investment in land, a long wait for returns, and an exceptional skill and care in cultivation and marketing, the net profits over and above expenses of cultivation only average 4.3 per cent on land valued at $1,000 an acre, according to a report prepared by the California Citrus Growers' Association.

Professor R. S. Vaile of the Citrus Experiment Station at Riverside, has prepared the following tables on the cost and production of citrus fruits:

The letter transmitting the statistics given in Tables VII to XII contains the following paragraph relative to the size of the orchard required to give a living income and the capital required by the settler:

“There is one other factor which I would call attention to in connection with citrus statistics, and that has to do with the size of unit to be desired. The total labor cost, including management, on bearing citrus groves will vary between $20 and $50 per acre, the average being in the neighborhood of $30 for oranges and $45 for lemons. These figures include the labor of fumigation and other pest control which practically no growers can handle for themselves, and also the pruning expense which comparatively few growers handle for themselves. Figuring on that basis, a farm unit should have no less than thirty acres of land in order to be justified in expecting a labor income of from $800 to $1,000 for the entire family. Incidentally our study of orchards of various sizes indicates that one animal on the average will care for from 13 to 18 acres, or one team will take care of about 30 acres.”

TESTIMONY REGARDING COLONIZATION METHODS AND RESULTS

Some of the best informed men of the state appeared before the commission at its public hearings and gave their views of existing conditions. Their conclusions were free from any bias and were based in each case on an extended experience. We can give extracts from the testimony of only a few of these witnesses but the few represent fairly the views of nearly all of them.

MR. C. F. DILLMAN, president of the D. O. Mills Bank, Sacramento, testified as follows regarding colonization:

Q. Have there been any number of failures, so far as you know?

A. Yes, there is no question of that.

Q. Have you been able to determine the cause of these failures and a remedy, if there is any remedy?

A. One of the principal causes, I think, is the high price of the land. People charge too much for the land. Then again, colonists are put on land that is not suitable for what they came to raise. And some Eastern people have made failures because the land was different from what they were used to in the East.

Q. They have gone into this without counting the cost and lost?

A. People have lost a great deal of money.

Q. Have they failed despite being properly financed, or has lack of proper financing been the cause of their failure?

A. I think you might say both. I have known people with enough money to keep themselves going, that after a while have abandoned their farms and left, and are working in the cities at some kind of labor. And then again, I have known people without proper financing to fail too.

Q. From what causes did lots of them fail?

A. They had a dry year, or a flood, or grasshoppers, or the price of fruit was poor. There were a number of things. It depended on the year, conditions, etc.

Q. In how far is the city bank affected by the prosperity or adversity of the small farmer?

A. If he is close to the city bank, the bank is very vitally interested in his success, though he is not, as a rule, much of a depositor.

Q. His adversity is felt by the city bank?

A. Yes, it is very noticeable, as the merchant is probably carrying the farmer; and if he can not pay the merchant, the merchant has to go to the bank.

Q. Then the prosperity of the small farmer is very material, as he is really the foundation?

A. Surely.

Q. And if the foundation is strong the whole community will be better and stronger?

A. The community lives off the farmer, either from what he produces or what he brings into the country.

Q. Anything that tends to aid in the prosperity of the small farmer reflects itself to all about him?

A. Very much. I think particularly the small farmer; the large farmer does not seem to have been so much of a benefit. The large farmer manages to get along without much trouble, while the small farmer, the man who really develops the country and perhaps pays an improper share of the taxes, receives little benefit or assistance from the banks.

Q. Looking at it from the eye of the banker, what is likely to produce the better results, a community tilled by farm tenants, or a community tilled by small landed proprietors with an interest in the soil they till?

A. The small landed proprietors, by a very large measure. I think you will remember the time when a lot of our American people were at Newcastle and Florin and the farmers and the boys did most of the work, with a few Chinamen. Now the Americans are sitting on the fence and seeing Orientals handle their property for them. I remember that a man with a small farm ten years ago told me that about 10 per cent of his gross receipts went for help, and now he tells me that 60 per cent goes for help.

Q. Then anything and everything that can be done to discourage farm tenantry, and on the other hand encourage the small landed proprietor, ought to be done?

A. Certainly.

Q. You have given more or less study to this system of rural credits. What are your ideas regarding it?

A. Well, I have studied the development and the troubles in England and Ireland, and also have looked into the German system and the Australian success, and it seems to me it would be a great benefit to the country if the small farmer, with proper safeguards and proper restrictions, could be helped to get himself going. After he has possession of his land I think the small farmer will be able to make good. What he needs is that $600 Mr. Walton was telling about.

Q. You heard more or less of the testimony yesterday?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You remember the question was raised as to whether it was wise for the state to father a system of rural credits; also the question was brought out whether, if the state did father a system of rural credits by standing behind the bonds, it would be helpful to the banker?

A. I think it would help the banker from the general prosperity, and it does not compete with the banker in any way. So I should think it would all be in line of a general help to the bankers, because what we need is population. Why, we have thousands of acres in great tracts in northern California that ought to be cut up in tracts of 40 or 80 acres. It would be the greatest blessing we could have to get this done.

Q. I take it your attitude is that a movement of this kind on behalf of the state would create depositors for the banks?

A. Surely.

Q. Assuming that the system could be surrounded by proper safeguards and other protection given the state, can you see any objection to the state lending its credit to a movement of this kind?

A. I know that this thing of the state lending its credit is a thing about which there is a great deal of difference of opinion. You no doubt know that the state loaned its credit in the early days of development and I am satisfied that the general opinion was that it was abused; and the constitution was amended to prevent anything like that in the future. But times have changed now, and if things can be safeguarded, it would be a good thing to have the state lend its credit to the small landowner who has proven his ability to use it right. I think it would be a great benefit to the state.

Q. Do you regard the fact that we have the referendum at our command, a safeguard which did not exist in earlier history? Would that not be an added safeguard? Suppose we should have a corrupt or unwise legislature that would unwisely or corruptly loan the credit of the state. Is it not a fact that we could stop it with the referendum?

A. Yes, but I do not think we would ever be called upon to do that, as the farmers are spread all over the country and could not get together and work any injury to the state as a large corporation could. I can not imagine where the legislature could use this power to the injury or detriment of the state.

Q. In other words, if the proposition were to loan the credit of the state to what is termed "big business" you would be opposed to it?

A. Yes, in that case I believe that corruption would be possible, but I can not see why it is not all right to loan it to the small farmer or to the young man to give him a start as a farmer.

Q. I take it you are in favor of the proposed constitutional amendment?

A. I am in favor of the amendment.

Q. Suppose there were a tract of 10,000 acres purchased here, what would the purchaser pay for that to sell in small tracts?

A. I would say that a person buying 10,000 acres of land at from $50 to $60 an acre would pay a small portion down and undoubtedly cut it up into small tracts and put it on the market at $200 or more per acre, right off.

Q. Then the increase might be 400 per cent instead of 15 per cent?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it a difficult matter to sell the land at that price? What commission is paid?

A. I have had some land to sell, and we have taken the matter up with competent real estate men. They wanted 25 per cent for advertising here and in the East.

Q. In that case it is possible that the settler with very small capital will pay more to the land salesman than the land cost originally in the beginning of this development?

A. Twenty-five per cent would be more than was originally paid for the land in many cases.

Testimony of A. HOCHHEIMER, merchant, Willows, California.

A good many colonists exhausted their resources with the initial payment. A man, who through paying 50 per cent of the cost of his land thus exhausts his resources, has little chance of winning out. He may by industry, self-sacrifice, strict economy, and self-denial, possibly succeed, and in a few years be able to extricate himself. He may possibly get out a portion of his equity or even a little more. The average American is not well adapted to the present system. The people who are making a success are foreigners—Italians, Portuguese and Swiss. They will possibly succeed where Americans will not. It is impossible for the colonist in his early struggle to be generous, to better social conditions, and to take an interest in politics, good roads or public affairs. His struggle for existence takes up his undivided attention.

Raw land, previous to opening colonization, was worth from $20 to $50 an acre. Average $35 to $40. Was sold to colonists at $125 to $275, average $175. Initial payment $15, with 6 per cent on deferred payments. Period 10 years. Absolute failure is certain. It is impossible to pay interest on deferred payments and support a family off the land. The chief trouble of farmers is that they can not get a loan at fair rate and can not market their products.

Testimony of JUDGE N. P. CHIPMAN, Sacramento California.

One trouble has been in these colonization schemes the sale of subdivisions to clerks and nonresidents—clerks scattered around over the state, who have been induced to buy on the representation that they could farm by hiring the work done, and in four or five years they would have an income, and in a short time might retire—all that sort of representation, which has no foundation in truth. I am told that the old system meant not only failure to those who were selling the land, but failure to the purchaser, because the land came back on the agents' hands, retarded sales and discouraged those who had made purchases. One who has sold land to colonists told me he hoped that the ten year installments plan might work out successfully.

Q. Must not that mean, General, the following: Isn't it the fact that the state pays for this unsuccessful man? The settler with his small capital is exploited by the system. He finds himself in due course penniless. He is thrown back into the city, perhaps, an unskilled, unemployed laborer who may become an occasional worker. And, on top of it all, in the minds of this man and his friends, farming is likely to receive a black eye.

A. The state is suffering from that condition of things today. It can not be otherwise. A stranger coming into this country, visiting one of these tracts that have been colonized, tracing the purchasers and seeing the number of subdivisions which nothing is being done with, finding that they are owned by persons living in the city and that others have gone back to the owners, and observing the state of development, a stranger can not help but come to the conclusion that he does not want to settle in this tract. And the state is suffering from it. There is a certain amount of discredit thrown upon honest representation nowadays by reason of this condition that is found in various parts of the state.

Testimony of L. A. NARES, manager colonization enterprises, Fresno, California.

It would certainly be a benefit to the whole state of California if land could be colonized on 6 per cent basis instead of 10 or 12 per cent basis as it is now for interest charges practically. And the price of land averages in the whole state 100 per cent over what it should be.

The fact is that it is more than 100 per cent in a great many cases. I am familiar with all the land propositions in California. I have had expert examinations made since the big failure up near San Francisco. In most of those cases the price is two or three hundred per cent higher than it should be. * * *

I think that, barring our getting rural credits, there should be some state supervision of all colonization enterprises.

Q. Sort of state colonization blue-sky law?

A. Yes; it should not be left even to as strong a board as the California Development Board. It should have for its object restriction of exploitation of land and better colonization methods. It is very difficult for even very large and influential corporations or boards of associations to any way regulate some of the exploitations that are taking place.

Q. I presume the explanation lies in the fact that these privately-organized boards have only moral influence and no legal power. You would locate legal power somewhere?

A. Yes. There has been an act before the legislature which, for some reason or other, was not approved by the Governor and not signed. The bill was introduced at the instance of the State Realty Federation; that is, the real estate men themselves wanted some power created in the state to regulate colonization enterprises. I blame the exploiters of land for a great deal of the present condition of our real estate marketing. Much exploitation has been done. In many cases the owners or exploiters of these lands were themselves taken in for not understanding conditions themselves, but they passed it on to others. A great deal of money was lost to California by exploited land enterprises; it hurt the fair name of the state very much in the East.

Testimony of ROBERT NEWTON LYNCH, secretary Chamber of Commerce, San Francisco, California.

Q. It has been pointed out by various witnesses that the underlying causes for much of the failure of our colonization schemes are as follows: First, the selection of unfit land; second, the selection of unfit settlers; third, ignorance on the part of the promoters of land colonization as to proper colonization methods, and ignorance on the part of many of the settlers or homeseekers in knowing how to plant, what to plant, and when to plant it; fourth, the excessive cost of land; fifth, insufficient capital on the part of the settlers; sixth, excessive rates of interest on borrowed money or on deferred payments; seventh, short term payments that would embarrass the settlers who were unable to meet their obligations; and eighth, improper marketing facilities. In how far do these underlying causes that have been named by various witnesses agree with your observations?

A. All of them to some extent enter into the difficulties of proper location of the right settler on the right piece of land in California. California is a state of very great resources and very great differences of quality of lands. There has been a lack of proper and accurate information on the part of the communities themselves in regard to the exact character of this land and its possibilities, and there have been many glaring cases of poor land being bought under wrong apprehensions as to its quality. The Development Board has been seeking, as almost its main work, to secure accurate information in regard to the exact quality and productiveness and types of lands throughout the state.

Q. When you speak of unfit settlers, you mean that promoters in their eagerness to dispose of land have taken anybody who had enough to make the first payment on the land, regardless of his fitness.

A. There has been a well-defined "back to the land" movement, which has been emphasized in California so as to bring many persons of no agricultural experience upon the land; generally they have gotten by very painfully or not at all; and that has contributed very much to many of the failures.

Q. The third cause is all-around ignorance on both sides.

A. California has been in the habit of advertising widely, without discretion, and has brought people upon all sorts of land in California without much regard to their adaptability.

Q. The next cause is excessive overcost of land.

A. There has been a constant, upward tendency in the price of land in California due to the fact that much land has been in the hands of promoters who sought to realize far in advance of the productiveness of the land.

Q. It has been stated to us that it has cost as much as $60 an acre for selling expense, pure and simple, to dispose of the land, the value of which in its raw state is all the way from $35 to $50 an acre.

A. The prices have been quite chaotic on some projects. They have been putting an undue burden on agriculture.

Q. The next cause is said to be insufficient capital on the part of the settler. That is, many settlers have been led to believe by literature and representations made them by promoters, that if they had money enough to make the first payment on the land, the land would do the rest.

A. Conditions in California very plainly demonstrate that under present conditions making small payments upon impossible land has almost invariably led to disaster; that people without capital have not been able to take up even government land, acquired without practically any cost at all, and make good on it, however good is the land; that the period of development requires capital, so that California, while widely advertising her land and her resources throughout the country, has no real opportunities to offer the people who must capitalize themselves; that many eager people with small capital, who have had agricultural experience, have been utterly unable to avail themselves of the opportunities offered; and that California has been denied a great many very valuable settlers.

Testimony of Mr. E. E. MANHEIM, vice president, Farmers National Bank, Fresno, California.

Q. Do you know of any man who conscientiously could invite a friend to settle in California today with a limited capital of $2,000 or $2,500, which represents his life's savings? Could he invite this friend to settle here and avail himself of the opportunities that are usually offered by the land colonization scheme, that is, 40 acres at $200 an acre, one-fifth down and the balance at two or three or four years with interest at 7 per cent or 8 per cent?

A. No.

Q. Then we know of no man that would invite a friend who was a homeseeker to come here; and on the other hand, we have the fact that there is no capitalist who would be willing to invest his money in a land colonization enterprise in California. Have we not arrived at a state of arrested rural development?

A. Yes, we are at the end. * * *

A. I have known instances almost parallel with the case you cite. In one instance the land was sold at $250 an acre; it cost originally less than $75 an acre, with 30 per cent as the cost of selling, 20 per cent for agents, and 10 per cent overhead for the cost of offices and maintaining the organization; and the seller figured that he should have 25 per cent on the sale of the land for the risk he took. Thus land that cost originally less than $75 cost the settler $250, and there were conditions under which the settler could not exist.

Q. This land then cost originally less than $75 an acre, and had added to it a burden of $75 an acre for selling cost. That would make the selling cost greater than the first cost.

A. I have owned land in another district that was divided ten or twelve years ago. It was bought and sold without selling expense; no advertising and no brokerage, and the land was sold at an average price of approximately $50 an acre for 12,000 acres. It was sold in less than two years to settlers; and most of them have made good.

Q. It has been pointed out that despite all these handicaps some have succeeded. Is it not a fact that a much greater percentage would have succeeded if they had had a different proposition?

A. I think that when excessive prices are paid by the first man and he has to relinquish the land, the next man, or at least the third man, will get the land at the proper price and be able to go ahead with the development and make a success. * * *

A. Judging from my experience, and it is practically the same as the experience of other bankers, I think that among men who have bought land here with sufficient money to get fairly started, there have been remarkably few cases of foreclosure. There were times when the farmers were slow, but it was simply a matter of giving them time.

Q. Your territory is particularly fortunate.

A. The development of the land should be on a different basis. It is almost all wrong. At present it is generally giving no chance to the settler, for the plan of repayment on short loans is impracticable and expensive. Some other method will have to be found that will not subject the settler to repayment in a few years at a high rate of interest.

Testimony of Mr. C. B. MESSENGER, editor California Cultivator, Los Angeles, California.

Q. Do you feel, Mr. Messenger, that private capital can advance sufficient credit to this field of rural credit to meet its needs?

A. No. At least, it has not. It may be that the reason the farmers could not meet the commercial rates was because of the circumstances in which they were placed. But if there is some way in which farmers can get assurances of their security, and if they can get their payments spread in a reasonable way, they will be all right; but it will have to be different from now. I had hoped the building and loan associations would help out, but they must establish a credit. When they can establish the worth of their stock they will be all right, but I do not think that their loans will be a drop in the bucket compared with the needs of development. A report of an investigation of the equipment of farmers shows that not half of them were properly equipped as to stock and implements, so that if the need for equipment should be met, you can see how much capital would be required.

Testimony of Mr. MARSHALL STINSON, lawyer and landowner, Los Angeles, California.

In this land development, first, there is the raw land, where men start out; this generally attracts a class of speculative farmers who go to the land in the hope of selling at a profit. Then comes the class of homeseekers who want to make homes; their struggles are terrific, but as a rule they fail. Third comes the type of farmer who moves to a new town. You will see him go to the bank and pretty soon he will be located on a piece of land and will be getting along. That man is the man you want to benefit. I do not know whether this plan will benefit him directly, but it will indirectly. If there is any way in which funds could be provided for the country banker I think it would be a help to let him wrestle with the problems. It all goes back to the question of marketing. I have had some experience in the last month with a man who borrowed some money to market his crop. When he had harvested the crop, the loan took all his money.

It is a serious thing to get a loan at the present time on account of the cost. For instance, if you get money from the insurance companies, you have to pay a big fee to have them look over the title; in many instances there is a loan broker who has to have a commission; and other expenses absorb all the money the man has or gets out of the crops. The man I am speaking of wanted to borrow money to harvest his crop also, and after he had the money I advised him to go down to the land himself. He did. Then I told him to go right to the local bank and explain the situation. He did, but they would not let him have money even to purchase his cans and other little things.

Testimony of EDWIN F. HARRIS, bank cashier, Commercial and Savings Bank of Stockton.

Q. I take it you are more or less familiar with the delta land. Can you tell us how much acreage there is there?

A. No, it would only be a guess on my part.

Q. The delta lands include the lands bordering on the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers and the islands between them. Roughly speaking, about what acreage does that embrace?

A. About 500,000.

Q. What is the value of the delta lands?

A. That is pretty hard to answer.

Q. What is the minimum?

A. From $75 up.

Q. What is the maximum?

A. $300.

Q. Would the average be $200?

A. I think so.

Q. Then the value of the land is about $100,000,000. About what proportion of the land is farmed by owners and what proportion by tenants?

A. I can only guess, but I think only 25 per cent by owners and 75 per cent by tenants.

Q. Can you estimate what proportion of that 75 per cent are Orientals?

A. I should think possibly 75 per cent Orientals.

Q. 75 per cent of the 75 per cent are Orientals?

A. Yes.

Q. The farms are rented at an annual rental from year to year?

A. Yes.

Q. Has the renter any assurance of the renewal of the lease?

A. No, the average land lease is made for one year.

Q. Then, his lease of life being brief, it is reasonable to assume that he takes all that he can get out of the soil and puts back just as little as he can?

A. That is absolutely the fact.

Q. Is not that steadily depreciating the quality of the soil?

A. It surely is.

Q. What must be the ultimate?

A. Any one can see that.

Q. Then there is $100,000,000 worth of property steadily depreciating in value?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the minimum number of acres in the delta that would support in decency a white family?

A. Well, I do not know exactly.

Q. Take land in your vicinity; take a man with a wife and two or three babies. What would be the least number of acres to support him in the same manner he would support himself if he lived in the city and earned $800 a year, which is the average earning of the unskilled laborer? In other words, how many acres will he have to have to earn $800 a year?

A. Five acres.

Q. Then he certainly can on ten?

A. Well, one family can not handle ten without outside help.

Q. Suppose you have ten acres to the family; there might be 50,000 families there, might there not?

A. Yes.

Q. In other words, the land can well support 50,000 families.

A. That is right.

Q. Those could live there if they handled the land properly. It is reasonable to assume that if the man owns the land he is going to take care of it.

A. That depends on the man.

Q. Let us assume we have the right man.

A. The right man will improve the land and not let it depreciate.

Q. Then we have a great land there. How does it compare with what is said to be the richest land in the world, the land along the Nile?

A. I think, from the reports, that it runs about the highest.

Q. Then we have, practically within a stone's throw from the State Capitol, 500,000 acres of the richest land in the world, which when improved would support a very large number of people. It appears, then, that the present situation is unfortunate with this richest land in the world being steadily depreciated.

A. I feel that way about it.

Q. Would it be worth while for the state to take up and endeavor to solve the problem? If there were a way by which these renters could be replaced by white families, do you feel that it would be an advantage to the state?

A. It surely would.

Q. As you doubtless know, the commission is going through the state, seeking information and endeavoring to come in touch with those who are interested in this movement, looking at the matter from every angle so that it may use the highest intelligence in making suggestions. Now, if you have any suggestions that you would like to make to the commission that will be helpful we shall be glad to have them.

A. No, I do not know that I have. I am heartily in favor of the movement. I think the delta land is suffering a great deal from the lack of that particular thing. We have these renters, who only get a lease for one year at a very high figure, and they naturally attempt to get every dollar from the soil they can regardless of the effect on the soil. Those who are not fortunate enough to rent their land to these Orientals, in a great many cases do not farm the land at all.

Q. The present system is then impoverishing the state instead of enriching it?

A. That is the way I feel about it. There is a lack of proper cultivation, a lack of proper farmers, and a lack of proper handling.

Testimony of J. A. AGGLER, farmer, Stockton, California.

Q. For your information let me read from the record, and see if you agree with the views of Mr. Harris [began reading in the testimony of Mr. Harris, October 6, 1915, at "I take it you are more or less familiar with the delta lands"].

A. I do not think there are 25 per cent of owners.

Q. What is your estimate of the proportion farmed by owners?

A. I would not want to say; but it is very little.

Q. Ten per cent?

A. Well, I am not well acquainted with the situation, but I think 90 per cent and 10 per cent would be about right.

Q. How does his estimate of Orientals impress you?

A. I would say there are more Hindus and Italians. It is a fact that these renters only take what they can out of the soil. However, a potato farmer wants his land but one year, and then he has to move to rotate the crop; so it is not a hardship to move. They raise potatoes a year, and then beans and barley. That is the way they rotate from year to year. The Italians and the Portuguese raise beans and the Chinamen raise the potatoes, while the Americans raise the grain. Sometimes the Chinamen raise beans. [At this point Mr. Weinstock read the rest of the testimony of Mr. Harris that refers to conditions in the delta.]

Q. Is it your opinion that these lands are steadily depreciating?

A. Yes, I asked a man the other day what he was going to do when he could not raise potatoes.

Q. What acreage would support a family here, in your estimation?

A. Twenty acres would be plenty.

Q. What is your idea of the tenant situation?

A. I think that if you have farmers or settlers they would be better than these tenants. Most of the tenants are poor farmers, and an ordinary camp in the delta is 200 acres. On the Rindge tract and others there are about 200 acres in each camp, and that is too big to farm right. They make big money if they get a good crop, but if they pay cash rent and don't get a crop they will not harvest at all.

Q. Then if the renter sees that he is not going to make anything he throws up the sponge?

A. Yes, if the potatoes do not pay he will not dig the crop. Some of them rent for cash and then sublet on shares, and some of them pay a cash rental.

Q. Do you consider the present conditions satisfactory?

A. No, they are not good for the country or the man or the land.

Q. Do you agree with Mr. Harris that there is a valuable asset in the form of this rich land that is being steadily depreciated?

A. Yes, I do. A man asked me a while ago why my land was better than my neighbors and I told them it was because it was better worked. You can not burn your straw or weeds, for the land will burn up; and others don't take the trouble to get rid of them.

Q. Have you any remedy in mind to meet these problems—something which will bring about the best conditions in place of the worst conditions?

A. Have the land in small holdings.

Several hundred settlers supplemented the statistical information furnished, by a statement of their views regarding conditions and their own prospects. Four of these are given. Each is from a different colony; and they are fairly representative of the sentiment and experience of settlers in all colonies. The name of the settler and the location of the colony are withheld at the request of the settler:

Mr. _____ of _____ colony bought 80 acres at $185 an acre and paid cash for it. Capital at time of purchase $22,300.

Statement of settler: "In starting on raw land the land should be bought from $50 to $100 per acre for good land to allow a person to improve and pay for the land and play safe. The rate of interest should not exceed 5 per cent and the time should run from 20 to 30 years. My prospects for success at present look good owing to my being fortunate enough to keep out of debt and carry myself along while bringing the land to a state of production. No appreciable returns can be expected here on raw land short of the third season."

Mr. _____ of _____ colony bought 12 $\frac{1}{4}$ acres at \$150 per acre to be paid for within ten years.

Statement of settler: "Land was sold to me on following terms: Conditions of payment 10 per cent cash, $10 per month on principal and 6 per cent interest. When 50 per cent is paid balance is due and payable. The promoter has been very well paid for everything he has done here and nothing whatever has been done without good pay in sight. He has not pushed purchasers who fell back in payments. He has helped all of us to that extent. As to advice on what to plant and how, we have looked out for ourselves. Most settlers have lived by working for absent owners who have their orchards planted on contract. We have been very much handicapped by inadequate water supply. Better marketing organizations and cooperation are imperative for our success. Our colony is worth all it has cost us and will be a continued success as most orchards are well planted and well cared for."

Mr. _____ of _____ colony bought 19.1 acres for $3,000, to be paid in eight years.

Statement of settler: "I paid just twice too much for my place. It was worth just $1,500. My water contract does not give me enough water. With outside work I will eventually succeed. If I could borrow money at reasonable terms the problem would be greatly reduced and my chances would greatly increase. The company gave advice but it was no good. They also bought us cows but they were no good; so we got rid of them."

Mr. _____ of _____ colony bought 10 acres at $200 an acre to be paid for within five years.

Statement of settler: "Our place has building restriction of $2,500 for dwelling house and this was a hardship in the first place. We commenced by putting up a shack and intended that to do for a few years, but were compelled to build the $2,500 dwelling in a year from date of settlement. We were running a general painting business during the time and continued to do so as there was nothing to make from the land for the first year, and we found by the second year that the alfalfa did very little better than the first. In my estimation our soil was too heavy for alfalfa, but we, inexperienced in farming, did not know better. And again, the contractor who checked and sowed our land for alfalfa said it was not necessary to plow it, so it was first checked, irrigated and disked before sowing, which we found later was wrong, as it should have been plowed very deep to break up the plow-pan which was very hard on the heavy soil. I can see no way of paying for this land without working at something outside of the farm, and it will be almost impossible then, because the farm is neglected when I do so. In the first place the price of the land was too high. Second, no competent advice on what was suitable for the soil and how to prepare the soil properly for the crop was given."

The statistics of the cost of farms and the income from them, the testimony of scores of able and experienced men, the unfortunate number of settlers who have failed, the regrettable misrepresentation which has characterized the operations of many land-selling agents, and the extensions of time which have had to be given by colonization enterprises, all lead to the conclusion that private colonization in this state has been costly and unsatisfactory and that some more efficient and economic system must be devised.

This brings up for discussion the causes for this failure. It is only through having these causes clearly understood that a foundation for adequate reform can be laid.

BEGINNING OF SPECULATIVE LAND COLONIZATION

About the beginning of this century California presented an unusually attractive field for colonization enterprises and for the speculative buyer of farm lands. The large wheat and stock ranches could be bought at very low figures. They were in the same state and often in the same county where orange groves, orchards, and vineyards were selling for prices unthought of in other parts of the United States. The question naturally arose, "What is to prevent buying these large areas and by the simple device of subdivision selling them for the far higher price being paid for small improved farms?"

In no other part of the United States was there so wide a difference between the price of improved and unimproved land. Wheat farms, already provided with water for irrigation, or which could be irrigated at a reasonable cost, could be bought for from $10 to $50 an acre. Some of these farms had the same soil and climate as the orchards and vineyards which were selling for from $100 to $1,000 an acre. The immigrant from the corn-growing states of the Middle West or from Ignorance of cost the shops and stores of Eastern cities had no conception of the amount of money and time required to convert ungraded, uncultivated land into dairy farms or orange groves. He could easily be induced to pay almost the price of the planted and producing orchard and vineyard for the unimproved wheat field. The purchase, subdivision and closer settlement of farm land became, therefore, an important business in which thousands of men were engaged.

Real estate operators from the overdone and less profitable fields of the Middle West flocked to this new Eldorado, not to develop agriculture in California, but to exploit it. It was the paradise Agriculture exploited of the boomer because in rural advantages and attractions the state stands alone. In no other state can such a wide range of crops or so many high priced products be grown. No other state affords the farmer or fruit grower an equal opportunity to exercise intelligence and scientific knowledge in planning his work.

SPECIAL KNOWLEDGE AND SKILL REQUIRED

To get good results, however, more is required than simply a subdivision of farms and an inflation of land prices. Not every man is suited to become an orange grower or has the habits of careful thoroughness needed in intensive culture of any kind. To create communities like Redlands in the south or the Santa Clara Valley in the north requires workers of superior intelligence. If not already trained, they must be willing to undergo an apprenticeship in a most exacting form of agriculture, which makes far greater demands in the way of knowledge and skill than is required in the fertile corn and wheat growing states of the Middle West.

COLONIZATION SHOULD BE IN ACCORD WITH PREARRANGED PLANS

The best results in California can only be secured when colonization is carried out in accordance with carefully thought out plans having Community welfare not regarded in view the creation of a definite form of agriculture or horticulture. This fact has not been recognized by the speculative colonizing agent. He gave no more thought to community welfare or to the ultimate results of his enterprise than he would to the results of buying or selling grain or coal. Land to him was merchandise to be bought at the cheapest possible price and sold for as much money as the settler could be induced to pay.

The inevitable tendency of this kind of development is to inflate prices. To promote this inflation in California nearly every device was utilized. Prices inflated; which human ingenuity could contrive was utilized. character of In the end it largely defeated the primary object, colonists lowered which was profit, because as prices rose above productive values the number of experienced and intelligent buyers rapidly fell off. Colonization agents had to accept as settlers men less qualified to judge of opportunities and hence less fitted to succeed. The search for colonists had to be extended and the cost of finding them increased. Finally, the fishers for homeseekers began to angle for smaller fry. Instead of trying to sell a living area of 80 or 40 acres, the farm unit was cut down to 20 acres, and then to 10 and 5 acres; and finally there were colonies where one acre was assumed to provide a satisfactory income for a family.

COLONIZERS NOT DISHONEST

Relatively few of the men engaged in this business were knowingly dishonest, but the majority of them were unthinking and ignorant. They did not know, nor did they apparently care to know, how settlers were to obtain the money needed to improve and equip the farms sold them or how they were to earn a living income. The prosperity of the settler was his own affair. The land agent's business was to make money out of him rather than to make money for him. The extent to which the land agent inflated prices in carrying out this idea is illustrated by the following:

A wheat ranch was bought for $7.00 an acre. The buyer organized a syndicate composed of himself and his stenographer and sold the land Example of evil to this syndicate for $100 an acre. Then as a syndicate of inflated prices he subdivided the land and sold it to settlers for $200 an acre. No settler who paid the outrageously inflated price could earn either the purchase price or the interest on it out of the soil. Yet strange as it may seem, sales of this character were made with ease. In part this was due to many of the buyers being also speculators. They bought these 10, 20 or 40 acre tracts exactly as they would corner lots in a boom town. They were shown how land bought for $7 an acre was selling for $200 an acre, and the prediction was made that next year it would sell for $400 an acre. This did not seem impossible. The air was full of stories of the millions made out of subdivisions. Men who were not farmers and who never expected to be farmers caught at this prospect of quick and easy money and paid a deposit on 10 or 20 acres. If there were an early rise, they sold out and took the profit. If not, they lost the first payment. Rarely did they make a second one.

For a time it was comparatively easy to sell land to Eastern farmers. They had no standard for comparing productive values in California with the kind of farming they understood. The returns from a corn field gave no indication of what could be made from an orange grove. When a buyer was told that if he had money enough to make the first payment the land would do the rest, he accepted this as reliable advice and invested nearly all his capital in a first payment. The land did the rest, which too often was to turn him adrift with the loss of his money and the gain of some disagreeable experience.

One colonization enterprise bought about 150,000 acres at an average of less than $40 an acre. The average selling price was started at about $75, but subsequently was raised to $175 an acre. The agent's commission at the higher price was 30 per cent, so that he was paid for selling the land considerably more than it cost.

On another colony project an Eastern selling agency took the contract of disposing of the land for a commission of 20 per cent on the selling price. No limit was placed on the price the agent could ask; so the price of farms which had been selling for $150 an acre was raised to $400 an acre and the agents thereby more than doubled their commissions. As the terms of the sale were one-fifth cash, balance in four yearly installments, the selling agent took all the first payment and sought to induce the settler to buy enough land to absorb all his capital. When this was done, the agent pocketed the whole as a commission for making the sale. When the project area was all sold the owner held the contracts of a lot of moneyless, inexperienced people who were a liability rather than an asset. The selling agent had all the coin.

LACK OF BUSINESS JUDGMENT ON THE PART OF SETTLERS

At first colonization companies sought land and good conditions in other respects. Later companies were organized which held that all lands looked alike. The main question was price. One who was seeking a ranch to exploit asked where in the great valleys of the state he could buy 5,000 acres at $25 an acre. He was told that only hardpan and alkali land could be bought for that price. The reply was that the quality of land made no difference; any kind of land which could be bought for $25 an acre could be colonized. One tract of hog-wallow, hardpan land in the Oakdale district was subdivided and traded for houses and lots in Los Angeles. Only three purchasers remain in that colony. Probably not one of them had any intention of remaining. Each one sold a house at a high price and was paid in land at a higher price.

In another district a tract of "goose" land sold one year for $5.00 an acre, the next year for $15 an acre, and was then subdivided and sold as garden soil for $125 an acre. Three brothers who were market gardeners bought farms there and moved on with their families. They found when the soil was wet it was a quagmire and when it was dry it could only be cultivated with dynamite. In three years time they had not raised enough to keep a goat alive and had to abandon their homes, losing their money and time and carrying with them a bitter feeling of injustice and wrong.

The lack of prudence and business judgment shown by colonists was amazing. One with a capital of $1,575 paid $1,500 of it as a first payment on a farm costing $7,500. He had $75 left with Colonists' lack of business judgment which to build a house, buy a team and farm equipment and pay living expenses until a crop could be grown. Surrendering the $1,500 is as far as he ever got towards becoming a farmer in California. Another colonist landed in one of the settlements with a wife, four small children and $1,100. The day he arrived he turned over $1,000 of his $1,100 as a one-fifth payment on 40 acres of land. At night he had $100 in cash and a debt of $4,000. He faced a large expenditure for house, team, tools, preparation of the soil for cultivation, all of which must be made before he could earn a living from the land. Away from the persuasive magic of the agent, he realized how impossible was the task and the next morning he applied to the owner of the land for the return of his money. The owner told him that all of the first payment had been pocketed by the agent as commission, and that not only had the landowner received nothing out of the $1,000, but on the contrary owed the agent $500 because he had agreed to pay 30 per cent commission on the selling price. This settler and his family also gave up home making in California and spent their remaining $100 in getting out of the state.

WHERE LANDOWNERS SOLD DIRECTLY TO SETTLERS RESULTS USUALLY SATISFACTORY

It is to the credit of some California landowners that they were not carried away by this speculative inflation, but continued to sell land at relatively low prices and to sell only to those who were believed to have a reasonable chance of success. Later on some instances of this will be given. We are now dealing with those features of unregulated colonization which show the need for state supervision.

Few of the colony lands of California have been sold directly by the owners. In most cases subdivision and sale was entrusted to a selling Misrepresentation agent and he in turn employed many assistants or due to agents divided his commission with others. Many of those with whom the colonist dealt were itinerant and irresponsible and most of the misrepresentation and disregard of settlers' interests were due to these subordinates.

Where landowners have dealt directly with settlers, there has been little complaint and there are notable instances where the owner has assumed a moral responsibility for the settler's success, although there was no legal liability.

EXCESSIVE COMMISSIONS TO AGENTS

In time there were more farms than colonists. The number of homeseekers was falling off. The percentage who bought was declining. It took more money, time, and ability to sell land for $150 to $300 an acre than to sell it for one-third these figures. To meet the greater expenses commissions rose from 5 per cent and 10 per cent to 20 per cent and 30 per cent and even 40 per cent of the selling price. In one colony where the land before subdivision was offered for sale for $40 an acre, the agent's commission after subdivision was $80 an acre.

SPECULATIVE SETTLEMENT HAS ENDED

This speculative colonization, which began about 1900 and reached its culmination about fifteen years later, has now run its course. It worked infinite harm to many honest, industrious, but oversanguine and credulous homeseekers. It interrupted and changed the character of the conservative and successful development which was going on when it began. It has enabled nonresident speculators to take away from the state millions of dollars as the profits of an unwarranted inflation of prices and it has caused or will cause anxiety and heavy losses to many landowners who are depending on settlers without either capital or experience to pay off mortgages. It has left a legacy of high land prices which threatens to be a heavy economic burden on the state. Practical, experienced farmers will not come to California if land of equal productive value in other states is cheaper.

Cheap production goes with cheap land. High land prices mean higher taxes and larger interest charges. These have to be paid through higher prices for products or a lower standard of living for farmers. The milk producers who supply San Francisco are asking a higher price for milk. In showing the need for this one dairyman explained that ten years ago he only paid $800 a year rent for the land on which his dairy herd feeds. Later on this rent was raised to $1,700 a year; and he has now notice of an increase to $2,500 a year. The owner of the land has made no improvements; it produces less food for the dairy herd than it did when the rent was low. In this case the rental cost has been raised $1,700 a year. The only way to increase the income is by raising the price of milk. In this case, and in many other cases which have been brought to our attention, higher rent means higher cost of food.

Where these results are due to speculative manipulation of land prices they are an economic evil with no compensating public advantage.

WHY COLONIZATION IN CALIFORNIA SHOULD BE UNDER PUBLIC CONTROL

In the greater part of the United States there has been little need of public supervision of rural development. The kind of crops which can be grown or the preliminary outlay required are both restricted to such narrow limits that little variation in methods is possible. It is otherwise in California. Here much of the best land has to be irrigated, a large percentage needs to be drained, and some has to be protected against floods. Every acre of irrigated land must have a right to water and the character of that right is about as important as the validity of the land title. To prepare some areas properly for settlement involves an immense expenditure of money. Ultimate results Expert advice depend quite largely on the honesty and efficiency needed by settlers of those in charge. Some colonization enterprises have not taken their obligations in these matters as seriously as they should.

It is practically impossible for an immigrant from a humid section to protect himself from misrepresentation in this matter. A native son finds it difficult. One who bought land guaranteed to have an ample water supply for irrigation with an undisputed right thereto found after purchase that the supply was good, but was 300 feet below the surface, and the water right was unquestioned because no one could afford to dig for it.

SPECIAL NEED FOR PUBLIC SUPERVISION OF COLONY PLANS IN IRRIGATED AREAS

Water and climate, as well as soil, influence the value of agricultural land in much of California. Wherever irrigation is required colony plans should provide for the efficient use of streams. The need for this has not been realized in the past because when the demands on streams are small economical use is ignored. But as the irrigated area extends and population increases, so does the demand for water increase, and the struggle for its control increases in a like measure.

In great irrigable areas like the San Joaquin and the Sacramento valleys all agricultural development will in time be bound together Coordinated by a common dependence on the streams. For this action necessary reason the ultimate results will be more satisfactory if colonization is carried out in accordance with a carefully thought out plan which will embrace all the irrigable land in each watershed. Confusion is coming upon us because we are working without direction, cooperation or plan.

Nowhere is the need for coordinated action more clearly shown than under the Crocker-Huffman canal. This water system can be made to irrigate a hundred thousand acres of land. Although privately owned, its magnitude and the number of people dependent upon it gives it a public character. From time to time individuals or companies have bought tracts of land varying from a few hundred to several thousand acres, subdivided them, made a contract with the Crocker-Huffman Company for water, and then sold the land with a water right to colonists. There are now fifty-two colonies under this system. These have no organic relation to each other and no voice in the management of the canal. The water right agreements in the different colonies are not the same and the prices paid for water vary widely.

Example of lack of coordination As a result there is much friction which has led to litigation and threatens more. It would be better
Crocker-Huffman canal for all concerned if there were one water right contract, one charge, and a management in which all irrigators could participate. In other words, what began as a private undertaking has by its growth assumed a public character, in which necessary adjustments are far more difficult to make than they would have been if thought out in the beginning.

This situation might be ignored if we were nearing the end of development. But we are only in the beginning. On nearly every tributary Crocker-Huffman of the San Joaquin and Sacramento rivers there are situation typical similar conditions. There is probably no other canal which supplies fifty-two colonies. There are, however, irrigation districts and irrigation systems, each with a large number of colonies operating without relation to each other and nearly all of them feeling a need for coordination, for uniformity, for more efficient distribution and, looming in the near future, for the need for an immense expenditure of money in the construction of storage works. These works ought to be built, but the difficulty is to get the unorganized colonies to agree, and in the absence of agreement to secure money at reasonable rates of interest.

It has been proposed that the state guarantee bonds and provide this money, and the lower rate of interest which this would insure justifies its careful consideration. But before that is undertaken the whole plan of development, the location of lands to be irrigated and a definite conclusion as to how canal systems ought to be operated should be thought out, this being all a part of the general problem of colonization.

NEED FOR ADVICE ABOUT SOIL AND CLIMATE

The quality of the soil in California varies greatly and abruptly. There are quarter sections of land of which parts are rented for $20 Variations in soil an acre and parts will not rent for $1.00 an acre. On one side of the fence land sells for $150 an acre and is worth the price. On the other side it is not worth $10 an acre. The settler should not be left to find out these facts after having parted with his money. There ought to be a soil survey of all colony lands.

From Maine to the borders of California the buyer of a farm knows or can easily learn the limit which climate puts on the crops he can Influence of climate grow. He knows that there is a summer season of seed time and harvest and a winter season of stagnation. In California he finds all these climatic limitations set aside. In much of the state there is no dead season. Crops can be planted every month of the year. Temperature ceases to be controlled by latitude and oranges ripen as early and as surely at Oroville in northern California as at Riverside in southern California. Elevation, on the contrary, exercises an influence not realized by most settlers. At a certain elevation the land may have a high value for citrus fruits, because it is in the frostless belt; 100 feet below frosts may make the growing of oranges too hazardous to be profitable.

The factors of soil, climate, water supply, and markets, which affect the value of land and the well-being of settlers, are so important that Best results obtained by organization they make of colonization a scientific problem. The best results to the state can only be secured by recognizing this and invoking and using scientific knowledge in shaping our future development. The nature of land ownership and the need for community organization for the distribution of irrigating water, for drainage, and for the marketing of crops requires that at the basis of all colonies there should be a sound economic and social organization. It is largely because we have not recognized this that 73 per cent of California's growth in population during the five years from 1910 to 1915 was in the cities, and that the increase in the farming population was so small as to be disquieting. Rural settlement is not keeping pace with the city settlement, although each year immense sums of money are spent by railroads, counties, and commercial bodies in calling attention to the attractions of rural California.

REASON FOR DECREASE IN RATE OF SETTLEMENT

The falling off in the number of landseekers in the last two or three years has not been confined to California. It has been equally marked High price of unimproved land in other Western states. The principal reason for it everywhere is the high price of unimproved land. With a suddenness that prevents our realizing it, we have reached a situation in Western irrigation districts where a man with from $1,000 to $3,000 capital has no better chance of becoming a farm owner than did the peasant farmer in Europe a generation ago. The acreage cost of the irrigated farm in many new sparsely settled districts, is greater than the acreage cost of farms in the densely peopled sections of England and Germany. The purchase of farms has therefore become too costly for the men who most need them and who will make the best use of them.

For a time, in California as in other states, the colonist with limited capital believed that he could continue to do what the man who had obtained free public land had done, that is, pay for a farm by his unaided efforts. But land which costs from $100 to $150 an acre in its unimproved state must be better farmed in order to pay interest on the higher cost. This in turn means a better equipment and a larger initial expenditure. The man with small means is therefore leaving the country or becoming a tenant farmer.

As the price of land rises fewer persons want to purchase. The land hunger is as great as ever, as is shown by the rush for public land whenever it is offered. The decline in settlement is due to the fact that the difficulties and hazards of paying for high-priced land are better understood. We must therefore be content with a slow increase in rural population or provide better credit facilities for settlers of small capital.

CHARACTER AND ABILITY OF SETTLERS IMPORTANT

One feature of colonization which this state can not afford to overlook is the need for action which will insure that the quality of its colonists is not impaired. The first settlers of California were a superior body of men and women, enterprising, intelligent and patriotic. They represented all that was best in American character. Owing to this fact California has become a great state, a leader among states in its social and political institutions, no less than in the charm and attractiveness of its rural life. It would be a calamity if that leadership should be lost by impairment of the quality of rural communities. This, it is feared, may be expected if we continue to seek as colonists men who are able and willing to pay a high price for land because they have a narrow view of life and are contented with a low standard of living.

The character and the ability of settlers are of more importance than their number. No one can estimate the value to California of Professor Hilgard, Elwood Cooper, or Luther Burbank. No one can determine how much New England gained from the high character of the settlers in Plymouth. The welfare of state ideals and the high moral purpose of the settlers in the Western Reserve in Ohio did much to make that state a breeding ground for presidents. The Greeley colony in Colorado did more than perpetuate the name of a great editor. It made irrigated agriculture and the creation of beautiful homes in the Rocky Mountain region a concrete reality and helped to check the vicious acquirement of the public domain by speculators.

The character of our colonists will do more than any other single influence to make California an attractive place to live in or a good place to avoid. They will be voters. Their children will fill the rural schools, on which we are now spending annually about $6,500,000 to help to create good citizens. Our success in this will depend quite largely on the kind of homes the children come from and the civic ideals which their parents seek to establish. This political side of colonization has not been given the attention it deserves. Steadiness and sanity in our political life depend quite largely on the influence and the intelligence of the country voter.

PART III

PROBLEMS OF TENANTRY AND FARM LABOR

GROWING MENACE OF TENANT FARMING

On account of the great landed estates tenant farming has always had an important place in the agriculture of California, but with the Early tenants rise in land prices and the adoption of intensive cultivation it has taken on a new and less desirable aspect. Americans In the earlier history of California the tenant farmer was usually an integral part of the community. He was an American with an interest in national, state, and local affairs, as ready as the landowner to work for the upbuilding of the neighborhood.

In recent years, however, there have been growing up in California tenant communities made up almost entirely of Asiatics or of peasants Increase of from those portions of Europe where life is sordid foreign tenants and the standards of living are low. These tenants of low standards have no interest in community needs. They maintain their racial indifference and aloofness. They are not a contribution to our political or social strength. They are willing and able to pay high rents, not because their methods of farming are better, though as a rule they are good farmers, but because they live more frugally than the American or the immigrant from Northern Europe. In other words, while Northern Europe is lifting the peasant farmers into a more independent and generous life, California is creating conditions which are in some cases worse than those of the European peasant, because the European landlord had certain obligations founded on feudal customs and supported by public opinion which do not exist here.

“The English landowner who deprived an old tenant of possession because a new tenant was ready and able to pay a higher rental forfeited social consideration. In America the land- Contrast owner was subject to no such restriction. If he between America rented his land he was expected to get what he could. and England If he sold it he was expected to sell it at the highest price obtainable. As long as he did not rent his property to people who would use it for immoral purposes, or sell it to notoriously undesirable citizens, the public would not condemn him for seeking the best market he could get.” Hadley: “Undercurrents in American Politics” (p. 60).

It is undoubtedly true that many landowners can obtain a higher return from their land by renting it than in any other way. It is probably true, also, that the class of people who form the bulk of the tenantry are living better than ever before. But this does not mean the kind of community life which is being created is desirable or that the sort of development which is going on can become permanent or be extended without lowering the standard of this state's civilization.

This seems an appropriate place to quote a portion of the report of Mr. T. Chamberlain, one of the graduate-student investigators on conditions in Placer County.

TENANTRY FROM A BUSINESS STANDPOINT

"If we consider that business is good wherever money is being made, then we must say that business is good in the fruit belt, for it is customary for owners to make 10 per cent and even 15 per cent on their investment. One owner states that any man with a 40-acre ranch can rent to Japanese and make from $1,200 to $2,000 a year without ever going near it. Several owners stated that they would not be able to make money without the Japanese and said that before the Japanese came the fruit business was not as profitable as it is now.

"When the owner makes money the tenant also prospers. Mr. Snelling, who superintends twenty-two ranches, states that the tenants average $1,000 a year. A number of Japanese tenants have become quite wealthy and have returned to Japan.

"From a money-making standpoint, the present system of tenantry seems satisfactory to both the tenants and the owners."

TENANTRY FROM A SOCIAL STANDPOINT

"There can be no more conclusive proof of the need for a sound policy of land settlement than the social conditions which prevail at the present time in the Placer County fruit belt.

"In the vicinity of Penryn there are eight ranches being run by owners, while sixty are rented. Although the proportion of rented ranches in other sections is smaller, fully 50 per cent of the ranches for the entire fruit belt are rented. There are about twenty ranches in the vicinity of Penryn whose owners live outside the county. The resident owners in many cases work elsewhere. It is a common experience to find four or five fruit ranch owners working for a salary in a fruit house. Some of the town people say a man can not get a job in a fruit house unless he owns a ranch and ships his fruit through the house affording him employment. Among the owners who are not employed off the ranches, some spend their time in improving their places, attending to the irrigation, and even working for their own tenants for wages, but the greater number spend their time in their automobiles.

"Not only is the problem one of tenancy and absentee landlordism, but the question of the large landowner enters in. In the Tenantry from social standpoint deplorable Penryn district one company owns sixteen ranches and rents six more. All these ranches are rented to Japanese and a superintendent spends his time motoring from one ranch to another. A number of other ranchers own from two to six places. Five men in the Penryn district own twenty ranches between them.

"The result of these rented ranches, absent landlords, and large holdings is a most deplorable social condition. After looking out over the country surrounding Penryn and seeing the luxuriant development of the fruit ranches and the many large residences, one expects to find a prosperous and thriving community. But on investigation it is found that almost all of these large houses are vacant and in place of a prosperous town there is only a lingering memory of conditions as they used to be. The owners who previously worked their own places and built these homes have now rented to the Japanese and moved elsewhere to live. It is confidently stated by older residents that Penryn was a better town twenty years ago when the surrounding country had not even approached its present development. Socially, the community is dead."

What is known as the Delta District in California is perhaps one of the richest tracts of farming land in the United States. With its climatic advantages, it ought to be one of the most progressive and prosperous rural communities to be found anywhere. Material advantages in the way of soil and climate ought to produce desirable social and economic conditions. If they do not, there is evidence of something wrong in our policy.

This Delta District has an area of approximately 300,000 acres. On it are a few fine homes, nearly all of them vacant because the owners have given them up and departed for the city. This rich district is practically given over to tenants. They live in tents or houses that are unsanitary and devoid of beauty or conveniences. They pay rents that compare unfavorably with some of the examples of rack rented tenant farming in Europe. All of the leases are for a short time, usually from one to three years, with some extending over five years. Thus the Social and economic conditions of Delta District bad great body of cultivators have no interest in community welfare. Besides, they are mainly aliens, Japanese, Chinese, Hindus, and Portuguese predominating. None of these tenants give any attention to maintaining the fertility of the soil; as a rule there is no rotation of crops. The land is cultivated until it becomes unprofitable and then the tenant moves. The summary in Mr. Edwin E. Cox's report serves to render it apparent to any one who regards California otherwise than simply as a place to make money that tenant farming here is even less desirable than in other parts of this country:

“Aside from the rapidly growing Asiatic element that can not be assimilated, the white contingent of California’s tenant class are generally living under conditions inimical to democratic citizenship. The tenant’s children can not make the desired progress in education, as they are constantly moving from one school district to another. The parents, because of their transitory life, take little interest in the schools; first, for failure to appreciate their value, and, secondly, because the children are obliged to help in the exacting routine of the family’s existence. Neighborhood solidarity, so important in communities of home owners, is seriously lacking in sections given over to tenantry and the commonwealth must correspondingly suffer.

“In addition to the social disadvantage of our admixture of Oriental and transitory white tenantry, their economic condition is even worse, because as this report shows, the average tenant, whether growing deciduous fruits, grain, or vegetables, is wholly at the mercy of the commission man. From one to three or four liens frequently cover his crop before it is harvested, and lack of a certain permanency as well as want of money causes him to rob the soil of its fertility, prevents eradication of pests, and lastly, compels him to ‘dump’ his produce into the hands of the commission man at harvest time at the latter’s price (usually the lowest of the year), leaving the tenant little better off financially than the year before, with no recourse but that of trying again next year, perhaps in a new location.”

BETTER PROVISIONS FOR FARM LABOR

Intelligent, reliable farm labor is a growing need of agriculture in practically every country. Men of superior qualifications are needed

Need for	to look after blooded live stock, to care for orchards and intelligent	vineyards, and to do the work which requires interest, farm labor	knowledge, and skill on the part of the laborer. It is becoming increasingly difficult to keep men of this type on the farm because of the constantly increased wages and greater opportunities of the city.

Everywhere it is recognized that this is one of the most difficult problems connected with agricultural progress. Under the best possible

The drawbacks	conditions there are serious drawbacks to farm labor to farm labor	which tend to drive good men away from it. There is difficulty in providing employment throughout the year. It is impossible to pay as high wages as are now paid artisans in the cities. When to this is added social ostracism or at least a position of social inferiority compared to city workers it is inevitable that the best American workers will leave the farm.

On the other hand, it is feasible to create conditions which will make life as a farm worker more desirable and as profitable to those with families as is the life of the unskilled laborer or average artisan in cities. This has been demonstrated by Ireland, Denmark, Germany, and Australia. It has been accomplished in these and other countries by enabling the laborer to own his home. In Germany these homes include from one acre to five acres of land. Such an area in the language of a government report, "permits of the cultivation of the wheat, potatoes and vegetables for the household and of the rearing of a few pigs; for milk, goats are kept and sometimes even a cow. It has, besides, the great advantage that it may be cultivated by the wife and children and does not prevent the laborer from working elsewhere. A larger holding, on the contrary, might easily induce him to neglect his paid labor."

Thousands of farm laborers' homes have been built by the Home Colonization Company, of Germany, a government body. They cost on an average of about $1,000 each. The laborer generally pays from 10 per cent to 20 per cent of the purchase price in cash. The rest is met by amortized payments. The cost of the land, according to the reports of 1912, has averaged $135 an acre. Since 1913 a great many farm laborers' homes have also been provided by local colonization companies, which have government aid. Criticism is not directed against the extent of this activity but against the failure to move fast enough. Great difficulty is experienced in preventing the inflation of land prices. To prevent inflation the government has enacted a law authorizing the compulsory purchase of 175,000 acres of land for closer settlement by farmers and laborers. The war, however, has interrupted progress.

In Australia, where natural conditions are like ours, there are great areas of unpeopled land. But the earlier nomadic and unreliable farm labor is happily disappearing in the areas which are being settled under the state system of colonization.

The first steps in this reform were made in the irrigated settlements. In these, two-acre homes for farm laborers are dotted all over the areas. Frequently four homes are grouped at road crossings. On these two-acre allotments, the state builds, when required, cheap but comfortable three or four-room houses and sells the land and houses to farm workers who show evidences of industry, experience, and character and who desire and expect to make most of their living working for wages. Only a nominal cash payment is required and at least twenty years time with a low rate of interest is given in which to complete payments.

The laborer obtaining a home under this plan can keep a cow, some pigs, and poultry. He can grow his own vegetables and thus greatly reduce the cost of living. It gives to his wife and children a sense of security and independence. To them the state becomes a benefactor. They love it for what it has done for them.

No single feature of the Australian system of closer settlement has been more popular or useful than the two-acre farm laborers' homes in the irrigation areas. The laborers are contented. They are beautifying their homes and are meeting their payments. They provide reliable, casual help for neighboring farmers and farmers' wives. The children are a valuable aid in the rush of the fruit picking season. Over 8,000 acres have been absorbed in farm laborers' allotments in the closer settlements of the state of Victoria, Australia; and the state is being asked to buy land to increase the number. The farmers who ask for this guarantee permanent employment.

In England, Ireland, Denmark, and Italy thousands of such homes have been provided for farm laborers. Their condition and their character have been immensely improved by the independence and the security which come with owning their homes and little patches of land.

One regrettable feature of all American rural life is the failure to recognize as fully as is desirable the importance of the farm laborer as Importance of a citizen and a voter. On his character and intelligence depends quite largely the productive value of farm laborer as land; and in many sections he does much to make citizen and voter rural communities socially desirable or the reverse. We are giving a great deal of attention to the efficiency of the industrial worker and to the conditions which govern his hours of liberty, his mode of living, and his competency. We should give the same attention to the farm laborer in even a greater degree. What he needs is to have a definite and self-respecting position. It ought to be possible for the farm laborer to marry, have a comfortable home for his family, and bring up his children as self-respecting members of the community. This is now not even remotely possible.

The conditions of the farm laborer, as disclosed by the investigation of the State Immigration and Housing Commission, are a menace to Present conditions our industrial future and a sorry commentary on of farm our claim to economic equality. It shows that our laborer a menace farm labor is made up of a welter of nationalities.

The list includes Albanians, East Indians, Filipinos, Greeks, Spaniards, Slavonians, Russians, Mexicans, Maltese, Japanese, Chinese, Portuguese, Armenians, Italians, a few Scotchmen and Germans, and here and there an American. Of these 60 per cent are migratory and 40 per cent are local, with jobs averaging from 10 to 15 days in length. The hours of labor are from 10 to 16. Too often they are poorly housed. Sometimes they are not housed at all; instead, they may lodge in the mesquite bush or the haystack. There is a deep-seated prejudice against American and other white farm laborers. The percentage of Japanese and Hindus is becoming larger.

The degeneration of white laborers under these conditions is inevitable. Many of them become hoboes. They lose all ambition and all regard for the interests of their employers. The sections of cities where this kind of labor congregates are injuriously affected. As a class they are discontented. With their continuous tendency towards disturbance they are a menace to political and social peace.

The remedy for this is to make conditions which will attract dependable white people, especially Americans. We can not go on creating The remedy in conditions which will attract dependable white people	bad conditions of life and seeking people who are indifferent to those conditions without destroying our rural civilization. tary houses at the cost of $1,000; when we read of one Australian state far poorer than California and with less than half our population providing 6,000 homes for laborers and 4,000 houses for farmers; we realize how far we have fallen behind the rest of the world in our understanding of rural needs and in our measures to elevate rural society.

PART IV

METHODS AND POLICIES OF OTHER COUNTRIES

Since the beginning of this century Great Britain, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Germany, Russia, Austria, Italy, the six Australian states, New Zealand, British and German South Africa, Brazil, Venezuela, and Uruguay have either adopted or greatly extended a land settlement policy which aims to give settlers homes at the least possible cost and also to finance the settler who is a good moral risk, so as to enable any one who is frugal, industrious and ambitious to own a home. The reasons which have induced all these countries to regard colonization as a public matter are well expressed in a recent report of the German government.

"Colonization has been made a public matter," says this report, "because when it was a private matter persons bought land without having funds to pay for it, only to make a profit by selling it again at the first opportunity. Unprincipled middlemen persuaded owners to part with their lands and other professional subdividers of land sometimes unscrupulously dismembered holdings with an utter disregard for economics; and the consequence has been a continual increase in the price of land."

"* * * While every other part of the country exerted itself to the utmost to strengthen and augment its agricultural resources by increasing and elevating its rural population, it can not be considered encouraging that in eastern Germany there are vast territories almost wholly in the hands of a few landed proprietors. The existence of such large landed estates not only hinders the natural progress of the peasant class, but, greatest evil of all, it is the principal cause of the diminished population of many territories because the working classes, finding no chances of moral or economic improvement, are driven to emigrate to the great cities and manufacturing districts. Scientific researches also prove that small farms nowadays are more profitable than large; above all, small live stock improved farms, the importance of which for the nutriment of the people is constantly increasing."

In these widely separated countries land settlement was not dealt with as a public matter until it became manifest that nonresident ownership and tenant cultivators were dangerous sources of social and political unrest. In Europe the peasant who wanted to own his own farm was leaving for other countries where land was cheap or the conditions of purchase favorable. So many of the people in the rural districts were leaving, and so many of those who remained were restless and discontented that some means of changing conditions were essential to national efficiency, if not to national preservation.

In Ireland the purchase of landed estates and the subdividing and selling to tenants was forced on the government as the only means of stopping ruinous emigration and dangerous political agitation. In Denmark estates were subdivided to provide for the surplus farm population and to prevent a costly exodus to other countries. In central Italy discontent with tenant conditions on feudal estates had caused large areas to be practically depopulated. Cattle were being pastured where land was formerly intensively cultivated. The result has been the evolution of a system, which, while it varies somewhat in detail, has certain essential features common to all these countries.

ESSENTIAL FEATURES OF SYSTEMS

Small initial payments. The first of these essentials is a provision for enabling farmers to enter into possession of land with only a nominal payment, thus leaving the greater part of their capital available to pay for improvements and equipment.

Organized construction of farm improvements. The second is the creation of an organization, either state or private, to make the necessary improvements, such as houses, stables, etc., leveling and ditching irrigated land, and providing practical superintendence over the farming operations of beginners to prevent costly delays and mistakes.

Long-time payments for land and improvements. The third is making the period of payments long enough to enable the money to be earned out of the soil, and having the payments amortized, that is, in small amounts paid annually or semiannually rather than in a lump sum; also securing for the settler, usually through the use of the state's credit, loans of money needed for improvements at low rates of interest.

Practical advice and supervision for beginners. The fourth is the employment of capable business men fully informed regarding prices of farm equipment and farming operations in the locality to give advice to inexperienced beginners or farmers from other sections of the country who do not know what crops to plant or when or how they should be cultivated.

This local director of a colony can be of great service in bringing about cooperative arrangements in buying and selling. It is part of his duty to watch the operations of colonists so as to be able to inform those who are responsible for extending credit which colonists are industrious and trying to succeed and which are idle and impractical. Such supervision is an essential feature of any system which gives generous personal credit.

This state-aided settlement has everywhere been remarkably successful. It was inaugurated to enable men who had industry and thrift, and little else, to become landowners. At the outset men predicted that it would entail heavy costs to the taxpayers. But, on the contrary, the conditions of payment have been so well adjusted to the profits of agriculture that in nearly all countries state-aided settlements have been self-supporting, and in some cases they have earned a profit. They have, moreover, revolutionized rural conditions. The statements of the Canadian Commission about the effects of the New Zealand system on rural life indicate equally well the effects of the systems of Ireland, Denmark, Germany, and practically all the other countries in which state aid in land settlement is in practice. The statements of the commission follow:

“With money available on terms suitable to the industry, the farmers have built better houses or remodeled their old ones; brought a large acreage of land under cultivation that would otherwise be lying idle; have bought and kept better live stock; have bought and used more labor-saving machinery on the farms and in the houses; have erected elevated tanks and windmills; have piped water to their dwellings and to their outbuildings; have irrigation for their vegetable and flower gardens around the houses; and have increased their dairy herds. They keep more sheep and pigs and have so largely increased the revenue from their farms that they are able to meet the payments on the mortgages and to adopt a higher standard of living, and a better one. Throughout the country a higher and better civilization is gradually being evolved: the young men and women who are growing up are happy and contented to remain at home on the farms, and find ample time and opportunity for recreation and entertainment of a kind more wholesome and elevating than can be obtained in the cities.”

It is impossible for us to ignore the importance of this evolution and unwise for us to disregard the reforms which have worked so well elsewhere. Furthermore, the effect of reforms in other countries is already manifest here. The number of desirable immigrants to the United States is being restricted. Settlers are being attracted from the United States to other countries.

STATE-AIDED LAND SETTLEMENT IN OTHER COUNTRIES

The following brief outline will serve to give an idea of the essential features of different state systems:

Ireland. In Ireland 9,000,000 acres of land have been purchased by the British Government since 1903. After the purchase this land was subdivided into small farms on which the necessary houses and other improvements were erected. These ready-made farms were then sold, mainly to former tenants, at an average price of about \$50 an acre, the buyer to have sixty-eight years in which to pay for the farm and the improvements, with $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent interest on deferred payments. The report of the Industrial Relations Commission speaks as follows of the transformation resulting in Ireland from the state aid policy:

“For many generations Ireland was one of the most distressed countries in the world. All of its evils were due primarily to absentee landlords and farm tenants. But within the last decade a wonderful change has taken place in the social and economic condition of the Irish peasant, brought about by the enactment by parliament of what has since become known as the Irish land bill. This act created a royal commission, with power to appraise the large Irish land estates owned by absentee landlords, at their real and not at their speculative value, to buy them in the name of the government at the appraised value, plus 12 per cent bonus, to cut them up into small parcels, to sell them to worthy farm tenants, giving some seventy years time in which to make small annual payments on the amortization plan, the deferred payments bearing but 3 per cent interest. In addition to this, the government made personal loans to peasants sufficient to cover the cost of stock and farm implements, also payable in small annual installments bearing a minimum rate of interest. The government further furnished the various farm districts with farm advisers, trained graduates from agricultural colleges, who act as friend, adviser, and scientific farm instructor to the peasants. Within a decade the wretched and more or less lawbreaking farm tenant has been converted into an industrious, progressive and law-abiding landed proprietor; in fact, he has become so law-abiding that many jails in the farming districts, formerly filled with agrarian criminals, have been converted into public schools.”

England and Scotland. Just prior to the outbreak of the present war, the government of Great Britain had agreed to provide a land settlement policy for Scotland similar to that now operating in Ireland. Since the war began a parliamentary commission has been studying the subject in England with a view to providing, by public purchase and subdivision, farm lands for returning soldiers, these lands to be sold to soldiers on long-time terms with amortized payments and with low rates of interest.

Already much has been done in England to provide farms for tenants under the Small Holdings Act passed in 1908. Under this act estates are being purchased by the county councils, subdivided into small farms, and sold or rented to poor people. These farms are first improved by the erection of houses and other farm conveniences and then sold at a slight increase on the purchase price.

Settlers are given from thirty to fifty years time with interest on deferred payments at 4 per cent.

The significant fact is the price at which the government buys this land. In England the average price has been $160 an acre; in Wales $105 an acre. For $150 an acre highly improved farms are being bought privately within thirty miles of the great retail markets of London.

Denmark. In 1899 the Danish Government, to prevent further and ruinous emigration, began buying and subdividing large estates and selling them to those of its people who had the necessary evidences of character and farming experience and who were able to pay one-tenth the cost of the land and improvements. The government, according to the last statistics available, has bought this land at an average price of $71.65 an acre. The settler is given from fifty to seventy-five years in which to repay this price, with an interest rate of from 3 to 4 per cent; and in some instances there is to be no payment of interest for the first five years.

In recent years there has been much private subdivision, carried on under public supervision. Associations formed for this purpose buy large farms and then subdivide and sell them to settlers at prices approved by the government, which guarantees loans made by land banks to assist buyers to complete their payments. The average purchase price of land so bought on the islands was $102.04 and on the mainland $61.15 an acre.

Germany. Beginning in 1886, the German Government entered on a state system of colonization which today represents one of the greatest agrarian reforms of that empire. It was inaugurated in the face of bitter opposition from the large land-holders. They saw their political prestige menaced by a movement that was to change a society having a landed aristocracy at one end of the scale and a poverty-stricken, discontented peasantry at the other into a society made up principally of a middle class.

Land settlement in Germany is now being carried on by two different authorities. The first is the Home Colonization Commission created to increase the number of German farmers in east Prussia and Poland. The other is a combination of state and local authorities which promotes and manages land subdivision and settlement in all parts of the empire. The local members of these associations usually include representatives of the local government and of the rural credit banks. One-half of the funds for these associations is contributed by the state and the other half by the local authorities. For the first of these organizations the government has provided $214,000,000, the greater part since 1909. With it the Home Colonization Commission has bought and subdivided lands and financed settlers on more than a million acres in five provinces of the empire.

Colonization under a combination of local and state authorities is a recent development, the law concerning it having been passed in 1911 and amended in 1913. A great deal has been done, however, especially in providing homes for farm laborers.

At first the tendency was to buy land remote from markets and not cultivated to the best advantage. But since 1909 the demand for farms and the benefits derived from them has led to the buying of highly-improved estates. The tendency now seems to be to continue this until tenant farming in Germany is practically abolished, and also until all the estates of any considerable size have been subdivided.

When the Home Colonization Commission purchases an estate it keeps it two years before offering it to settlers. That time is used to carry out the improvements which can best be made before settlement. These include macadamized roads, drainage works, the manuring and the seeding of farms, and in some cases systems of irrigation. The land is cultivated in order to bring it into a condition in which it will be profitable to the settler. The subdivisions include farms varying in size from twelve to sixty-five acres and homes for farm laborers varying in area from one and a half to five acres. If estates have large groups of buildings, these are made a sort of civic centers where are found blacksmith shops, stores, schools, and churches.

Settlers are given the services of expert advisers. Seed for the first year is furnished and where it is desired houses are built. These houses cost from $300 to $1,000. The settler is expected to have money enough to pay for house, seed, and equipment, but if he lacks this and is satisfactory in other respects aid in securing these is supplied. The average expenditure for seed, tools, and improvements, aside from the house, is about $500 for each farm.

At first these farms were leased to settlers. This was not a success. Then settlers were allowed to buy them outright, or to pay for them as soon as possible. This also was unsatisfactory, because many of the settlers were disposed to speculate and sell out whenever a profit could be secured. Under the present system the settler is not required to make any cash payment on the land but has it for fifty years with an annual payment of $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent interest on the total cost. He must also meet the requirements of the state regarding cultivation and keeping up improvements, which are closely looked after. At the end of this fifty-year period the payments on the land begin. The average cost of land bought and subdivided by the Home Colonization Commission has been about \$95 an acre. The average cost under the local boards, as far as ascertained, has been about \$110 an acre.

Italy. The commission has been unable to get the latest reports on the land settlement operations of the Italian Government or of the several associations, operating under government direction, which carry on this business on a nonprofit seeking basis. However, such valuable results have been obtained from state loans for making farm improvements, and carrying out irrigation and drainage plans that such loans have now become a permanent state policy. The state loan is made for a period of seventy-five years with interest at $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.

Russia. In no other country has systematic state colonization reached the magnitude that it has attained in recent years in Russia.

In Russia Between 1906 and 1910 the Peasants' Land Bank, which has an annual government subsidy of $2,575,000, bought, subdivided and sold to settlers 4,041,789 acres for $92,700,000, or about $23 an acre. The maximum size of these farms is fifty-seven acres. Loans are made up to 90 per cent of the value of the land with interest at 4 per cent and a payment period varying from thirteen to fifty-five years. This is in addition to the immense colonization operations of the government in Siberia where, as stated in Herrick's work on rural credits, "Hundreds upon hundreds of thousands of Russian farmers have acquired millions of acres, worth billions of dollars, by means of money and credit facilities supplied by the government." It is stated that Russia is now making preparations to inaugurate, at the close of the present war, the most liberal and comprehensive system of state aid in land settlement yet undertaken by any country.

New Zealand. The reasons for colonization in New Zealand are not unlike those in California. A country of 66,000,000 acres, about two-thirds the area of California, has a population of a little over 1,000,000, or about one-third that of this state. In order to bring about a more rapid development of the unoccupied land, New Zealand adopted a system of issuing bonds for long periods of years, selling these bonds in London, and lending the money to farmers for the purpose of buying land and making improvements on it. In the eight years from 1906 to 1914, the government loaned \$72,726,800. The loans are made at $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent interest for terms of payment varying from twenty to thirty-six years. Up to 60 per cent of the value of the property may be borrowed if the settler can give first mortgage security, or 60 per cent of his equity in the property if it is a leasehold.

There are wide variations in land prices in New Zealand, due to differences in location and improvements. Generally speaking, however, land prices in New Zealand are high, relatively much higher than in Europe.

The Australian States. The most fruitful field for study of land settlement operations is, however, the six Australian states. Especially is this true with respect to California, as the southern half of the continent has climate, products, and market conditions very similar to ours. The resemblance goes farther. The two countries are peopled by the same race, and they have the same habits, the same social and political ideals, and very similar economic conditions.

In the two most highly developed states of Australia, Victoria and New South Wales, there is another resemblance. There, as in California, the early land policies were unwise and profligate. Land was given away without regard to the needs and the rights of future generations. Great landed estates were created until, as pastoral pursuits gave way to cultivation, and especially to intensive cultivation, there developed an agriculture in which nonresident ownership and tenant farming were the dominating features. This was not regarded as desirable. It led to the inauguration of the present system of closer settlement.

The plan of this system was to incorporate the following ideas:

1. Have the area of land large enough to give a living income for a settler and family.

2. Estimate in advance the capital needed to improve and equip that area and fix the proportion to be supplied by the settler and terms of borrowing the remainder.

3. Provide organized direction in the improvement of farms in order that the settler may earn a living in the least time and with the least expense.

The systems now in operation in Victoria and New South Wales are alike in essential features, the only difference between them being the nature of the land title. In New South Wales the settler acquires only a perpetual lease, while in Victoria he acquires a freehold title. But in Victoria the title to the land does not pass to the settler for twelve years and can then only be acquired or held by an actual resident. This prevents speculators from acquiring land.

As the working details of the system in operation in these states are likely to receive increasing attention here, those of Victoria are given in full.

GENERAL CONDITIONS GOVERNING THE SALE OF CLOSER SETTLEMENT LANDS IN VICTORIA, AUSTRALIA

1. "Applicants, male or female, must be over the age of eighteen years.
2. "The maximum value of land which may be held by one lessee is $12,000, except in the case of an allotment where a valuable homestead is erected, when the value of the land may be increased to $19,200.

Agricultural Laborers' Allotment to $1,680.

3. "Allotments are sold under a conditional purchase lease having a term of 31½ years. Applicants are required to lodge a deposit equal to 3 per cent of the capital value of the land applied for, together with $6.00 lease and registration fees. In the event of an application being unsuccessful, all money lodged, less the registration fee of $1.20, is returned.
4. "Residence upon the allotment, or upon the estate of which the allotment forms a part, or upon land adjoining the estate and not separated from it by more than a road or watercourse, is compulsory for eight months in each year, in the case of a farm holding. In the cases of agricultural laborer's and workmen's allotments, residence for eight months in each year is also compulsory, and each lessee by himself or his family must reside on his own allotment.
5. "Upon a farm allotment it is a condition of the lease that permanent and substantial improvements to an amount equivalent to 6 per cent of the capital value of the land shall be effected by lessee before the end of the first year. Before the end of the third year, the value of the improvements must be increased to 10 per cent, and by the end of the sixth year to a total value of 20 per cent of the capital value of the land. Upon an agricultural laborer's allotment a substantial dwelling to the value at least of $144 must be erected by the end of the first year, and the boundaries of the allotment must be securely fenced by the end of the second year.

6. "The Crown grant (freehold title) may be obtained at the end of any half-year after the first twelve years of the lease have expired on payment of the balance of the purchase money. Perpetual residence by the lessee or occupier for the time being is required under the Crown grant.
7. "The Closer Settlement Acts provide that where through unforeseen circumstances settlers can not meet installments punctually, they may obtain temporary suspension thereof up to 60 per cent of the security value of the permanent and substantial improvements effected by them, or an advance up to the same amount, provided the installments are paid to date, may be obtained for a fixed period in order to enable them to continue working and further improve their allotments. All advances or suspensions carry an interest charge of 5 per cent per annum upon the amount suspended or advanced. In cases where the amount of arrears exceeds the security value of the improvements, the settler is required to give a lien on his crop or a stock mortgage as further security until the arrears are extinguished or reduced to within the security value of the improvements. The maximum advance or suspension which may be made to a settler on a farm allotment on account of improvements effected within the first six years of his lease is $2,400. If the lease has been in existence over six years, and the certificates of compliance with the conditions of the lease have been obtained, the board may increase the advance by an amount up to 60 per cent of the principal which has been repaid, the total advance not to exceed $4,000."

PREPARATION OF LAND FOR IRRIGATION

"The state renders the following assistance to settlers in the grading of land:

1. It rents settlers grading tools at the nominal charge of 60 cents a day, thus saving the settler a large expenditure in these implements.
2. It furnishes at a nominal cost contour plans showing the direction of the slopes, thus enabling the settler to tell how his land should be graded.
3. It grades a part or the entire farm in advance of settlement, and adds the cost of this to the price of the land."

The settler, therefore, has the option of either doing his own work or of taking a block where a part of the work has already been done.

Closer Settlement in Victoria. Under this act there have been purchased in Victoria 567,687 acres of land, the purchase price being about $37 an acre. About 15 per cent of the purchase price was necessary to cover expenses of supervision and settlement. The average price to settlers of the Closer Settlement lands has been about $45 an acre. The land so bought has been disposed of as follows: 500,819 acres in farm allotments, 8,829 acres as agricultural laborers' allotments; 4,112 settlers have secured farms under this state act.

Closer Settlement in the Commonwealth. Between 1901 and 1914 the six Australian states purchased and subdivided 3,056,957 acres, for which $55,243,125 were paid, or about $18 an acre. In all of the states provisions are made to assist settlers to build homes and effect improvements needed to bring the land fully and promptly under cultivation. In the five-year period from 1909 to 1914 these six states loaned to farmers to make improvements and buy equipment $68,029,500. This has been done without any cost to the general taxpayer, as the interest paid by the farmers was greater than the interest paid by the state; and the farmers have met both payments of principal and interest, so that there has been an accumulated profit of $1,233,370.

Brazil. In Brazil the federal government cooperates with the state governments, with the transportation companies, and with individuals in giving aid to settlers. The state government, with which In Brazil the federal government has arrangements, will provide colonists with tools and seed. The farms, when near railroads, do not exceed 62 acres. If they are distant from transportation, they may be 125 acres in extent.

The government will, when requested, build good and sanitary houses, but immigrants who desire to erect houses at their own expense and to their own taste can do so. Improved farms will be sold either for cash or payments in installments. Where cash is paid a definite title is given immediately; where payments are amortized, title is given when payments have been completed. Those who purchase farms on the installment plan may pay off any part of the debt before the final date, and if this is done a rebate of 12 per cent is given on the installments paid in advance.

For the first six months after their arrival, or until they harvest and sell their first crop, colonists coming from other countries may when necessary obtain loans to purchase food for their families and for the first year they receive medical attendance and medicine free of charge. The land, the improvements, and such aid as is not given free of charge are all lumped together in the debt for the land. The amortized payments for the land begin not later than the end of the second year, and the period for completing payments is five years when the lands are near railroads, and eight years when distant from them.

In the state of San Paulo the price of land varies from $.60 to $4.50 an acre and the annual payments vary from $30 to $90. In 1914, the year after state aid began, there were 1,600 applications for homesteads from the city of San Francisco. Settlement has been interrupted by the war, but it is expected to be active when the war ceases.

Venezuela. The colonization act of Venezuela was passed in 1912. Immigrants acceptable under this act are individuals of the European race, persons under sixty years of age having good habits and health and good moral character. The government officials are authorized to enter into arrangements with colonists to pay their expenses to the country and to see that they are sent free of cost to their farms. To the first hundred families who come under this act in each section of the country there are allotted 62 acres and 25 acres additional for each son over ten years of age. After the first one hundred families the rest of the land will be sold to colonists for eight cents an acre, payable in ten annual installments, the first payment to begin at the end of the first year. The first one hundred families are given houses without rent for one year, tools, animals for cultivation, all the seed and live stock and food needed for six months in the hot parts of the country and for a year in the cold parts, and all necessary material for the construction of a house.

All of the things so supplied to the settler must be repaid to the government in five annual payments, which must be begun at the end of the third year, making the time of payment eight years. The government supplies food and lodging for the colonists from the time they arrive in the country until they are located on their farms.

Uruguay. A bill for the promotion of land settlement in Uruguay is now before the legislature of that country. It has the support of the government, and it is believed it will pass. It appropriates $500,000 to be used in purchasing and subdividing land. To furnish this money bonds are to be sold drawing interest at 5 per cent. The homesteads will be sold for cash or in installments covering a period of thirty years. The price of these subdivisions is fixed to cover the cost of land and expenses of building roadways, etc., so that returns from the land will reimburse the state for the expense incurred. The $500,000 is intended to be a revolving fund, and as settlers pay for their land new land is to be bought.

No settler can buy more than one farm, but the size of these farms is not fixed in the act, that being left to the discretion of the government commission, which includes the president and the secretary of Industry and Labor. The farms are to be free of taxes for ten years and exempt from judgment during the first year of possession.

FEATURES OF DEVELOPMENT WHICH REQUIRE ATTENTION

No other part of America can provide so attractive rural life as the Rural home coast and foothill sections of California. The owner of colonies a few acres can live out of doors, can have green lawns, flowers, fruits, and vegetables of his own growing throughout the entire year.

To the charm and the healthfulness of this kind of home life there is added an environment that is altogether unique in its opportunities and attractions. The foothills and the valleys are the places for homes. The mountains and sea are close at hand for occasional visits. Rural home colonies of educated, refined people who love outdoor life are a natural sequence of our system of good roads, good schools, and the literary and artistic life of our cities. Home colonies ought to be laid out by the best landscape engineers; and their locations and their advantages should be made widely known. Much has been done in home colonization in southern California. But the greatest fields for expansion are in the beautiful coast hills and valleys of northern and central California and along the foothill slopes of the Sierras. Marin, Sonoma, San Mateo, Santa Clara and Monterey counties ought to rival southern France in the number and the attractiveness of their rural homes and gardens.

It must be made clear, however, that such homes afford not an opportunity to make money, but an opportunity for those who have money to get the most out of life. The aim should be to create the best conditions of life for those who have an assured income, although it need not be a large one. Thousands of people in the East and the Middle West having no business ties could live in California as conveniently as elsewhere, and could get infinitely more out of life here than is possible in sections of the country where a rigorous climate restricts the freedom of outdoor life.

Colonies for such persons would bring about one thing that is desirable in this state: a clear-cut distinction in colonization enterprises between residence values and productive values. The literature of several colonies indicates that social advantages and the residence value of homes are important features of their plans; but unfortunately this fact is not made clear in the hopes held out to settlers. An unfortunate example of this kind of colonization is the Little Landers colonies in which prospects were held out of an attractive social life based on the income which could be derived from a single acre of land. Many oversanguine, inexperienced settlers left permanent employment to take up residence in these colonies, believing that the new life would be independent and easy. They found, on the contrary, that the income was meager and the work hard. Disillusionment and discontent followed. These colonies would have been a success if only colonists having an outside income of at least $500 a year had been accepted. With food and clothes assured, all the other anticipations would have been realized.

In schemes of this character where the capital of settlers is limited the difference between the price at which land is sold before subdivision and that at which it is sold to settlers should be small. In the Little Landers colonies, on the contrary, the difference between the two prices was very great. What is needed is some plan for colonies of this character which will lessen the overhead cost.

There is also need of a more clear-cut distinction between residence and income values. Too often these are hopelessly confused. The Atascadero Colony is an illustration of this. Here land which cost less than $40 an acre is being sold to settlers in from one to ten acre tracts at from $250 to $1,000 an acre. These prices are believed to be higher than productive values warrant. However, the company is expending large sums of money in the building of roads, creating a civic center, planting and cultivating orchards for two years and these are desirable features for those who are able to pay for them. But the advertisements should make this clear and should not exaggerate the income or profits to be derived from cultivation in an attempt to make this alone justify the prices asked.

While it is not believed that excessive prices should be charged for land in residence colonies, the evils of inflated prices are not so great there as in the colonies for people of limited means who expect to earn their living out of the soil. In such colonies any marked difference between the productive value of the land and the price at which it is sold constitutes an economic wrong because it deprives settlers of a fair interest on their investment.

The commission and the state are indebted to Professor R. L. Adams of the University of California and Professor M. S. Wildman of Stanford for their investigation of this subject, which was made without charge for services, at the request of the State Commission of Immigration and Housing and the Colonization Commission.

NEED FOR A DETERMINATION OF WHAT IS A LIVING AREA

One of the needs of colonization in this state is a comprehensive investigation of the returns from farms, vineyards, and orchards; of the expenses of cultivation and the cost of supporting a family, so that approximate guides can be furnished as to the acreage of land required for a living area under different kinds of cultivation. Subdivisions of land unfit for market gardening and remote from cities into one-acre, five-acre and ten-acre tracts have been sold as living areas. As stated in the testimony of Judge Chipman and others, they have been sold to laborers and clerks in cities who believed that they were making provision for their old age. Washerwomen, clerks, artisans, and school-teachers are struggling to pay for these little patches of land which often are so located that they could not be made to provide a living income. Because of this they have an uncertain selling value.

The widely-advertised statement that in California a comfortable living can be made for a family from an acre of land shows ignorance of agricultural possibilities or an inexcusable disregard of agricultural facts. The density of population which a family to an acre would create has never been achieved elsewhere. Irrigated Egypt, where living expenses have been reduced to the lowest limit, where the land is unsurpassed in fertility, and where it is tilled by the most industrious people in the world, does not support a family to the acre. It is, therefore, not to be expected that unskilled men on land not especially fertile can work this miracle in California.

There is enough land in California unused and uncultivated to render it unnecessary to crowd people in this fashion. This state needs plans which will provide a more generous social life and the kind of agriculture and horticulture which will give the largest returns for the worker's labor. And we need also the help which patient scientific study can give us in planning this kind of development.

HOW TO ENCOURAGE YOUNG PEOPLE TO BECOME FARMERS

One of the problems of California, as of the world, is to keep intelligent, progressive young people on the farm. In recent years the industries of the city have offered so many opportunities for industrious and enterprising young people that there is a strong temptation for the young men and women trained in our agricultural colleges and high schools to accept salaried positions and thus be drawn away from rural life.

The rising price of land increases this tendency because only those who have accumulated considerable money can attempt to purchase farms, especially under the terms on which land is usually sold. This forces farmers' sons and daughters, who have a real love for farm life, to work for wages, and for this there are far better opportunities in the cities. The statistics gathered in this investigation show that the majority of settlers now buying farms in California are middle-aged men who have accumulated money elsewhere or in other occupations.

If, however, young people were given an opportunity to begin life on a farm of their own, so that they could feel that their future was secure and if they wanted to marry they could do so with safety, if they were given assurance that they would have time enough to earn the price of the farm out of the soil, present conditions would be entirely reversed. Then the opportunity for the enterprising and ambitious would be in the country, especially for those who had a liking for farm life and an understanding of what it required. The state colonization systems of Denmark and Australia have made special provision for young men and the large percentage of colonists under thirty years of age is a noteworthy feature of their closer settlements. Later on in this report a recommendation for carrying out a similar policy here will be made.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR DIVERSIFIED AGRICULTURE

Another need of California is a large extension of diversified farming and a lessened tendency toward single crops. No section of this country surpasses California as a place to breed blooded live stock. The winning of the Grand Championship and Reserve Championship at the International Live Stock Show at Chicago this year by two steers bred and fed in California has demonstrated to the world the accuracy of this statement. The opportunity to grow green feed the year round, the absence of extremes of heat and cold, are all favorable conditions. We ought to be, in the breeding of fine stock, the source for the United States and South America that England has long been for the world. We believe that this result can be achieved if stockbreeding is given systematic encouragement.

PART V

CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

The colonization and development of the unpeopled farm lands of California is of such importance to all the people of the state that it should not be left to the separate action of landowners, but should be shaped in part by the carefully thought out purposeful action of all the people. This means that the state should have a land settlement policy and deal with this matter as a public problem.

The progress being made by other nations in improving agricultural methods, in uplifting agricultural workers and in affording all who are fitted for it by industry and character, the opportunity to enjoy landed independence has a lesson for this country which ought not be ignored. Such progress is making other countries better places to live in, increasing their industrial efficiency and their political and social strength, and making them dangerous commercial competitors. We do not believe that this country will be content to let older nations surpass us in those things which contribute to the welfare of the rural masses. Our immense unpeopled estates give us an opportunity to surpass all European countries except Russia in the extent of rural development. Each of these estates is a blank leaf on which we may write whatever record we choose.

We may perpetuate a selfish and short-sighted individualism. We may try to make all we can out of the gifts of nature. We may charge everyone who comes here all that can be collected for the sunshine, scenery, society, and soil. We may, by extending alien tenantry and ignoring the social needs of farm labor, create slums in the country while we collect high rents.

Or by regarding colonization and the creation of rural communities as a trust, we may create agricultural colonies filled with people who will make this a state where the best people in this country will want to live. We may only do this, however, if the diversion of our rivers, the selection of land for colonies, and the methods of development are planned and directed by the best thought and intelligence of the time. We shall achieve nothing by leaving these things to blind chance.

In this report attention has been called to undesirable conditions only when it was necessary to show the manner and degree in which private unregulated colonization has failed and the need for displacing it by something wiser and better.

STATE SUPERVISION OF SETTLEMENT

It is believed that every interest which needs consideration would be benefited by providing for state supervision of colonization. There is some difficulty in accomplishing this because it ought not to embrace ordinary sales of land from one person to another, but only include those enterprises which assume sufficient magnitude to have public importance and in which settlers who are unacquainted with local conditions are sought from the outside or from a particular neighborhood. Such supervision should aim to accomplish the following results:

1. To provide that adequate attention has been given to water supplies and drainage in irrigated areas.
2. That the land is suited to the purposes for which it is being sold.
3. That there is no misrepresentation in the advertising.

It should also aim to aid those engaged in colonization by pointing out features in the plan they are following which are likely to lead to Aim and result of failure. Such state supervision would in no way state supervision hamper development, but by preventing misrepresentation and giving new colonization enterprises the benefit of a wider experience would protect them from mistakes and also safeguard the settler.

It would promote development by strengthening confidence in our advertising statements abroad, but it will not of itself lead to the adoption of the best features of the land settlement systems of other countries. Private companies will not give the terms of Denmark, Germany, or Australia until it has been demonstrated here that such terms can be given with safety. They will not provide homes for farm laborers until shown that these homes will be paid for and be a community asset. No country has adopted modern settlement methods until its government took the initiative and showed the value of them. We can not expect California to be an exception.

In the past settlers and land settlement have been helped by the large increase in land prices which accompanied development. This made More generous it possible to borrow money for improvements or to personal credit sell a part of the original purchase for nearly the first system necessary cost of the whole area. This aid can not be relied upon in the future and we must replace it by a more generous personal credit system and by introducing more efficient and cheaper methods of preparing farms for intensive cultivation.

The experience of other countries and of some colonization enterprises in this country indicates that it is cheaper for an organization having ample capital to level and seed the land and finance the building of houses than to leave the work to the individual settler.

The experience of other countries is to the effect that a longer time in which to pay for farms than has been given in California is desirable.

Longer terms The tendency in Canada is to make the payment period for payment not less than twenty years. In European countries it necessary varies from thirty to seventy-five years.

The following suggestions are made as to the future financing of settlers in California:

1. Give twenty to thirty years' time in which to pay for land.
2. After the initial payment require no further payment on principal for the first two years, but stipulate in the selling contract the character of the improvements which must be made.
3. Have the payments of land amortized and the amount of the annual or semiannual payments equal throughout the entire period.

It also seems desirable that the state should aid colonization by establishing one or more offices in the state where information regarding land in approved colony enterprises could be obtained.

The state might also, as West Virginia is now doing, distribute printed lists of land in enterprises that are approved, giving the conditions of settlement and the kind of crops which might be grown.

COLONIZATION BY THE STATE

It is believed that over a considerable part of this country the different states will soon have joined other enlightened countries in making colonization a public matter. In the East it will be done to lessen tenant farming and improve agricultural practices; in the West as the best method of rapidly settling unoccupied and uncultivated land.

The tendency towards the adoption of this policy in the West is shown by the decision of the United States Reclamation Service to level and improve farms before offering them for settlement; in the introductions and hearings on the Crosser Bill, which, if enacted, will go farther than even Denmark and Germany in financing settlers on public lands; and in the report of the Cooperative Land Settlement Board in Wyoming, which has recommended that the federal government build irrigation works and that the state subdivide the land, select the settlers and finance them in making their necessary improvements. It is understood that this report has the support of the state authorities in Wyoming and that legislation to carry it into effect is being framed.

The immense area of land in the large estates of California would make progress too slow if it depended entirely on action by the state, but the state can do more than any other single influence to promote the adoption of right policies by making a demonstration in colonization for the purpose of showing how superior carefully thought out development is to that where only local or immediate benefits are considered.

The state which blazes the trail in scientific colonization will secure a prominence and establish a moral leadership that will be of great value in attracting desirable settlers. No state has more to gain from such leadership than has California. A concrete working example in this state of the methods and policies which have transformed rural life and immensely improved agricultural practices in Denmark, Ireland, Germany, Australia, and New Zealand would do more than any other single influence to insure future agricultural progress along right lines. In no other way can the owners of large estates be so effectively shown what to do and what to avoid. In no other way can the present tendency to create here a great alien land tenantry be more certainly checked. If the state were to purchase, subdivide, and settle 10,000 acres, its action would be watched by the whole world. It is entirely feasible to make this educational demonstration commercially profitable. It can be made to pay its way, so as to cost the taxpayer nothing. Such result has been achieved in the countries whose state systems have been held up as examples; there is no reason to doubt our ability to be equally efficient and successful.

DEMONSTRATION SHOULD BE ON A COMMERCIAL SCALE

An area of about 10,000 acres is suggested, because this area can be more economically and effectively managed than a smaller one; and its results would be of more general value. A larger area is not advised because of the cost.

Out of such an area there would have to be deducted, let us say, 300 acres for roads, canals, schoolhouses, and recreation grounds; 100 acres for farm laborers' allotments and a few small orchards and gardens. This would leave 9,600 acres, or enough for about two hundred farms varying in size from 20 to 100 acres.

If these two hundred farms were all settled by alert, ambitious young men and women, there would be a community that would be to agriculture in California what the Greeley Colony was to irrigated farming in Colorado. The value of this demonstration would be increased by restricting settlement to qualified applicants between the ages of eighteen and thirty, men of experience and training, no one to be eligible who owns farm land elsewhere in the state, nor who has not had at least one year's farming experience, and who can not within six months become an actual resident and cultivator of his farm.

In planning colonies the state should follow the main working features of the plans which have succeeded best elsewhere. We believe that if the plans included the following the results would be entirely satisfactory:

The land to be sold on thirty-six years' time, with an initial cash payment of 5 per cent, with interest payments of $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent and amortized annual payments of principal of $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent beginning at the end of the fourth year, the settler to pay for his land and have a clear title in the payment period by paying $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent on the cost the first four years and 6 per cent on the cost the remaining thirty-two years. Each settler should be required to have capital enough to pay, in cash, one-fourth the cost of all improvements made by the state; payment of the remainder of the cost of improvements to be amortized and bear the same interest as the payments on land. With these terms of payment for land and improvements it is believed that existing financial institutions can give whatever credit is necessary in buying equipment, including dairy cows.

The selection of colonists should be entrusted to a board, the subsequent business management to be in the hands of a single competent superintendent reporting to this board. The State
The features of a state colony Agricultural College should make systematic provision for giving advice and information regarding farm management and cultivation. The superintendent would give advice about buying live stock and equipping farms. The state should, by contract, build houses, level land for irrigation or loan money to settlers on insurable improvements carried out under the direction and to the satisfaction of the authorities in control, a conservative maximum limit to be fixed.

The prices of farms after subdivision should be so adjusted as to pay for land lost in roads and canals, also interest on the cost of the land between time of subdivision and time of settlement and all other incidental expenses. In Australia 15 per cent was sufficient to cover the above items.

The selection of the land should be entrusted to an expert committee, the purpose being not to enhance or depress prices, but to buy land at its productive value. If this were understood, it would be a guarantee to settlers that they were getting their money's worth. The character of various state commissions shows that there will be no difficulty in the appointment of one in whom the public would have implicit confidence, and who would see that a price was paid for land which would be fair to landowners and settlers alike. The land might be paid for with state bonds bearing, say 4 per cent interest, or bought under a contract by which the landowner would give deeds direct to the settler, the state guaranteeing his payments and having the right to complete the purchase and enter into full ownership at any time deemed advisable. Existing state authorities could plan the works for a water supply, subdivide the area and fix the size of farms. In financing the settlers the amount of capital to be provided can be greatly reduced by making full use of the loaning possibilities of the Federal Farm Loan Act.

These departures from the methods and policies under which the state has reached its present wealth and greatness are in accordance with the changing tendencies of our time. Before the State settlement beginning of the present war and more rapidly since in accord with its beginning the leading nations of the world are tendency organizing all their resources and their industries, so of our time as to eliminate waste, promote efficiency and give the broadest possible diffusion of opportunities. Making settlement a public matter and using the wisdom and experience of the world in shaping our methods and policies will not only attract people here, but will do more to make California a desirable place to live in and secure a better use of our resources than can be accomplished in any other way.

Respectfully submitted.
